"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXXI

For an istant, Devona didn't know whether to laugh or cry. Release from the terrors that had gripped her for the past hours left her trembling and close to hysteria herself.

"Thank heaven, Dale," she said, as he crossed the room toward her, gun still leveled, face still stony. "You were just in time."

"So I see," he said, curtly. "You are coming with me in my car so I'll dispense with the formality of handcuffs."

She stared at him. Over his shoulder she saw the police officers busy fastening grimly efficient handcuffs on Macias, on the sobbing Freda. "What—do you mean?"

"I mean you're arrested. This, in case you didn't realize it is a raid."

"Arrested!" But of course. Dale would naturally jump to the conclusion that—

"But Dale. You're mistaken. I wasn't—"

Dale Is Skeptical

"Save it," he interrupted dryly. "Explain it in court."

"Dale—please don't be ridiculous. I'm not—I don't know—anything except—"

He raised a skeptical eyebrow. "No not anything except that a shipment had come in, and that it was to be delivered at a new hideout. And you went to No. 47 Front St. just for the ride, too, didn't you?"

"Please let me explain, Dale." She put a short rein on her rising temper. Losing her head now wouldn't help any.

"I'm sorry—not now. I haven't time. Though I admit I'm curious, Imagine my surprise to have you walk into the picture!"

His bitterness frightened her now more than anything else that had happend this wild unbelievable night. She had to make Dale believe in her. But how. Macias would never tell the truth. Not now that he was in a jam. Neither would the girl or Wong or any of the others. The Judge wouldn't believe them probably, even if they did.

"And now—if you'll just tell me where Macias hid the stuff" Dale was saying calmly.

Reveals One Secret

Devona hesitated. If she admitted she knew about the secret wall safe, Dale would be sure she was "in on this." But if she didn't—she'd be protecting a dangerous criminal. She had no choice, really.

"Good. I suppose you know the combination?"

Again she hesitated. But only for an instant. Then, with Dale's eyes loathing her, she walked to the blotchy painting of the Monterey pines, rubbed the tip of her finger along the faked signature, felt the rough canvas move back under her touch.

"Very tricky," Dale murmured, then turned to one of the officers. "Harry, you count the boxes. Should be 48 in all."

"All here," Harry reported after a moment.

"Good. Let's go now."

"Step along there." One of the officers snapped as Macias, his dark eyes full of hatred and fear, hesitated.

Dale nudged his former friend impersonally. "Do as you are told, Macias. We've got some of the others down in the wagon already. Wong and Joe have talked—and plenty. The small fish that did slip through the net, we'll catch in due time. Your little game is up right now."

Off to Jail

A few moments later, down in front of the Louis Quatorze's impressive entrance, Macias and the others were herded into the patrol car.

Dale put Devona into the blue coupe beside himself.

"Where are we going?" she asked as he headed down town.

"To the City Jail."

"But — surely you aren't — I don't——"

"But surely I am and you are," he interrupted quietly. "You are under arrest. Charged with dope-running! Not pretty, is it?"

"You know I'm not a—what you said."

"No, I don't know it!" he contradicted flatly. "I know you've been employed by Jose Macias for a period of more than six months under an assumed name, without the knowledge or permission of your parent and guardian. I know that you were seen entering the house known to be the hideout of a gang of dope runners on the very night a shipment of heroin was to be received.

"I saw for myself that you returned—apparently quite willingly—to the apartments of the gang's boss at an, shall we say, unconventional hour of the morning, and that you were perfectly aware that you had in your possession at that time a box of the contraband goods.

"I also saw for myself that you were acquainted with the hiding place for that goods. Circumstantial evidence, all of it. But good. Isn't it?"

Unanswered Questions

"Please, Dale, listen," Devona begged. "I was anly trying to help you. I—quite by chance and good luck—stumbled onto clues that made me suspect Macias. Also by good luck, I received the telephone message about the shipment and the change of address. Macias didn't know I had seen or heard anything. He didn't know I was going to that house tonight. Or at least I thought so."

"How come he tailed your taxi then, dismissed it, waited for you."

"Well, he must have suspected——"

"How come he was so careful to bury his trail as he left No. 47?"

"—I don't know. He — I thought——"

"Oh—please, Dale."

"Did you think that whatever Macias paid you—or promised to pay you—would make up for marrying a poor man?"

"No—" sobbing now, uncontrollably— "I only—wanted to help—you."

"Thanks, awfully," he said dryly. "I can get along without that kind of help."

In Custody

Dale turned the car into an alley now. Stopped it with a jerk. "Well, here we are."

The City Hall was cold and gloomy as a tomb, and virtually deserted, except for the glum trio of prisoners, their captors and a few policemen who were on night duty.

Horrified, Devona realized that, since it was still only 4 o'clock of this interminable night, she was to be held in the city jail until court convened in the morning.

"Not—that," she gasped as Dale turned her over to a tired-faced matron.

"Sorry," he shrugged. "My very unpleasant duty. I'll inform your lucky fiance," he added, bitterly. "And see that you have an attorney in the morning."

Stubbornly fighting furious tears, Devona lifted her chin, her eyes blazing. "I suppose you know—I loathe you—for this."

"Yes, I suppose you do. Sorry. It's my job."

"Tal will never forgive you."

"I think he will—when he understands the circumstances. See you in the morning."

Facing the Facts

"That will certainly be something to look forward to," Devona flung at after him, lips curling with scorn—or was it weeping.

Actually, they didn't put Devona into a cell. That was Dale's influence, the matron told her as she led the way to a day-couch in her own quarters, and spread a shawl over Devona's slim, quivering body.

It was after 7 when the matron woke Devona. "I'm to take you to breakfast with me," she said, not unkindly. "Better slick yourself up a little."

Devona didn't see Dale again until just before court convened. He sent an attorney, an earnest young man called Dwyer, who talked with her for half an hour, questioning, requestioning until he'd learned her every thought, every suspicion could trace her every move for the last 24 hours.

"Your situation is unfortunate," he told her finally. "But not hopeless. The weakest part of your story is that you determined to pursue the evidence for Mr. Brasher yourself, secretly. I don't know that we can convince the court as to that. Otherwise, it should be easy. If you could just give me some more definite reason for keeping your activity secret?" He searched her face anxiously.

She Won't Tell Why

But Devona shook her head. "I've told you because I wanted to make sure I really had some evidence and not send Dale on a wild-goose chase."

"But you must have known that if this were really a shipment of heroin, you were in grave danger going alone?"

"Yes. I suppose I did. I really didn't think much about that."

The young attorney paced the matron's narrow sitting room nervously. "That's just it. A girl doesn't go deliberately into that part of town on an errand as dangerous as that without a compelling reason. I still feel——"

"That's the only reason. To help Dale convict Macias. I loathed Macias. I suspected him. I wanted to see him caught because—well—the city would be better off without him."

Young Dwyer glanced at her, half-smiling. As he gathered up his papers and stuffed them into a brief case, he nodded. "Well, we'll have to be satisfied with that."

"Exactly," Devona supplemented silently. She couldn't, wouldn't give the reason Dwyer probed for so persistently. Tell the court, tell all the world that she loved Dale Brasher, that she had hoped, foolishly, to prove that love by risking her life to help him get the thing he wanted most?

It not only sounded silly. It had been silly—the silliest thing she'd ever been guilty of in all her 19 years. Dale himself wouldn't believe it. Particularly as less than a week ago she'd looked him straight in the face and insisted she loved—his brother!

And if the Judge didn't believe that her blundering had been innocent, then — she drew a deep breath—she'd just have to take the consequences. A trial that would mean, probably, horrible publicity. And what would Tal say—think. Would he, too, believe her just money-hungry? Trying as Dale had accused her so bitterly, to compensate for the Brasher fortune with money that Macias paid!

He couldn't believe that, surely, at least Tal would stand by her.

CHAPTER XXXII

Talbot arrived just before court convened.

"Devona, darling," he cried and held out his arms to her. "What in the devil has happened?"

"Oh—Tal! I'm so—glad—you've come!"—and all the fine reserve she'd tried so valiantly to build up dissolved now at sight of Tal's anxious concern.

Between wrenching sobs, she told the whole wild story to the lapel of his tweed coat, felt his arms tighten around her comfortingly, understandingly.

"Gosh, honey, that was a big risk to take for Dale's sake. It was silly, sure. But not criminal. What's he thinking about that he's not tickled to death you wanted to help him so much? Great Scott! I'll tell that big boob——"

He kissed her quickly, pulled a big handkerchief from his pocket, dried her eyes. "Don't cry, sweetheart. I'll find Dale now and tell him——"

Dale Appears

"Tell him what?" Dale, appearing in the door now, demanded quietly.

"What I think of your upsetting Devona like this!" Tal raged furiously. "What's the big idea, any way. You know she's not guilty of anything. What do you want to drag her through all this——"

"I don't know anything of the kind," Dale said grimly. "I've only got the evidence. It's my duty to 'drag her into it' as you say."

"Dale, you're nuts."

"Maybe. But—we'll see what the Judge says. The case is about to be called now. Shall we go?"

Once proceedings began, Devona's confidence in the invulnerability of her innocence began to flag. Young Dwyer championed her earnestly, even brilliantly, but nothing could stop the snowballing chain of evidence. Nothing but her own clear conscience. Dwyer obviously wasn't too convinced of that innocence himself.

One by one, each of Macias' despicable gang identified her as one of their accomplices. Macias' orders, no doubt. Even the men she'd seen only across the club dining room, spoke familiarly of "Dona," shrugged, identified her easily.

Even the jealous Freda said, carelessly, "Sure. She's the dame he ditched me for. I've seen her before plenty of times. Once she was leaving his apartment. About 3 in the morning."

"It wasn't that late!" Devona gasped aloud, unconsciously. Then realizing how she'd betrayed herself, flushed hotly.

Baring Her Soul

Tal flinched and Dale's mouth curved downward. It was that that finally broke down her resolve to follow Dale's advice and "let your attorney do the talking." That and the snicker that flickered around the courtroom at her silly objection. Leaping to her feet, she faced the Judge.

"Please, your honor, may I explain?"

The old Judge suppressed a quiet smile. "Please do."

Afterward, Devona couldn't remember what she'd said, exactly. She could only recall that sea of hostile faces, the passionate fury of her own voice, the sudden calm confidence that she must make these people see and believe in her innocence. She'd done a foolish—but not a criminal thing. She had worked for Macias only because she had to be self-supporting and because he was the only person who had offered her a job. Mr. Dale Brasher himself had introduced her to Macias.

Devona remembered flinging him a challenging glance at that point. And remembered or thought she did, the little smile of encouragement with which he rewarded her.

It was over finally. She remembered stumbling blindly back to the armchair while the room suddenly began to spin around her. She didn't quite make it to the chair before the darkness overtook her. She felt Dale's arm go around her waist and from immense distance, heard him saying, through the roaring in her ears.

"She's fainted. Gangway, please."

Merciful Oblivion

And then blissful oblivion.

When Devona opened her eyes, again, Dale hovered over her. In his office now, just the two of them. She lay on a hard bench, her own coat folded under her head, Dale's topcoat flung across her as a coverlet.

"Feeling better now?" He smiled and smoothed her forehead with a damp cloth.

"What—happened?"

"Charges against you dismissed he smiled quietly. "The others for lack of evidence," he said and come to trial in a few weeks."

"Oh—I'm so glad." She shut her eyes again, too exhausted to prop them open longer. Besides it was so pleasant knowing Dale was right there, that nothing threatened her now, that—

The Rt. Honourable Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner to Canada and Mrs. Lionel Gibbs of London and Winchester enjoy a cup of tea aboard the "Iron Duke," the bomb-scarred mobile tea canteen which arrives in Belleville on Tuesday. Mrs. Gibbs is hostess of the "Duke" during its Canadian tour which is being sponsored by the Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims. The battered war relic served hot tea and light food to hundreds of firemen and bombed victims during 33 Nazi air-raids.

"Iron Duke" Mobile Tea Car, Veteran of Great Britain's Battle, Will Visit Belleville, Tues. May 27

The "Iron Duke," the mobile tea canteen will arrive in Belleville at 11 a.m. on Tuesday under the auspices of The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims.

It will be given an official reception by Mayor Thompson at the City Hall at 11 a.m.

An escort of motor cycle police, fire-fighting equipment and police cars will meet the battered war relic at the city limits and escort it to the City Hall. The procession will travel at about fifteen miles an hour and the sirens will scream imparting something of an air-raid atmosphere to the proceedings.

The mayor will give a welcome to Mrs. Lionel Gibbs, the "Duke's" hostess and to the Hon. Mrs. Robin Gurdon the co-worker. Mrs. Gurdon is the daughter of the late Lord Cowdray and her husband is with the Coldstream guards in Egypt.

Mrs. Gurdon is also the niece of Lady Denham, national president of the Women's Institutes in England.

Following the official welcome the Mayor will be presented with a fragment of a Nazi bomb picked up in the London streets after one of the worst blitzes.

Known by British Tommies and hundreds of air-raid victims as the "Iron Duke" the tea car has just completed a three months tour of major U.S. cities, sponsored by the British War Relief Society through whose co-operation it is now in Canada. It will give contributors to The Queen's Canadian Fund an opportunity to see at first hand one of the important uses to which their donations are being put.

Mrs. Gibbs who will act as official hostess during the Duke's Canadian tour, has only recently come over from England to visit her two sons in school near Boston, Mass. A daughter of Sir Harold Snagge, chairman of the Napier Aero Engine Works which manufactures motors for the new R.A.F. Typhoon fighter plane, she is the widow of a veteran of the First World War and was engaged in relief work in a reception station for wounded near Southampton.

In England she saw dozens of mobile tea cars like the "Iron Duke" in operation. Speeding to bombed areas or seeking out isolated anti-aircraft gun crews the tea cars have unfailingly "been there" with a cup of tea when nerves were on edge and physical endurance exhausted.

The cars, some of which are like standard delivery trucks converted into model kitchens, have become of supreme importance to Great Britain in her defensive battle. The battered "Iron Duke" which will be shown here was in service in eastern England. It is equipped to serve tea and light snacks of food, and is on tour under the auspices of The Queen's Canadian Fund.

As her co-worker on the tour Mrs. Gibbs will be accompanied by the Hon. Mrs. Robin Gurdon whose husband is in Egypt with the Coldstream Guards and whose father was the late Lord Gowdray. She has been in America since last summer when she brought over a group of six young children, including her daughter and two sons.

Mrs. Gibbs is a real veteran of the Battle of Britain. In addition to her relief work near Southampton she spent a good deal of time in London at the height of the Nazi air onslaught last autumn. The four members of her family who live in London have had their homes wrecked and Mrs. Gibb's house was badly damaged while she was in it.

When she enplaned for Lisbon on her trip to this continent, she was caught in a southern port during one of the severest German air raids of the entire war. Nevertheless she plans to return to her relief work in England after spending the summer with her children.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The enemy has chosen, apparently, to challenge President Roosevelt's determination to maintain maritime freedom in the waters of the western Atlantic. German U-boats, according to Nazi spokesmen in Berlin today, have extended their activities to near Greenland, claiming the sinking of nine ships from a British convoy.

While this claim will likely turn out to be as exaggerated as most Nazi claims, it appears probable that an attack has been made, since the German claim followed by a day an authoritative hint in London that waters near the coast of North America are becoming a battle ground in the campaign against the enemy's U-boats.

Steady Improvement Shown

London circles said it is believed German submarines now are operating much farther west in the Atlantic than a few weeks ago. At the same time it was said there has been a steady improvement in the naval protection afforded British ships carrying war supplies to Britain. This might mean that more destroyers and corvettes are making the entire Atlantic crossing with the convoys rather than meeting them in mid-Atlantic as they near the danger zone west of Ireland.

Challenge to Washington

The enemy's wilful incursion in the waters off Greenland represents a challenge to Washington of the most deliberate kind for only last month that territory was declared part of the western hemisphere, with the United States pledged to defend it.

All this week the President's closest advisers, notably Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, and Col. Henry Stimson, Secretary of War, have been calling for repeal of the United States Neutrality Ace which ties the President's hands in the matter of maritime aid for the Allies and infringes on the historic American doctrine of freedom of the seas.

Over 5,000 Nazi Soldiers Perish When British Navy Squadron Raids Convoy

By LARRY ALLEN

Alexandria, May 24 (AP). — Five thousand or more Nazi soldiers bent on a surprise landing on Crete were drowned when a British naval squadron smashed into the centre of their hodge-podge convoy and blasted to the bottom an Italian destroyer, two merchantmen and forty sailing vessels, British naval officers related tonight.

Not a single German managed to reach the embattled island to reinforce the air-borne Nazis already there.

Describing the carnage wrought in a three-hour engagement which began about 11 p.m. Wednesday (May 21), the officers said the sailboats, Greek caiques, were loaded precariously with about 100 Germans each, and estimated that, with the loss of life on the larger vessels, the casualties must have passed 5,000.

As the British cruisers and destroyers rammed the wooden boats and riddled them with the fire of four-inch guns and anti-aircraft pom-poms, they said the Germans who were hurled into the inky water screamed vainly for rescue.

Six-Inch Shells Sink Destroyer.

But the Germans still afloat were too busy to save their comrades, and the threat of torpedo attacks from German "E-boats" kept the British ships from trying it as they swept again ad again through the huddled caiques.

(The caique as used on the Bosporus is a long, narrow pointed skiff with from two to ten oars; the Greek caique is apparently an adaptation of the same type of craft, which has also been described as a light Levantine sailing vessels. There has been no indication whether the Nazis powered them or whether sail was used.)

The entire Nazi convoy was destroyed or dispersed.

The destroyer was accounted for by a resounding broadside of a British cruiser's six-inch guns, which set the victim aflame from stem to stern.

A large merchantman, which the officers said must have carried at least 1,000 men, was sent to the bottom in similar fashion, and another cruiser sank a smaller vessel of about 1,000 tons.

The captain of a British anti-aircraft cruiser, one of the first to return to Alexandria, gave this account of the dramatic action:

"Three cruisers and four destroyers were steaming eastward from Suda Bay (in the Sea of Crete, between Crete and Greece) when a destroyer in our screen opened fire on a darkened ship.

Burning Freighter Lights Scene.

"This was the first intimation that we were in contact with the enemy.

"We altered course, jammed on full speed and entered the fray.

"Our destroyer fire was very effective. A great bonfire appeared on the ocean, apparently a merchantman burning from bow to stern.

"The first ship we, on this cruiser, actually sighted was a large Italian destroyer, which was not at all unlike our own one-funnel destroyers.

"It was not until we flashed a searchlight on her that we were certain she was an Italian, flying the Italian ensign.

"Judging by her immaculate paint work, she apparently had spent many months in port.

"We were at very close range by then and opened fire with our pom-poms. She then fired torpedoes, and in avoiding them, this cruiser was masked by another cruiser.

"This other cruiser, however, thus got a clear view of the Italian destroyer and gave her a full broadside of six-inch guns, all of which seemed to hit.

"Went Down Like a Stone."

"A series of violent explosions occurred and the burning destroyer went down like a stone.

"Throughout the action she never had fired her own guns.

caiques, at least forty, each carryron through the middle of the enemy convoy, consisting mainly of sailing caiques intended for a surprise night landing on Crete.

"We sank a large number of these canques, at least forty, each carrying at least 100 Nazis.

"We rammed many of them.

"In addition this cruiser sank a small steamship of about 1,000 tons with our heavy guns. We last saw her going down and burning badly.

"Some of the caiques tried to evade our attack by hiding the soldiers they were carrying and by flying the Greek flag.

"Others retaliated with rifle and machine-gun fire.

"On a subsequent sweep we saw a large number of Germans in the water, clinging to lifebelts and rafts and the wreckage of the caiques. The possibility of E-boat attacks made it impossible for us to stop to try to rescue any of them."

Before 3 a.m. Thursday the action was over, the Nazis dead or the few survivors in scattered flight.

In the pitch darkness it was impossible to estimate the full strength of the convoy, the captain went on. But he stuck to the round figure of 5,000, and believed that few escaped.

Continuing its patrol, the British squadron was attacked by German dive-bombers at dawn, and the raids continued without letup until after dark Thursday, the guns of cruisers and destroyers alike growing hot with incessant firing, which managed to bring down at least two Junkers.

Island Residents Of St. Pierre-Miquelon Ready To Assist

Halifax, May 24 (CP)—The Halifax Mail Friday quoted two unidentified visitors from St. Pierre-Miquelon as saying a large proportion of the residents of that French colony would be prepared to take up arms to oppose any attempt by Germans to take possession of the colony.

The newspaper said this attitude was taken despite what the visitors described as an "anti-British and anti-De Gaulle movement in certain circles" on the Vichy-controlled islands off Newfoundland. The two men asked their names be withheld because of possible repercussions" on their return home.

The Mail's story continued in part:

"There is a strong propaganda movement going on that has provoked a lively reaction. Many of the citizens who do not wish to collaborate with the Nazi sympathizers frequently give outward manifestation of their faith to Britain and her courageous allies," one of the men said.

"He gave as an instance of the reaction in the island the day of the anniversary of Joan of Arc when the citizens flew the flag of General De Gaulle and the English flag from every high point in the island.... "The citizens made Lorraine crosses everywhere....painting them on the windows and the houses of the German sympathizers."

"Many of the government officials are anti-British, one of the men said. He told of the strict censorship of the press, magazines and all types of correspondence. "Any newspaper with pro-British ideas is banned," he said.

Pair Charged With Having Explosives

Toronto, May 24 (CP)— David Parker, 43 and Albert Pascoe, 36, were remanded to May 30 on $5,000 bail each when they appeared on charges of having possession of explosives and spreading false news. The men were arrested last night in connection with the finding of a home-made bomb in the plant of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Company here.

Police said the bomb, made up of seven sticks of dynamite and two firecrackers wrapped with brown paper, was found in the plant five days ago by Parker, maintenance employee in the Dunlop plant. They said the dynamite had been obtained from Pascoe, a relative of Parker, who was said to have obtained the materials from brickyard in which he was working.

The bomb was said by police to be powerful enough to wreck half of the large building in which it was found. Investigating officers said they did not believe there was any attempt to sabotage the plant, but that the bomb had been placed there in the belief that the finder would be regarded as a hero.

FROM JUNKERS TO JUNK

British soldiers examine machine-gun ammunition left intact after a Junkers 88 bomber crashed during the night near London. The British censors neglected to say whether it had been shot down by anti-aircraft fire or by one of England's night-fighter squadrons which have been inflicting considerable havoc on Hitler's raiding forces.

LONDONERS CARRY ON

London workers pick their way over crumbled brickwork and masonry that litters the roadway after a recent German air raid on the heart of the British Empire. The workers weren't sure that when they arrived at their offices they'd find them intact.

A CLEAN—MISS!

This picture, approved by the British censors, shows seven huge spouts of water rising from the water at the stern of a British cruiser of the Orion class during an ineffectual raid by Nazi dive bombers.

CANEA FOCAL POINT IN BATTLE OF CRETE

Royal Navy Scores Swift Revenge For Sinking of Hood

Torpedo Planes From Aircraft Carrier Ark Royal, Backed By Ships Of Atlantic Fleet Send Bismarck To Bottom Of Ocean—Torpedo After Torpedo Hurled Into Vitals Of Battleship

FIRST TORPEDO CRIPPLES STEERING GEAR

LONDON, May 27 (CP)—Torpedo planes from the Aircraft Carrier Ark Royal, backed by ships of the Royal Navy's Atlantic Fleet, sent the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck to the bottom of the North Atlantic at 11 a.m. today, it was announced officially, in stern revenge for the sinking of the battle cruiser Hood.

The coup de grace was delivered after the Bismarck had been severely damaged by torpedo after torpedo hurled into her vitals by planes of the fleet air arm, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced.

It was just three days after the 42,100-ton Hood was blasted to pieces between Iceland and Greenland that the units of the Royal Navy, including the new 35,000-ton battleship Prince of Wales, caught up with her as she tried to make a French port, Brest or St. Nazaire.

DESERTED BY HER ESCORT

She had been deserted by the escorting cruiser Prince Eugen, one of Germany's three cruisers of the 10,000-ton Hipper class.

"Measures are being taken with respect" to the Eugen, one of Germany's most powerful cruisers, an official statement said.

British sources disclosed the Bismarck eluded her pursuers once Saturday night in bad weather, but that a United States-built Catalina reconnaissance plane picked up her trail again Sunday before mid-day.

Planes launched from the Ark Royal then pounced on her time and again "in a succession of attacks," it was related. It was not stated definitely that the torpedo-carrying aircraft alone accounted for the Bismarck.

But if they did it was perhaps the first time in military history that a battleship has been sunk from the air. At any rate, the planes were given credit for slowing up the Bismarck and making possible her final destruction.

HIT ASTERN WITH FIRST TORPEDO

Mr. Alexander said the first telling blows were delivered by the torpedo carriers last night. One aerial torpedo hit the Bismarck astern, crippling her steering gear, the official account related, and after that she was observed operating at very reduced speed and making "uncontrollable circles."

Then the Prince of Wales, sister ship of King George V, and the other pursuing ships closed in for the kill. High officials said it appeared the final blow was delivered by gunfire and not by the torpedo carriers.

It was ironical that planes from the Ark Royal played a major part in bringing the Bismarck to account. The Ark Royal was often reported by the Germans to have been sunk.

The Bismarck and the Eugen first were discovered by British scouting planes last Wednesday at Bergen, Norway, and the next day they were found to have left.

The Royal Navy sent powerful units to intercept them, as the official account put it, because it appeared probable they were bent on "breaking out into the Atlantic Ocean with the view to striking at our convoys from the United States."

SEEN IN STRAIT

That night the fleet got a glimpse of the German men-o'-war as they were passing through the Strait of Denmark, 250 mile stretch of water between Greenland and Iceland.

With Saturday's dawn the Hood and Prince of Wales intercepted the Bismarck and Eugen and the Hood was struck at about 23,000 yards by q shell which penetrated her magazine and blew her to pieces.

British forces kept in touch with the Germans throughout Saturday and laid plans to bring them to battle at dawn yesterday. But these plans were interrupted by bad weather.

"Yesterday, shortly before mid-day," the official account went on, "a Catalina aircraft, one of the considerable number of those very far-reaching scouting planes which have been sent to us by the U.E.S., picked up the Bismarck and it was seen that she was making for a French port—Brest or St. Nazaire—and further rapid dispositions were made by the Admiralty."

"We may say that the moment she was known to be at sea the whole apparatus of our ocean control came into play and very far combinations began to work."

TWO CRUISERS, 4 DESTROYERS LOST AT CRETE

London Circles Say Also 2 British Battleship And 'Several Other Cruisers' Damaged

GARRISON AIDED

London, May 27 (CP)—The Royal Navy has lost the Cruisers Gloucester and Fiji and the Destroyers Juno, Greyhound, Kelly and Kashmir in the Battle of Crete, it was learned in authoritative circles here today.

In addition two battleships and "several other cruisers" have been damaged.

No sea-borne enemy troops have landed in Crete.

Reinforcements are reaching the Allied garrison and Allied forces have inflicted "very heavy losses" on the enemy.

Enemy Losses High

(The German high command claimed yesterday the Royal Navy had lost 11 cruisers, eight destroyers, five torpedo boats and one submarine in the Battle of Crete and that a battleship and several other British war vessels had been badly damaged.)

F.D.R. BRUSHES UP ON IMPORTANT 'FIRESIDE CHAT'

May Be Most Important Announcement President Has Ever Made

SPEAKS AT 10.30 P.M.

Washington, May 27 (AP).—In the midst of preparing a momentous pronouncement on government policy, President Roosevelt asked the United States Congress today for $3,319,000,000 in appropriations for additional airplanes.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, told reporters that the President would extend his fireside chat tonight an extra 15 minutes and asserted:

"I think you can say that by Wednesday morning there can no longer be any doubt as to what the national policy of this government is. I think I'll just stand on that."

Early anounced that the request for huge new funds for plants was being sent to Capitol Hill in a letter to Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Huge Sums Asked.

Of the total, $2,790,000,000 would be for the army and $529,000,000 for the navy.

Early declined to estimate the number of plants to be ordered with the money or to say whether bombers would be emphasized.

Bismarck Sent to Bottom After Three-day Hunt by British Fleet and Air Arm

(By The Canadian Press)

Germany's new 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck, trapped by the powerful guns of the British fleet and the torpedoes of darting planes, was sent to the bottom of the North Atlantic after a three-day hunt at 11 a.m. (5 a.m. E.S.T.) today.

The big German sea raider fell victim to what Prime Minister Churchill described as "the whole apparatus of our ocean control" in a pitched battle some 400 miles west of Brest, France.

Thus did the Royal Navy repay the sinking on Saturday of the 42,100-ton battle Cruiser Hood with the loss of approximately 1,300 officers and men, in a fight with the Bismarck off Greenland.

Overtaking the German Man O'War as she reeled in uncontrollable circles, her rudder and propellers smashed by aerial torpedoes, the fleet delivered the coup de grace and closed one of the greatest naval chapters in history.

Berlin radio reported that the Bismarck's last message read: "Ship out of control. Will fight to the last shell. Long live the Fuehrer".

Admiral Loses His Life

Berlin announced that Admiral Guenther Luetjens and Capt. Lindemann of the Bismarck, with an unstated number of the crew, lost their lives.

The admiralty issued a 22-word statement to tell the first story of what may have been the counterpart of the 1916 battle of Jutland, as follows.

"The German battleship Bismarck has been sunk by our naval forces. Details of the operations will be announced as soon as possible".

Germany not only lost one of her biggest battleships but also another attempt to harry Great Britain's Atlantic supply line.

In what was the shortest career of a first-line war vessel in modern naval history, the Bismarck in her first sea fight sank the Hood between Greenland and Iceland Saturday, then went to the bottom herself in a battle within three

May Repair British Planes At Baltimore

Baltimore, May 27 (AP)—The Baltimore Sun says today that British Overseas Airways is seeking to sub-lease city-owned seaplane facilities at Baltimore Airport for use as a maintenance base for flying boats operating on Empire air routes.

Such planes as three new Boeing flying boats bought recently from Pan American Airways would be brought here for overhaul, the paper said, because the British Government decided the risk of bombing by German aircraft was too great to permit attempts at maintenance in British ports.

Preliminary discussions already are under way, The Sun said, between British officials and Pan American Airways which holds a long-term lease on the seaplane base here. It said original plans to use the marine terminal at La Guardia Field, New York, had been abandoned.

Union Victories At Four Plants

Toronto, May 27 (CP).—Elections among employees in four Kitchener and Waterloo industries resulted in union victories at all four plants, C. H. Millard, executive director of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, said today.

Mr. Millard said that at the McBrine Luggage Company 134 employees voted for the shoe and leather workers organizing committee as their bargaining agency, with 24 against.

He gave the figures for the election in the Dominion Truck Equipment Company as 77 for the S.W.O.C. and six against and for the election in the Waterloo Manufacturing Company as 113 for the S.W.O.C. and 95 against.

These three elections were held yesterday under the direction of a conciliation board, headed by Judge J. McGibbon of Lindsay, Ont., which was set up after work stoppages at the three plants. A fourth election was held by the Federal Department of Labor in the Sunshine Waterloo Foundry Company and Mr. Millard said the Union had won that election as well, although ballot figures were not available.

"Battle Of The Shop" Goes Well For U. S.

By FRANK I. WELLER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 27 (AP).—The United States is turning in a victory in the "battle of the shop".

National defence officials say that within the next 100 days tanks and guns and ships and planes for a 2,000,000-man army, a two-ocean navy and an unlimited air force will stream from mass production assembly lines.

They regard this as a mass production triumph.

Huge Program Under Way.

1. Some 1,300 defence plants built, building or expanded at a cost of $2,763,303,000 to the United States government; $659,000,000 to to private owners and $191,000,000 to Great Britain.

2. 99 United States-owned ordnance plants for the army and the navy, $1,000,000,000; 42 ammunition plants, $554,000,000; four small-arms ammunition factories spending $90,000,000 annually compared with $30,000,000 in 1939.

3. 115 new or expanded plants for aircraft parts, $487,000,000; 34 gun factories, $161,000,000; 28 artillery plants, $106,000,000.

4. 12 armor plate and heavy forgings plants, $106,000,000; $343,000,000 of new facilities in 40 shipyards,

5. 20 machine-tool plants, $16,000,000; 10 optical instrument establishments turning out $10,000,000 of instruments; 16 arsenals and military depots rehabilitated, $18,000,000; five tank and other combat vehicle plants, $33,000,000.

6. Private industry financing $15,000,000 of plants for non-ferrous metals and their products; aluminum plants, $46,000,000; rolling and drawing mills, $78,000,000; iron and steel producing equipment, $139,000,000; aircraft plants, $96,000,000; ammunition and military chemical plants, $38,000,000.

Start "All-Out" Effort Year Ago.

All this is a birthday present from the "allout" national defence effort. One year ago President Roosevelt, alarmed at the Nazi threat that had crushed half of Europe, urged Congress and the people to build for themselves an unconquerable military machine they responded with billions of dollars and millions of men.

Knudsen Gets Results.

On May 28, 194, Mr. Roosevelt set up a council of National Defence composed of the secretaries of war, navy, interior, agriculture, commerce and labor, and gave it an advisory commission.

By mid-December William S. Knudsen, production supervisor, said he considered the defence effort too "unsatisfactory to warrant hope that everything is well."

"I am getting all out of patience," Knudsen said, "with all this talk about money. This is no time to ask for quotations on the defence of the United States. This job can't be handled with money. It must be handled with our Hearts."

On Jan. 7 Mr. Roosevelt placed Knudsen in charge of an "office of production management", named Sydney Hillman, Labor leader, his associate director, and told them to get results even if they had to knock down a few ears. They did.

5 TROOP-LADEN NAZI PLANES SHOT DOWN AT MALEMI

British Fighters Also Damage Closely Concentrated Junkers On Ground

MOSUL RAIDED

Cairo, Egypt, May 27 (AP).—British fighter planes shot down five troop-laden German planes at Malemi airdrome near Canea yesterday and destroyed several other Nazi planes, the Royal Air Force Middle East Command announced today.

British fighters also attacked about 100 Junker-52s closely concentrated on the ground at Malemi, inflicting heavy damage, a communique said, and a later attack at dusk set fire to several German aircraft on the ground.

In Iraq an exchange of aerial blows was reported with the R.A.F. raiding Mosul and the Germans attacking the Lake Habbaniyah airdrome.

MASS PRODUCTION STAGE IS REACHED

So Says J. Gordon Ross, M.P., in Regard to Canada's Armed Forces

Port Arthur, May 27 (CP)—J. Gordon Ross, Liberal member of Parliament for Moose Jaw, told an International Rotary Convention banquet here last night that "we have reached the mass production stage" in Canada's armed forces.

Air crews trained in Canada under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will be waiting to man every plane Canadian and United States factories can produce, he said to 400 Rotarians and their wives at the 26th conference of the 117th district, Rotary International.

Canadian Forces

While not permitted to give exact figures during war time, Mr. Ross said Canada's Air Force today numbers at least 55,000 men, the Canadian Navy "will have reached 413 ships with a personnel of 27,000 officers and men by 1942" and 70,000 men are training in England, waiting for the day when "Hitler will take the big gamble and endeavor to invade Great Britain."

In addition to Canadians serving in Canadian ships there are more than 1,000 men from Canada serving in the British Navy and "our Canadian officers and men have won commendation from the First Lord of the Admiralty and his Parliamentary Undersecretary ..... Twenty-four Canadians in the Naval service have already been cited for gallantry in action."

Thousands of Axis Forces Perished Unless Cross-Channel Swimmers

Cairo, May 27 (AP).—A military policeman who was at Candia when the Germans began invading Crete said today that thousands of Germans and Italians perished—"unless they are cross-channel swimmers"—when the British fleet destroyed troop-laden barges last Friday.

He said the Germans first bombed and machine-gunned Candia, and added:

"Then parachute troops arrived. The skies seemed to be hidden by them. We saw the air troop-carriers coming in low over the water and trailing their gliders—then gaining height and dropping their parachutes in the neighborhood.

"Some of them were killed instantly when parachutes failed to open.

"Next day (Saturday) German planes dive-bombed repeatedly and at night we resumed patrolling again. In this battle the day belongs to the German air force but the night is ours—thanks to the navy.

"On the following day the Germans again carried out repeated dive-bombing attacks. On Friday I saw large numbers of barges and an Italian ship which ran up the white flag as soon as our guns opened on her, but it was too late and she sank.

"Our ships then went on among the barges, ramming them and firing pom-poms. Everything on the water was wiped out. German screams for help mingled with the Italian cries.

"It was difficult to see most of the time owing to dive-bombing and machine-gunning.

"But I saw thousands of the enemy struggling in the water without the slightest chance of rescue—unless they were cross-channel swimmers."

(Naval officers arriving back in Cairo had said that some 40 Greek caiques filled with German troops, a destroyer and some transports were sunk by the navy. An estimated 5,000 Germans were lost.)

Desperate Attempt By Nazis to Form Bridgehead Fails

British And Greek Forces Concentrate Heavy Artillery Fire At Malemi Airport

BRITISH GET SUPPLIES

London, May 27 (CP)—The city of Canea became the focal point of the Battle of Crete today as Nazi sky troops hammered at its defences in a desperate attempt to establish a bridgehead for sea-borne reinforcements to land on the Greek island.

From Malemi airport, 10 miles southwest of the Cretan capital, the Nazis were reported launching attack after attack against stoutly-resisting British and Greek troops whose lines they were said to have pierced at one point yesterday.

Nazi dive bombers led the assaults and dispatches from Cairo said that Canea itself is in ruins from repeated aerial assaults. Civilian casualties were said to be heavy though most of the population of 25,000 had fled to the hills.

The cities of Heraclean (Candia) and Retimo, to the east of Canea, also were little more than heaps of debris as the result of repeated air assaults.

Charge Slain Earl Associated With Fascist Activities

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, May 27 (CP)—A wartime angle today entered the case of Sir Delves Broughton, 57, charged with murder, when the defence asserted Sir Delves' alleged victim, the Earl of Carroll, hereditary Lord High Constable of Scotland, had been associated with Fascist activities.

The defence argued, after Sir Delves had entered a plea of not guilty, that the Earl was a successful "ladies' man", hinted a woman might be involved in the murder and charged the slain Earl addressed Fascist meetings in Kenya.

The Earl was found shot in an automobile January 21. Testimony at a preliminary hearing charged that Sir Delves Broughton showed jealousy the night before the killing when his young bride of less than a month danced with the 39-year-old widowed Earl,

It was testified during today's hearing that Fascist literature and a Fascist membership card were found when Lord Erroll's residence was searched after the killing.

The counsel for the defence said that he expected to develop the idea that more than one person was implicated in the crime.

SAMUEL HUNTER INSTANTLY KILLED IN TRUCK CRASH

Truck Leaves Road Hitting Large Boulders and Turns Over

DRIVER CHARGED

Bancroft, May 27 (Special)—A fatal accident occurred on the Whitney-Maynooth road, twenty-five miles north of Bancroft and about two miles north of Lake St. Peter about three-thirty Saturday morning, when Samuel Hunter, aged 36, met instant death when the car in which he was a passenger turned over in a ditch. Mr. Carl Goodwin, aged 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Goodwin of Maynooth, and driver of the car, was returning home from a dance at Sabine near Whitney accompanied by Sam Hunter and Garnet Perry. In some unaccountable manner the half ton truck in which they were riding left the road striking several large boulders and turned completely over landing on its wheels and facing the opposite direction from which it had been travelling.

Driver Thrown Clear

The driver was thrown clear of the car and did not seem to be injured very badly. The other two occupants remained in the vehicle, Hunter meeting instant death, suffering from a broken neck, while Perry escaped with a shaking up and facial abrasions. The truck travelled a distance of one hundred and seventy-one feet from its first skid mark until it came to rest by the side of the road and was almost completely wrecked.

Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft, was notified, and he, along with County Constable G. P. Wells and Dr. S. S. Lumb of Bancroft, drove to the scene of the accident, making their investigations. The body was released and taken to P. A. Towle's funeral parlors in Bancroft. A charge of reckless driving will be laid against the driver.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

ONLY ONE FIRE ALARM DURING THE WEEKEND

Not one fire alarm arising out of the use of firecrackers was answered by the local fire department over the holiday week-end with only a minor chimney blaze on Patterson Street, occurring to spoil what was otherwise a perfect 24th of May celebration insofar as firemen were concerned. The one alarm occurred on Sunday when a chimney at the apartment of Catherine Daly, 12 Patterson Street, was reported ablaze. After the fire was extinguished, however, it was discovered that the chimney was plugged and the department were called out the second time to effect a remedy.

REPORT GOOD DEMAND FOR FIRECRACKERS

There was a famine in firecrackers and fireworks in Belleville during the 24th of May celebration in which local youths and oldsters as well gave vent to their feelings with a noisy and picturesque display. Dealers this morning reported that they were completely sold out of firecrackers by Saturday night with the demand keeping up all day Friday and until near midnight Saturday. Establishments carrying fireworks report a near-record business in this celebration, which may possibly be the last until after the war as the government has forbid further importations of fireworks until after the duration.

OIL TANKER SEEKS BOAT HANDS HERE

Verifying persistent early spring rumors that this coming summer would see a shortage of sailors to man Great Lake freighters, an oil tanker owned by the British American Oil Company which docked at the Belleville harbor over the week-end, was two men short of her regular crew complement, with the captain of the boat seeking to bring his crew up to regular strength by hiring local men. The fact that he was short a man or so, however, did not cause the captain to digress from what apparently is a company ruling that men above the age of 45 years are not hired as boat hands. Several local men who have years of experience, applied for the job aboard the tanker, but the captain, realising that they were above the age limit, declined to take them on.

NO LIGHTS IN PARK FOR THE HOLIDAY

Frequenters of Victoria Park over the holiday week-end were surprised and no little chagrined to discover that although the popular waterfront park has every outward appearance of being prepared for the summer season, neither the electric lights nor the water had as yet been turned on by the Parks Board. The booth which caters to park visitors on Wednesday afternoons, on holidays and week-ends was open for business during the daytime. but with the approach of nightfall when residents of the city begin to arrive in numbers at the park, it was forced to close owing to lack of light. Today, however, Parks Board employees are busily engaged in setting up pipes and it is expected the water and lights will be turned on within a few days.

NO SERIOUS CRIME OVER THE HOLIDAY

Week-end holiday motor accidents in Belleville and vicinity were void of serious consequences but minor injuries were reported. Along the district highways Patrolmen Hatch and McKellar were on continued duty over the period and reported heavy traffic but no serious accidents.

In the city Mrs. Leo. Donovan and her daughter, six-year-old Marlene, sustained abrasions after stepping from behind a parked car on College St. and hit by a truck driven by A. N. Rodgers, 364 North Charles St. The injuries were superficial.

On Saturday night, Mrs. Bertha Thompson, R.R. No. 1, Belleville, complained to city police that a motor car had backed from the east curb on Front St. and struck her. No actual injuries were inflicted, but the driver of the vehicle drove away from the scene without stopping.

Several motorists found themselves in the clutches of the law after violations of city traffic ordinances, charges of speeding and failing to stop at the designated stop signs within the city limits resulted in charges being laid.

Campbellford Farmer Dies Of Severe Injuries When Struck By Car

Admitted to Belleville General Hospital early Saturday morning suffering with severe injuries resulting from a motor accident, James Runciman, Percy Township farmer residing near Campbellford, succumbed early Sunday morning, hospital authorities stated yesterday.

Runciman was involved in two accidents, emerging from the first uninjured, but suffering what proved to be fatal hurts in the second. The first accident resulted in injury to James Schofield, Hamilton, driver of a car which is said to have collided with the one driven by Runciman on the Brighton highway about five miles south of Campbellford. Schofield suffered a broken wrist while his wife also received injuries. Two daughters and another passenger were uninjured.

Following this accident, Runciman took his family to his mother's home nearby and returned to repair the fender of his car. It was jammed against the front tire. While engaged in this work, a car said to be driven by Earl Walker, Campbellford, crashed head-on into the Runciman vehicle, the impact hurling Runciman through the Walker car's windshield. Three passengers were shaken up but otherwise uninjured. Drs. C. A. Bright and P. D. Free, who were passing by treated Runciman and had him removed to hospital.

West Toronto Songster Brigade Visits Belleville

The visit of the West Toronto Songster Brigade of the Salvation Army created considerable interest in the city over the week-end. The brigade, consisting of over 40 voices was not only heard in the local corps building, but the streets rang with their voices. Four times they met on the streets in various spots in the city and many were impressed with the stirring vocal numbers rendered.

In a special program on Saturday, presided over by Rev. Mr. Dilts, of the Holloway United Church, the brigade gave a splendid program.

Sunday the brigade was heard at three services and in the afternoon gave another stirring program, Mr. Harry Moorman presiding. A short after-church program was rendered in the evening, bringing the series of services to a successful conclusion.

Empire Youth Sunday Observed By Students Of Albert College

The closing chapel service in Memorial Chapel, Albert College, was in keeping with Empire Youth Sunday during which the students solemnly dedicated themselves to service to King and Country. The service conducted by the Students' Christian Movement was at nine o'clock on Sunday morning and was in charge of Lorne Brown, president of the S.C.M. assisted by Geoffrey Julian, president of the Students' Council and Miss Margaret Sharpe, president of the Co-Ed Society. The Chapel was beautifully decorated with Spring flowers by the students. The students' choir assisted in the impressive service.

An interesting feature of the service was that the Communion Service the gift of the Graduates of 1940-41, "their symbolic gift to succeeding generations of students and their parting message of dedication to God and the ideals for which the school stands" was used for the first time when Dr. Bert Howard dispensed Communion to faculty, students and friends.

Dr. Howard gave his final chapel message to the students taking his text from Moffatt's New Testament, Romans 12: 11 the words of St. Paul "maintain a spiritual glow". Dr. Howard charged the students as they go out into life that in order to maintain a spiritual glow they must first keep intact fellowship with God, second, follow ever the leadership of Jesus, and third never to become indifferent to or neglect worship.

Present at the service yesterday were representatives of the Board of Governors, parents and friends of the students. This was the first of the series of closing exercises which will be concluded with Convocation.

$650 Collected By Kiwanis Club For War Victims

The British War Victims' Fund sponsored by the Toronto Evening Telegram will be the richer by $650.00. For in another magnificent effort, the residents of this city and district showed their sympathy with their bomb-wracked British cousins by contributing that amount to the Kiwanis Club on Saturday through the medium of the clubmen's special Tag Day.

The amount is an all-time record for Tag Day receipts in the city, the former figure of $637 being secured by the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. a few days ago.

Kiwanis officials voiced their sincere appreciation of the response to their appeal today, stating, that the effort was well worthwhile and voicing pride in the attitude of the residents of the city and its environs. They also expressed their appreciation of the "Kiwanis Queens" and members of clubmen's families, who generously gave of their time and efforts to make the affair the success it was.

It was intimated today that the club would assume all expenses in connection with the Tag Day, so that the entire amount collected can be forwarded to the Fund headquarters in Toronto.

GREYS INVADE TOWN OF TRENTON WITH 1,000 MEN

Battalion Conducts Tactical March From Toronto to Trenton

WELCOMED BY MAYOR

Trenton, May 27.—The Grey and Simcoe Foresters, 1,000 strong, invaded this town today, after a march of 16 miles from the village of Colborne this morning.

The Battalion on a tactical march from Toronto to Trenton, has been received hospitably by cities, towns and villages all along the route where citizens have welcomed them with all sorts of gifts, mainly of food.

Trenton is not to be outdone by the other municipalities along the route and hundreds of pies and other food will be given to the soldiers when they reach this town. Under the organization of Capt. F. [illegible] Hewitt of the Salvation Army Corps and the Trenton Red Shield Centre, women in Trenton have been requested to bake pies for the friendly invaders who are to encamp at Hanna Park for a short rest before leaving for other parts of Canada.

The Grey and Simcoe Foresters, one of Canada's crack active service battalions has been in training for some months on active service and ready to take over active service duty. The battalion left the exhibition grounds at Toronto, last Tuesday morning on the route march from that city to Trenton.

The one hundred-odd miles was done on foot, with the men carrying full marching equipment. Accompanying the battalion are seventy motor vehicles of all types which carry the extra equipment for the regiment.

Major V. D. Fell is in command of the regiment which comes from the counties of Grey and Simcoe north and northwest of Toronto.

Camped at West Hill

The battalion made its first camp at Westhill east of Toronto, on Tuesday night and on Wednesday morning left for Whitby. Thursday, the regiment stopped at Bowmanville and Friday at Port Hope.

Cobourg was the host of the regiment over the week-end where a parade and drumhead service was held. The march past took place at the Town Hall, where a guard of honor was made of members of the Cobourg veterans under Lieutenant Jack McNab.

On Sunday, an impressive drumhead service was held in the Cobourg Victoria Park, with Captain the Rev K. E. Taylor regimental chaplain, conducting the service.

Early yesterday morning the regiment left Cobourg for Colborne, where camp was set up for the night. This morning, sharp at eight o'clock, the regiment moved on to Trenton.

Mayor Harry Cory will officially welcome the soldiers to Trenton, upon their encampment at Hanna Park. Later the pies, conveyed to the camp by Alex Nathan will be presented to the soldiers.

The regiment will stay at Trenton for a short time before leaving to take up active duty at another post in Canada. The march of the battalion was not only to give the soldiers an idea of a continuous route march but to also give the route march but to also give the soldiers an idea of a continuous citizens between Toronto and Trenton a view of a crack regiment.

TRENTON READY FOR LOAN DRIVE

Buildings Decorated and Mayor Cory Urges All to Buy Bonds

Trenton, May 27.— Hundreds of flags, and red, white and blue bunting made its appearance on the buildings throughout the town on Saturday in commemoration of May 24 and the forthcoming Victory Loan Drive.

In front of the Post Office, Major Angus Mowat had a number of sandbags thrown up to form a sentry box, reminding the people passing along Dundas Street of the war. Huge Union Jacks were flying from practically every building on the main street.

Mayor Harry R. Cory in a proclamation issued on Saturday urged the citizens of Trenton to buy Victory Loan Bonds. "We all cannot subscribe large amounts – but we each can do out part and each individual effort no matter how small will in the aggregate accomplish the desired result".

"Towns and cities in Ontario are being decorated for the occasion", he said, "and I therefore call on all loyal citizens in Trenton to decorate their homes and business places with flags and otherwise between the dates of May 24th and 31st said decorations to remain in place during the Loan Campaign".

Wonderful Progress

Progress of the Trenton War Workers in their Mexican Tea Rooms headquarters has been somewhat phenomenal. The group were enabled last week to present a further $30.00 to the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross.

In addition 20,000 cigarettes and 1,000 chocolate bars were despatched overseas to the Trenton boys in the regiment.

Teas are served each afternoon but during July and August the rooms will be closed. Handmade articles are offered for sale by display in the tea rooms. Receipts between March 21 and May 14 have totalled $237.33.

125 GIRL CADETS NOW AT TRENTON

Trenton High School Has Friendly Rivalry Before Inspection

Trenton, May 27.—When Captain Widdis, cadet inspecting officer from Military District No. 3, at Kingston, pays his official annual visit to Trenton High School this year, he will have the pleasure of inspecting the cadet drill and manoeuvres of 125 girl cadets as well as 85 boy cadets.

Inspection will be held on Thursday afternoon, May 29, at two o'clock.

There is said to be some friendly rivalry between the girl and boy cadet corps, since the organization of the former corps some two months ago. The inspection is expected to draw a large crowd of parents and friends.

Group Captain T. A. Lawrence, Commanding Officer of the Trenton Airport will take the salute on the march past.

Major Angus Mowat, who has been in command of Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, stationed at Trenton since its organization last July, has been appointed recruiting officer for this district of Ontario.

Major Mowat will organize recruiting activities throughout a large section of Central and Eastern Ontario, from Bowmanville to Kingston. Headquarters for the drive are to be stationed at Kingston but duties will take him to every town and village in this region.

Canada has asked for 32,000 volunteers for active service within the next few weeks and Major Mowat's work is in connection with this new recruiting campaign.

Brazilian Freighter Lost in Storm

Rio De Janeiro, May 27 (AP)—The disabled Brazilian freighter Atalia tersely messaged "Goodbye forever" last night and then her radio went dead.

Lloyd Brasileiro, Government Shipping Company and owner of the 5,500-ton freighter, considered her lost.

The United States liner President Harrson picked up a radio message Friday reporting the Atalia disabled and in a serious condition after running into a heavy storm while enroute from Cape Town, South Africa, to Buenos Aires, with her crew of 66.

The vessel's owner said she apparently lost her rudder and suffered other damage in a storm off Tristan Da Cunha.

Three Stages of High Blood Pressure

When so many of your middle-aged and those slightly past middle-aged friends and acquaintances are being afflicted with a stroke or coronary (heart) disease, due to high blood pressure, you may wonder what causes the high blood pressure and what can be done to prevent it.

In former days when we thought about high blood pressure, the one and only cause was that the blood vessels had become hardened like pipe stems and naturally it took more pressure (blood pressure) to pump blood through these blood-vessels than through vessels that contained much "elastic" tissue. It is true that such cases are common and that the wall of the vessel breaks down, if in the brain resulting in stroke, and if in the heart resulting in coronary sclerosis and thrombosis (blocking of the vessel with a clot).

However, there are a great many cases of high blood pressure in which the blood vessels are not hardened, the increased pressure being due to other causes.

Dr. Wallace M. Yater, Washington, D.C., in Medical Annals, District of Columbia, says that there are three main stages in the life history of essential (no apparent cause) hypertension—the fluctuating, the fixed, and the decompensated. The fluctuating changes at times and under certain circumstances; the fixed does not change but there are no symptoms; the decompensated where damage has been done and symptoms such as congestive heart failure arise.

How can it be known whether the high blood pressure is in the first stage—goes up only at times, or is fixed and remains high at all times?

In these cases the patient is put to bed and given mild sedatives (quieting drugs). If the fixed stage has not set in, the blood pressure will gradually fall to normal.

What about treatment of high blood pressure? In cases where heart failure has set in, treatment is continuous rest. This is the "decompensated" type, which is just like a decompensated heart: the muscular power—elasticity—of the blood vessels has been lost.

In the fixed type trouble has started and a certain amount of rest and less work or exercise is the treatment. In the type where blood pressure is high at times and at, or nearly at, normal other times, reassurance of the physician that "true" high blood pressure is not present is all that is necessary. This assurance should keep pressure more nearly to normal at all times.

THE HOOD REVENGED

The battleship Hood, sunk east of Greenland as a result of the explosion of her magazine when hit by a shell from the German battleship Bismarck, has been revenged. Torpedo-carrying planes have sent the Bismarck to the bottom of the northern Atlantic.

The Hood was the largest of battleships afloat, a 42,100-ton ship. Her loss is thought to be more of a chance meeting, the Bismarck and other units of the German fleet having been, it is believed, on another mission, such as raiding, when the encounter came.

What happened to the Hood was one of the rarer type of accidents for the enemy torpedo pierced the magazine.

The pursuit and sinking of the Bismarck form sufficient proof of the British Navy's skill and prowess. The pursuit was relentless and finally the huge German ship was struck.

It is the tragic and sad fate of war that the gallant Hood and her heroic crew should have suffered. The Hood, like the other units of the Royal Navy has given a service to the Empire in this struggle which has added glory to the great service of the fleet.

Having settled scores with the Bismarck, the British are now in hot pursuit of the Prince Eugen, escort ship of the Bismarck.

FIRST HEAVY TANK

Canada's first heavy infantry tank has rolled out under its own power from the Angus shops, Montreal. This twenty-five ton mechanism of fourteen thousand parts is the entire product of Canadian enterprise except for engine and transmission. In the machine are two hundred pieces of armour plate of various degrees of thickness, the manufacture of which is in itself an achievement. The tank is the equal at least of the best in the world.

This was a memorable occasion and government officials and general staff officers were present. The Ministers of the Crown shook hands with the cheering workers.

Canada has made another mark as one of the great arsenals in North America manufacturing armaments and supplies for the prosecution of the war. This was a proud day for the manufacturers, the workers, the Defence Department and the people of Canada.

Manufacturing of tanks of this size has been one of the greatest problems which the Canadian industry has had to face and Canadian manufacturers and workmen have proven themselves equal to the task.

This tank is a symbol of that growing production of weight of materials and supplies which will flow to the Old Land from the factories of the North American Continent in ever increasing volume to the point where the enemy will be overwhelmed.

STAIN ON THE HUN REMAINS

When the Germans destroyed the Edith Cavell memorial in Paris, they could not remove the stain of blood and the mark of savagery which have been forever stamped on the Hun of the last war and which is the mark of the Hun in the present struggle. They cannot wipe away the disgrace of their awful deed in the execution of the British nurse who was a lover of humanity.

A correspondent tells of the enemy destroying in France the monument marking French recognition of the Republic of Czechoslovakia. Here the warped mind of the Nazi is shown. The Nazi hates particularly a race, which, like the Czech, continues in exile its government or fights the foe with sabotage in Czechoslovakia. The Germans could not leave intact the memorial which France erected to the colored troops which served her in the last war, but destroyed it in true Nazi fashion because it conflicted with their barbarous attitude towards any race but the German.

One of Many Heroines

From News of the World (London)

She was a flight-sergeant in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force. Just one of the thousands of British girls who have left their homes and families of their own free will to help with the task of winning the war.

The morning the bombers came she was in charge of a group of W.A.A.F. girls. As the first bomb crashed down she ordered her little party into a trench shelter, and stood calmly outside the entrance until every girl was safely inside.

But before she, too, could take cover another bomb burst a few yards away. She was hurled into the trench and buried with the others.

Her spine was broken, but as she lay unable to move, she continued giving orders to the dazed and shaken girls, telling them what to do to save themselves, cheering them up until the rescuers came and got them all out.

Gently, the rescue party lifted her on to a stretcher. She kept protesting, "Never mind me. Look after those girls."

For many weeks in hospital she lay at the door of death. But there is a happy ending. Her life was saved.

There you have one of the heroines of this war—unnamed, unsung.

A few months earlier she had been in a good job as a civilian. But the call of action came, and she lined up with others of Britain's gallant women and girls at a W.A.A.F. recruiting depot.

I have seen hundreds like her at R.A.F. stations this past week —girls from every walk of life, now proudly wearing the blue of the W.A.A.F. as they do their invaluable part to bring victory nearer.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Before The President's Speech

New York, May 27—No inkling has reached this column as to what the President will say in his speech. But one thing is certain: It will be one of the most important declarations in the history of the United States. It will be important for what is said, if affirmative declarations are made and bold actions indicated; it will be equally important for what may be left unsaid.

For there is a point in drifting, beyond which no successful action can be taken. There is always "a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and in miseries."

It is a question whether that tide has not already passed. Certainly, we have not used the eighteen months that have elapsed since the war began in such a way as to gather the maximum strength with which to ride the tide at the flood. Much has been done . . . "everything possible."

What we needed was the impossible. Possible and impossible are all relative terms. What is impossible under one kind of organization one sort of moral awakening, one sort of program and leadership, is perfectly possible under another type of organization, morale and leadership.

This country is paying now, and paying dearly, for the progressive laxity of a whole generation.

We are paying for the progressive tendency to treat Government as though it were something apart from the people, unconnected by any blood streams with the people, and therefore merely an administration instead of a full-blooded communal expression.

We are paying for the progressive tendency of capital to seek security through monopoly, and to consider itself as something apart from and superior to the community as a whole.

We are paying for the progressive tendency of labor to seek every privilege and reject every responsibility and to allow itself to fall into the hands of self-appointed leaders who set no standards and exercise immense power in disregard of the essential purposes of society.

We are paying for a gross materialism permeating all our institutions; a lack of social and personal discipline; a welter of inherited "rights" without appetite for the hard bread and clear water of freedom.

Yet, in the people, there is still left that margin of hard realism, that remnant of pioneer enterprise with which one could create the wholeness of freedom.

And it is to that decisive margin that the President, I hope, will speak.

I commend to him the words of Whitman:

"How beautiful the candor! All faults may be forgiven of him who has perfect candor!"

Nothing would be more refreshing to this nation—nothing would better speak to its courage and fidelity—than the voice of simple, candid truth. A voice that tells this country its exact position, that says bluntly that this country is in imminent deadly peril. That tells us the truth: that this war is no longer the Battle for Britain but is directly aimed at North and South America; that the day that Africa and the Near East are lost, Germany forms a direct juncture with Japan, South America is threatened from Dakar, the Cape Verde Islands and the Azores, a pincer move will be made upon us from the south and the United States will have disastrously lost a war, involving its freedom and independence perhaps forever.

It might be well to clear the decks and tell ourselves about our own mistakes; about our false estimation, about our smug optimism.

It might be well clearly to present alternatives—the alternatives that are, I am sure, present in a constant debate in the President's own mind. For his is a greatly gifted political mind, in a complicated personality, that must have been asking over and over again Hamlet's question: "To be or not to be . . . whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, or . . . by opposing end them."

As between alternatives, however critical, however delicately balanced the Government must decide, and then the people decide with or against the Government. I believe the people will decide with it, whatever it does, provided only that it is candid, fearless, frank, clear.

Should the President ask that a state of national emergency be declared then the way would be open for certain rapid readjustments and reorganizations that are essential.

These include a supreme miority for defence. A concerted footing in all branches of government, business, labor and intellectual activity; specific aims to be achieved in a specific time, with the allocation and devolution of precise authority; a better organization and use of the intelligence of this country; a strategy board and an economic board of the nation's first-rate brains, to integrate thinking and planning with action.

A goal to be reached—remembering that neither war nor not war is a goal at all, but only a means, only the carrying of a policy into another sphere. A vision for the people—a vision of future America, and of a future world—a vision that is not visionary, but practical and obtainable, and in harmony with the hope, the faith, and the potential energies of this great people.

Audacious, imaginative, cool, rational, intuitive planning and action. Not to be found only in overworked Government departments, though there, too. But mined out of the rich and long unemployed resources of the people themselves: the resources of idealism patriotism, talent, imagination, enterprise, that no leaders of this nation have more than superficially tapped so deep are the sources, so inexhaustible.

"The genius of America is always in the common people." It is true; it is there; it is the most cosmic genius possessed by any people on earth, since of all nations this is the most cosmic; needing only articulation from the more gifted, and direction from the more enterprising and creative.

While it is a source of profound relief—and some surprise—to learn that the Nazis refrained from assassinating out of hand the 140 Americans in the Zamzam, one cannot repress a certain nausea at the claim that this fact made the episode "an exemplary case" of the perfect observance of "the law governing a humane conduct of war according to international legal principles." When gangsters, after kidnapping an innocent victim, relieving him of his valuables and holding him in secret for a month finally release him without bodily injury, it is cause for gratification but is not usually regarded as an exemplary instance of law observance and humanitarianism.

GOLFER DESCRIBES HIS GAME

What sort of a game do I play?
I've broken a hundred just twice.
Though for lessons I frequently pay,
Somehow I continue to slice;
My right shoulder gets in the way
And my putting has never been nice.

I ought to do better, I know,
But I lunge and I chop and I jerk.
I don't follow through with my blow
And I can't get the mashie to work.
I'm two dollars a day to the pro
And as much to his ball-selling clerk.

I know how the shot should be made.
My practice swing's pretty to see.
Full many a match box I've played
With a stroke that's correct as can be.
But I do something wrong, I'm afraid,
Whenever a ball's on the tee.

My handicap? Four strokes too low.
One good game and that's what I get.
Just ask all the fellows who know;
They take me whenever I bet.
The committee won't raise me although
I've never played up to it yet.

SUEZ CANAL

Ship me somewheres east of Suez, where the best is like the worst,
Where there aren't no Ten Commandments, an' a man can raise a thirst.

These lines from Kipling's "Mandalay" show that the poet looked upon Suez as the place where the east begins.

The narrow Isthmus of Suez formed the only land connection between Africa and Asia and for thousands of years Egyptians, Greeks, Romans and Arabs dreamed of a canal that would permit water transportation between the Mediterranean and the Red seas.

When Napoleon explored the Suez isthmus with the view of cutting it in two by a canal he found among the shifting sands vestiges of canals dug by the Egyptians nearly 3,000 years earlier.

Today the Suez Canal is referred to as the "jugular vein of the British Empire," but it was not always so regarded by the British themselves.

After the French promoter Ferdinand de Lesseps in 1854 obtained from the Khedive of Egypt a concession to form a private company to build the Suez Canal, the British used their influence to hold up final approval of the enterprise by the Sultan of Turkey until 1866.

During a debate in parliament on the proposed Suez Canal as early as 1851 Lord Palmerston said:

"It cannot be made, it shall not be made, it will not be made; but if it were made there would be a war between France and England for the possession of Egypt."

The British feared that construction of the Suez Canal would give France undue influence over Oriental commerce.

When in 1858 De Lesseps offered for sale 400,000 shares of stock in his private Suez Canal company, the British made no bid. French citizens took more than 200,000 shares, Turkish citizens took 90,000 shares and the other 85,506 shares were taken by the Khedive of Egypt, who was nominally a subject of the Sultan.

It was not until 1875 that Disraeli bought for the British government a large block of Suez Canal company stock, including the shares owned by the Khedive of Egypt, for $3,976,582 pounds sterling.

Even today the Suez Canal is nominally owned and operated by a private French company in which the British government holds seven-sixteenths of the stock.

THREE BUDGET TAXATION BILLS GIVEN 3RD READING

Finance Minister Rejects Proposal of Opposition Leader

HEATED DEBATE

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 27 —(CP)— Finance Minister Ilsley has rejected a suggestion that Federal tax proposals based on the suggestion that the provinces have the individual and corporation income tax fields be held in abeyance until the provinces agree.

The suggestion was made by Conservative House Leader Hanson in the House of Commons last night when the bell amending the Excess Profits Tax Act was under consideration, in connection with a clause imposing a tax of 15 per cent on the profits of unincorporated businesses.

Mr Ilsley told Mr. Hanson he had not heard from Ontario on the proposal that the provinces give up their income and corporation taxes and accept a grant from the Dominion instead, equal to either their tax returns from the field or the service cost on their debt.

Three taxing bills based on the budget received third reading—amendments to the Excess Profits Tax Act, the Excise Act and the Customs Tariff—and the House spent the latter part of the night sitting on Fisheries Department estimates.

"Unless he can get a response from and some accommodation with Ontario does the Minister think he ought to put that section (on profits taxes) into effect?" asked Mr. Hanson.

"Yes," said Mr. Ilsley.

"Well, I disagree with that," said Mr. Hanson. "I think it is unfair and unjust."

He said no harm would be done by suspending operation till the situation with the provinces became clear, but Mr. Ilsley said this suggestion was inconsistent with the scheme of taxation and he could not agree.

Admits High Taxes

"The whole theory of the p[illegible]cial offer is that the taxes go on," said the Minister. "We must take the responsibility for what we do and we did it with our eyes open. If by any chance any province does not come in, the taxes are not so high that both sets of taxes can not be borne. But they are high, I will admit."

Discussion of the Excess Profits Tax Act drew from M. J. Coldwell, Acting C.C.F. House leader, an expression of hope that after a year's operations the government would be able to institute a more effective system of applying the tax. He noted a number of large companies showed increased profits in 1940 over 1939 but found available information insufficient to enable him to deal adequately with their positions.

J. J. Kinley (Lib. Queen's-Lunenburg), referring to reports repeated in the House that new millionaries had been created since the war began, said he could not see how any millionaires could be created under the present scale of taxation.

Taxes on excess could not be criticized but they should be applied to all. The wheat pools in western Canada were enjoying large profits because owing to the market situation grain remained longer in storage than usual, yet they were not taxed because they were co-operatives.

Wheat Pool Cited

"Why should anyone in this country, especially in these critical days, escape the payment of a tax on any excess?" he asked. "But we find the wheat pools which operate under the guise of co-operation, though they have a financial and sharehouders' structure that is rather mysterious, and though they are becoming a commercial dictatorship in the country, do not pay income tax."

John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, joined with Mr. Hanson in expressing fear the present tax syetem would make it impossible to start new industries. Harry Jackman (Con. Toronto-Rosedale) suggested the government did not want new peacetime industries.

Mr. Ilsley said he would not agree with either suggestion. New industries could come to the board of referees under the Excess Profits Tax and have a standard profit fixed for the purpose of taxation under the act. The profit would be based on what was normal in the type of business concerned.

Suggestion Made

On the customs tariff amendments a suggestion from Thomas Reid (Lib. New Westminster) that the date in which duties are charged on United States potatoes be set back from June 15 in order to give protection to early British Columbia potatoes now being marketed started a tariff discussion which was ruled out of order by the chairman.

Mr. Reid said potatoes entered free of duty except from June 15 to end of July but the early British Columbia crop came on the market about May 23 and met competition from duty-free potatoes from the Southern States.

Mr. Hanson said the suggestion would fall on deaf ears and suggested the whole potato tariff should be put back where it was before the United States trade treaty. When Mr. Ilsley asked if Mr. Hanson wished to scrap the whole treat the Conservative House Leader said he was not making that suggestion but thought Canadian producers ought not to have been obliged to pay such a high price for the treaty

No Time to Criticize

Ross Macdonald, (Lib. Brantford) said this was no time to criticize trade arrangements with the United States but rather to develop friendship with that country. He took Mr. Hanson to task for complaining of lack of leadership in Canada and said the leadership given by Prime Minister Churchill in Great Britain and President Roosevelt in the United States was made possible by the support given them by opposition parties.

"We have great leadership in Canada but what has happened?" he said. "Whenever a member of the opposition parties arises to address a public audience they do nothing but decry a man who is giving them leadership, the man they should be praising".

Mr. Ilsley introduced and secured first reading for the Bill to impose the new Federal Succession Duties and said it would not be called for second reading before Wednesday. The Income Tax Amendment Bill has yet to be introduced.

J. Kinley (Lib. Queen's-Lunenburg) object to exemption from income taxation of wheat pools in Western Canada.

Married Civil Servants May Get Salary Increases

Toronto, May 27 (CP).—Salary increases for married Ontario civil servants in the bracket of $1,200 to $3,000 a year will be determined this week, Premier Hepburn said today. The increases are to compensate for increased federal taxation and higher living costs.

Mr. Hepburn said a recommendation made by C. J. Foster, civil service commissioner, has gone to all ministers. The cabinet will then determine the exact increases to be granted later. The original plan included those receiving from $1,200 to $2,400 but the bracket has been widened including those receiving up to $3,000.

HELP FINISH THE JOB _ BUY VICTORY BONDS

A Small Price For Freedom!

The average Canadian family, confused by the deluge of large figures from Ottawa, probably wants to know just what the new budget is costing. Mr. Norman McLeod, an able Ottawa correspondent, tries to answer this question in the Victoria Times. He finds that the average Canadian family must pay $91 a year in taxes if it does not own an automobile, and $123 if it does.

The average Canadian family, it seems, consists of three members and has an annual income of $1,432. This family escapes the income tax, but the five percent. defence tax will cost it $51.60. Going to a movie once a week, the family will pay $7.28 a year in amusement taxes, $3 a year in the sugar tax, $19.20 in sales taxes, and $10 in tobacco taxes. This makes up $91.08, a positive minimum, since it includes no taxes on liquor, cosmetics and other luxuries.

Every third average family in Canada owns an automobile. If it buys a new low-priced car this year the tax will be $250, or $25 a year on the basis of 10 years of use. The average family will buy 218 gallons of gasoline in the year, paying the Federal Government $6.54, apart from provincial taxes. Thus they figure the tax on a car brings the average car-owning family's total contribution up to $123.62 a year. Before the war such a family would have paid about $30.

These are the plain facts which the head of the average family will have to budget for, not forgetting, in addition, his provincial and municipal taxes. The facts are not pleasant, but they represent the best investment he could possibly make. What they help to buy is cheap at the price.—Vancouver Sun.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 27

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHERE are auguries of an active and intriguing day, in which there should develop some sound methods for giving security and solidity to the fortunes and objectives, judging by lunar and mutual aspects. This should be demonstrated or involve public, community or group interests, with emphasis placed on social affairs as well as domestic and sentimental relations. There may be unforeseen changes sustained by sound reasons and logic, but nevertheless there are omens of duplicity, fraud and undercover attempts to ensnare or betray.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an active year in which things move into solid and substantial grooves, with security for the future, probably of a public nature or involving group solidarity. Revamping of plans or other changes may be required but in all be alert to fraud, schemes and hidden enmity or attempts to undermine, by intrigue and subtlety. A happy year of a social, domestic, cultural or romantic association is shown.

A child born on this day should be studious, persistent, dependable, with creative ability in art, science religion, and keen interest in public welfare. It may be easily imposed upon and deceived, because of jealousy or secret enmity.

For Wednesday, May 28

RATHER propitious conditions may accelerate all activities of this day in desired channels, making for success and gratification. This operates in many directions of public as well as private importance, with the friendly support of those in key positions to promote desired ends and objectives. There may be some trivial delays or disappointments but the chief menace will be found in travel, transportation, correspondence, so be particularly cautious against deception or misconstruction with all kinds of writings or publication.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a fairly active and successful year, with some sudden developments of an unlooked for nature. Those in prestige and influence are in a cooperative mood, with capital ready for promotion, nevertheless there are dangers of fraud, deception and trickery. Also correspondence, writings, documents and public agents may cause concern and travel seems beset with dangers. In all public as well as intimate relations be discreet and alert as well as amiable in difficult situations.

A child born on this day should have much versatility, being artistic, literary, inventive and original and as well hard working. It may suffer through the treachery of agents or representatives as well as through writings.

Fashion Flashes

EVERYTHING IS DUCKY with one frock. It is in green silk crepe with a print design of white, brown and black ducks with bright yellow bills. Draped bodice and knife-pleated skirt.

A HEADLINER is that famous turban usually done in crocheted straw with long-stemmed tulips in red or yellow or white thrust through the center drapery.

A CARRY OVER from winter is the leopard for we note that leopard capes are being worn by some of the smartest women. Nice over beige suits.

NEVER ENOUGH jackets and so there's always room for one more. A useful model is in black and white-checked cotton tweed made on double-breasted lines with black and white buttons and a quilted white cotton lining.

FOR A GOOD LIFT to brighten up a dark frock or suit we recommend a hat and plastron in striped red and white pique.

THE COUNTRY CLUB schedule generally includes many dinner dates. Designed for a function of this type is a delightful frock made with high round neck and sleeveless. It is of gray silk organza posed over rose-colored satin crepe. The hem has garlands of hand-painted roses and green leaves. Matching green velvet ribbon sash with streamers.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Some Reasons Why It's Unfortunate to Be An Only Child In Family

Some friends of mine have a son who is something of a prodigy in their eyes, but his genius is apparent most in the way he keeps their home in an uproar. Every time I go there, I thank Heaven there aren't many of his kind about. Usually I go away feeling the parents are making a mistake in allowing him to grow up so eccentric and self-centered. Their son is "different", alright, but I'm afraid this difference that seems to them so admirable now may be something that wouldn't make them so proud, or their son so happy, later on.

I think that couples who have only one child — and, alas, their numbers are increasing — try harder than others to make geniuses of their offspring. There are a number of reasons why it is unfortunate to be an only child, and not the least important is that an only daughter or only son becomes the center of all the hopes and ambitions of the parents, with less chance of developing her or his own natural bent in life.

A few weeks ago a young man came to me to ask me if I could speak to his parents. His father and mother had determined that he should be a doctor. He wanted to do something with mechanics. His favorite hobby was monkeying with an old car he had. Medicine held no interest for him and yet his family were practically forcing him to go to medical college

After the boy spoke to me, I thought about the matter for a long while before I spoke to the boy's mother and father. When I did, I could see that they resented my interference. I haven't heard yet whether I did the boy any good or not. I sincerely hope I did, for he will be a far better citizen if he is happy in some mechanical profession or trade than if he were unhappy as a medical man. I can just imagine a young doctor, disliking his work and being called out in the middle of a winter's night to drive five or ten miles in a sleigh to attend a sick person.

I know an only son who has set up practice now as a lawyer. He didn't care particularly for law, but his father and his grandfather were lawyers, and he was headed straight for a law school, almost as soon as he was born. Now, he isn't happy or successful as a lawyer. But he does love to build things. He would like to be a builder or a contractor and he certainly has a marked talent in that direction. Yet, there he is with his law office, and his father and grandfather both waiting for him to carry on their hopes and ambitions and achieve success in it. I hope that someday he may break loose and go the way he wants to, but chances are he won't. It's too late; it would mean too much uprooting and changing. Few have the courage to make such a change in their lives.

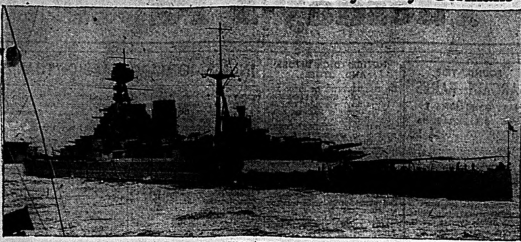
Giant British Battle Cruiser Destroyed by Germans



H.M.S. HOOD

The huge battle cruiser, H.M.S. Hood, the largest warship afloat, has been destroyed in a sea battle off Iceland with units of the German navy. The German battleship Bismarck, recently put into commission, is credited with the Hood's destruction. The Hood, fully loaded, displaced 46,300 tons and was 860 feet long. She was armed with eight 15-inch guns. The Bismarck was sunk early on Tuesday by torpedo - carrying planes.

BATTLE CRUISER HOOD SUNK BY HIT IN MAGAZINE

Shell From German Battleship Bismarck Hits British Ship in Vital Spot

FEAR ALL CREW LOST

London, May 27. —(CP Cable)— Britain's 42,100-ton battle cruiser H.M.S. Hood, largest warship in the world, was blown to bits in the waters between Greenland and Iceland Saturday by an "unlucky hit" from the new German battleship Bismarck and today the British fleet furrowed the North Atlantic in pursuit of the Nazi craft.

The Admiralty announced the fleet was seeking to bring the fleeing Nazis to "close action".

With aerial torpedoes, the fleet air army already had blasted into the Germans, scoring at least one hit. "Operations are still proceeding", the Admiralty said briefly.

The Admiralty, in announcing loss of the Hood — largest single naval loss suffered by the Royal Navy since war began — said the Bismarck scored an "unlucky hit" in a munitions magazine. Fear was expressed that more than 1,300 had been lost.

The 35,000-ton Bismarck received damage, but it was not known to what extent.

Saturday evening British torpedo-planes, combining reconnaissance with action, attacked the German units, of unspecified strength. These planes operate either from the broad decks of aircraft carriers or can be catapulted from warships. They are one of the most threatening weapons of a modern navy.

German Warships Flee

The Admiralty said that after the fatal hit on the Hood the German forces "made every effort to shake off pursuit". But the British warships apparently were close at heel, counting somewhat on damage to the Bismarck to slow her flight.

There was wide speculation that more powerful units of the fleet were speeding to the scene of action following the brief engagement of the Hood and Bismarck.

The German high command placed the scene off Iceland and claimed the Bismarck and all the other German forces emerged from the battle virtually unscathed and continued their Atlantic operations. A British battleship was forced to withdraw, the Germans claimed.

Greenland, protection of which has been assumed by the United States, and Iceland, now under British occupation, are separated by a 250-mile stretch of water, the Strait of Denmark. It may have been somewhere near the mouth of this strait, on the edge of the Western Hemisphere, that the battle occurred.

The brief Admiralty communique shocked the Empire during celebration of the 122nd anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth. It said:

"British naval forces intercepted early this morning off the coast of Greenland German naval forces, including the battleship Bismarck.

"The enemy were attacked, and during the ensuing action H.M.S. Hood (Capt. R. Kerr, C.B., R.N.) wearing the flag of Vice-Admiral L. E. Holland, received an unlucky hit in a magazine and blew up.

"The Bismarck has received damage and the pursuit of the enemy continues.

"It is feared there will be few survivors from H.M.S. Hood."

That was all.

Tirpitz May Be In Unit

Speculation immediately arose whether the Tirpitz, sister ship of the Bismarck and known to have been completed about the same time this year, also was in the Northern Atlantic battle.

It was assumed that probably both these battleships and other German vessels—two more battleships may have been completed recently—slipped past the British blockade along the Norwegian coast on a raiding mission.

Apparently they went at once to the Greenland-Iceland area, for authoritative British quarters hinted Friday that German raiders were near American shores.

The Hood's loss was tragically ironic in that her completion in 1920 was delayed for the installation of special armor to protect her vitals as a result of the lessons learned in the 1916 Battle of Jutland.

In that battle, at least two British capital ships were destroyed by exploded magazines.

Built at an original cost of more than £6,000,000 (normally $30,000,000), the Hood was heavily reinforced in a two-year overhaul in 1929-30.

She was rated a battle cruiser—one of three in the Royal Navy—because she was of battleship size and armament but was more lightly armored in the interests of speed.

In trials she turned up 32 knots, compared with an estimated 30-knot speed for the Bismarck. The 1930 additions to her armor, however, undoubtedly but the Hood down a few knots. Her armor weighed 13,800 tons, or about one-third the total displacement, but still was regarded as having less protection than modern battleships wear.

Equal In Armament

In gun-power, the Hood and Bismarck were almost equal, each having eight 15-inch rifles and bristling with smaller arms.

Tobacco Dealers To Pay Licence

Ottawa, May 27 —(CP)— Some 4,000 raw leaf tobacco dealers in Canada are affected by new legislation passed in the House of Commons Monday putting them on the same basis as tobacco manufacturers and charging the same $50 a year licence fee. The legislation comes into effect next Oct. 1.

The provisions were made a part of the bill to amend the excise tax act in conformity with the budget taxation changes on malt and beers.

Revenue Minister Gibson, who sponsored these sections of the bill, said "fraud and deception" had existed under the existing regulations covering the raw leaf dealers.

In 1940 the budget placed an excise duty of 10 cents a pound on raw leaf eobacco sold by affixing stamps to the packages.

Persons desiring to engage in raw leaf tobacco preparations were required to obtain a licence as raw leaf dealers at a fee of $2 a year.

Products Board Moves to Control Shipment of Cheese

Ottawa, May 27 (CP)—The Dairy Products Board has moved to control the interprovincial shipment of cheddar cheese, it was disclosed last night in a government notice published in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette.

The notice says the Board has ordered:-

1. No person shall ship cheddar cheese (process cheese, excluded) into the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island without authorization from the Board;

2. No person shall ship cheddar cheese (process cheese excluded) from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan or Manitoba into Ontario or Quebec without authorization.

Only last week the Board ordered that all cheddar cheese produced in Ontario and Quebec had been earmarked for shipment to the United Kingdom.

ROYAL NAVY

"The German battleship Bismarck has been sunk by our naval forces," the Admiralty announced tersely, in what may have been a counterpart of the 1916 Battle of Jutland.

"Details of the operations," it added, "will be announced as soon as possible."

Just how many units of the opposing fleets were involved was not disclosed, but they probably were considerable.

Damaged by Torpedo

The Admiralty announced last night that the Bismarck had been damaged by a torpedo from a fleet air arm plane, possibly launched from an aircraft carrier or catapulted from another big ship of the pursuing fleet.

This apparently slowed up the Bismarck, ordinarily capable of making at least 30 knots.

The Bismarck was 792 1-3 feet long, had a beam of 118 feet, a draught of 26 feet and carried eight 15-inch guns, 12 5.9-inch guns and 16 4.1-inch guns. She also carried four aircraft and was equipped with two catapults.

There was considerable speculation just where the British Fleet caught up with the Bismarck. Obviously the chase had covered hundreds of miles since Saturday's engagement in the Strait of Denmark, a 250-mile stretch of water between Greenland and Iceland.

May Have Cut Her Speed

In Saturday's engagement the Admiralty announced that a unit of the German force had been hit by a torpedo. If this were registered on the Bismarck, it might have cut her speed and enabled the Royal Navy to keep her in sight for her final destruction.

(Germany has never announced how many officers and men her new battleships carry, but probably the Bismarck had about the same complement as British ships of the same size, between 1,300 and 1,500 men.

(The London announcement made no mention of the fate of the Bismarck's crew.)

Fleet Admiral Guenther Luetjens, winner of promotion and the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross—Germany's highest military decoration—for his part in the Norwegian campaign last year, was in command of the German units.

Opposing him in Saturday's battle was Vice-Admiral L. E. Holland, whose pennant went beneath the waves with the Hood, after, as the Admiralty put it, the Bismarck got in an "unlucky hit" that tore into the battle cruiser's magazine.

With the loss of the Hood, Britain was left with 15 battleships and battle cruisers, the number she had in commission when the war started.

Filled by New Battleships

The gap left by the sinking of the Hood and the battleship Royal Oak, torpedoed by a Nazi u-boat at Scapa Flow early in the war, has been filled by two new battleships, the King George V and the Prince of Wales, 35,000-ton sisterships.

Germany entered the conflict with five battleships and pocket battleships and now, with the Bismarck gone, is reckoned to have three in service.

She lost the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee by scuttling in December, 1939, at Montevideo and the battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been damaged repeatedly by the Royal Air Force since they holed up several weeks ago at Brest, France.

Since the war started the Nazis have commissioned the Bismarck and also may have put the Tirpitz, her sistership, into service.

Probably Four Battleships Used

British observers said the vessels engaged in the battle probably included the 33,950-ton battleships Rodney and Nelson and possibly the 35,000-ton King George V and Prince of Wales.

Official reports of the important part which British naval planes have been taking in the battle led to the belief that an aircraft carrier had joined the action.

The Nazis claimed a British aircraft carrier and an accompanying cruiser had been damaged by dive bombers. Official British sources declined comment.

The first indication that the Royal Navy made contact again with the Nazi squadron, with which they have been seeking to close since the Hood went down off Greenland Saturday when struck in a magazine by a shell from the Bismarck, came last night in a terse admiralty communique.

"The chase of the Bismarck in the Atlantic has been hotly pursued. This evening torpedo bombers of the fleet have scored a hit with a torpedo on the Bismarck. The hunt continues."

Second Hit By British Planes

It was the second time that British torpedo-carrying planes had been credited with hits on the German battle squadron. The Admiralty announced Sunday that a German battleship had been struck by an aerial torpedo but did not identify the vessel.

The Admiralty did not disclose where the latest phase of the battle had developed, but the Nazi squadron earlier had been reported moving rapidly toward Norway and it was presumed it took place some hundreds of miles east of the spot where the Hood was sunk, probably somewhere in Denmark Strait between Greeland and Iceland.

There has been much conjecture here concerning the mission on which the Bismarck left a Norwegian port last Thursday with a squadron of lesser craft. British sources expressed belief the German ships probably were under orders to raid Britain's Atlantic transport lines.

Berlin, May 27 (AP).—It was officially admitted today that the battleship Bismarck was sunk this morning.

Just before this announcement was issued the High Command said the 35,000-ton battleship had been incapacitated but was "fighting to the last grenade".

It was said that the speed of the Bismarck had been reduced by a hit in the prow in the battle in which she sank the battle cruiser Hood, while later in the same day she was hit by an aerial torpedo, still further cutting her speed.

(The Berlin radio, heard in New York, said the Bismarck was hit by two aerial torpedoes on Monday and her rudder and propellers were damaged.

("The ship continued to fight until the morning of May 27, when it succumbed to superior enemy numbers," the broadcast continued.

("The last wireless message received reads: 'Ship out of control. Will fight to the last shell. Long live the fuehrer'.")

The German High Command claimed the British squadron has been under attack by German aircraft since early this morning.

Admiral Guenther Luetjens and Capt. Lindemann of the Bismarck, with an unstated number of the crew, lost their lives.

Warring Factions To Hold Conference

Toronto, May 27 (CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario said today he was conferring with Attorney General Gordon Conant regarding the dispute between the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association and the Incorporated Canadian Racing Associations which forced cancellation of Thorncliffe Park's spring meeting, scheduled to open yesterday.

He would not say what action was proposed, but said the government would not establish a racing commission. Last week Mr. Hepburn said the Ontario government would not intervene in the dispute.

"There'll be no commission appointed in this province," he said. "We're not going to bear the expense of any more commissions."

The office of T. J. Agar, counsel for the T.B.A., said this morning that representatives of the T.B.A. would meet with a federal government official and representatives of the I.C.R.A. in Attorney-General Conant's office today.

ON WAY TO REFORMATORY

Hamilton, May 27 (CP)—Neil Dunn, 17, of Hamilton, today is on his way to the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph following a perilous chase and capture early today.

In court he pleaded guilty to six charges involving the theft of three cars, $800 in men's furnishings, four rifles, a radio and an electric drill. He was sentenced to two years less a day plus 15 months indefinite in reformatory. On an old charge of taking a car without consent, he was given 30 days consecutive.

TWO CRUISERS,

Official quarters said the land fighting "has been most bitter and severe and enemy losses up to the present have been much heavier than ours."

"The Battle of Crete now has lasted for a week and during this whole time our troops have been subjected to an intense and continuous scale of air attacks to which owing to geographical conditions, our air force has only been able to make a very limited but gallant counterpoint.

"We have not, however, been able to prevent other descents of air-borne troops to reinforce the enemy and the weight of this attack has grown from day to day.

Reinforcements Arrive

"The battle has swayed backwards and forwards with indescribable fury at Canae and equally fiercely, although on a smaller scale at Retimo and Heraclean (Candia.)

"Reinforcements of men and supplies have reached and are reaching General Freyberg's forces and at this moment the issue of magnificent resistance hangs in the balance.

"So far the Royal Navy has prevented any landing of a sea-borne expedition, although a few shiploads of troops in Greek caiques may have slipped through.

"Very heavy losses have been inflicted by our submarines, cruisers and destroyers upon transports and upon those small Greek ships and it is not possible to state with accuracy how many thousands of the enemy troops have been drowned.

"But our losses have been heavy.

"Services rendered by the navy in defence of Crete have not been discharged without losses to them.

"Our fleet has been compelled to operate constantly without air protection.

Greater Part of Crews Saved

"Claims even more exaggerated than usual have been made by the German and Italian wireless which it has not hitherto been expedient to deny.

"It may be stated, however, that we have lost the cruisers Gloucester and Fiji, and four destroyers, the Juno, Greyhound, Kelly and Kashmir.

"By far a greater part of their crews have been saved.

"The battleships and several other ships have been damaged, but not seriously, either by hits or near misses, but all will soon be in action again and some already are at sea.

"The Mediterranean fleet is today relatively stronger compared to the Italian navy that it was before the battle of Cape Matapan.

"There is no question whatever of our naval position in the Eastern Mediterranean having been prejudicially affected.

"However the decision of battle may go, the stubborn defence of Crete, one of the important outposts of Egypt, will always rank high in military and naval annals of the British Empire.

Prospects Improved in Iraq

"In Iraq our position has been largely re-established and the prospects are greatly improved.

"There have been no further adverse developments in Syria.

"In Ethiopia daily Italian surrenders continue, many thousands of prisoners and masses of equipment being taken.

"While this drama has been enacted in the Eastern Mediterranean, another episode of arresting character has been in progress in the northern waters of the Atlantic Ocean.

"On Wednesday the 21st—Wednesday of last week—the new German battleship Bismarck, accompanied by the new eight-inch cruiser Prince Eugen, was described by our air reconnaissance at Bergen, and on Thursday, the 22nd, it was known they had left.

"Many arrangements were made to intercept them should they attempt, as seemed probable, to break out into the Atlantic Ocean with the view to striking at our convoys from the United States and during the night of the 23-24th cruisers got into visual contact with them as they were passing through Denmark Strait between Iceland and Greenland.

"At dawn on Saturday morning the Prince of Wales and the Hood intercepted these two enemy vessels.

Hood Struck by Shell at 23,000 Yds.

"There is no detailed account of the action because events have been moving so rapidly since, but the Hood was struck at about 23,000 yards by a shell which penetrated into one of the magazines and she blew up with only a very few survivors.

"This splendid vessel, although designed 23 years ago, is a serious loss to the Royal Navy and even more so are the men and officers who manned her.

Remain in Touch

"During the whole of Saturday our ships remained in touch with the Bismarck and her consort and arrangements were made effecting battle at dawn yesterday morning, but during the night the weather deteriorated, visibility decreased and the Bismarck, by making a sharp turn, shook off pursuit.

"We do not know what has happened to the Prince Eugen, but measures are being taken with respect to her.

"Yesterday, shortly before midday, Catalina aircraft, one of the considerable number of those very far reaching scouting planes which have been sent to us by the U.S.A., picked up the Bismarck and it was seen that she was making for French ports—Brest or St. Nazaire, and, on this, further rapid dispositions were made by the Admiralty.

Went Into Action Quickly

"We may say that the moment she was known to be at sea, the whole apparatus of our ocean control came into play, very far-reaching combinations began to work and last evening—from yesterday afternoon we are afraid we have not had any time to prepare a detailed statement—fleet air arm torpedo bombers and planes from the Ark Royal attacked and made a succession of attacks upon the Bismarck, which now appeared to be alone without her escort.

"About midnight we learned that the Bismarck had been struck by two torpedoes—one amidships and the other astern.

Affected Steering of Ship

"This second torpedo apparently affected the steering of the ship, for not only was she reduced to very low speed, but she continued making uncontrollable circles in the sea, in which condition she was attacked by our flotillas with two more torpedoes which brought her virtually to a standstill far from help and far outside the range within which enemy bomber aircraft from the French coast could come upon the scene.

"This morning at daylight or shortly after daylight the Bismarck was attacked by British pursuing battleships and we do not know what were the results of the bombardment.

"It appears, however, that the Bismarck was not sunk by gunfire and she will be dispatched by torpedo. This is now proceeding and it is thought that there cannot be any lengthy delay in disposing of this vessel.

"Great as is our loss in the Hood, the Bismarck must be regarded as the most powerful as she is the newest battleship in the world and the removal of her from the German navy is a very definite simplification of the task of maintaining an effective mastery of the northern seas and maintenance of the northern blockade.

"We daresay in a few days it will be possible to give a much more detailed account and, although there is shade as well as light in this picture, we feel we have every reason to be satisfied with the outcome of this fierce and memorable naval encounter."

DESPERATE

An armored drive for Canea and nearby Suda Bay, however, was believed imminent.

British and Greek forces, endeavoring to present the landing of additional Nazi troops by air, concentrated a heavy artillery fire on Malemi airport—the only place on the island where the Germans are reported to have gained a strong foothold.

24 Grounded Planes Damaged

The Royal Air Force also was reported yesterday to have badly damaged the Malemi landing field, destroying 24 grounded troop transports, and machine-gunning buildings and troops.

Advices from Cairo said the Nazis continued landing men by transport plane and parachute but that the volume of new arrivals had been reduced somewhat by heavy aircraft losses.

The Germans also have been compelled, these advices said, to use part of their air fleet to drop supplies and ammunition to the troops already landed. Some of the supplies fell into British hands.

Use of glider planes to land reinforcements was said to have been discontinued by the Germans because of extremely heavy casualties suffered during the first three days of the island invasion.

Reports Ridiculed

Axis reports that 11 British cruisers, eight destroyers, a submarine and five torpedo boats had been sunk by dive bombers in the battle for control of the sea lanes to Crete were ridiculed by well-informed quarters here.

Official circles, however, maintained silence on the subject of British naval losses.

They also declined to confirm reports that the British land forces on Crete had been reinforced, although an announcement that British marines had entered the fighting was taken generally as an indication new troops had reached the island.

Schmeling in Action

Berlin, May 27 (AP)—Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight boxing champion, was among the parachutists landed in Crete. Nazi sources said today.

Schmeling was accepted as a volunteer in the Nazi parachute forces during the summer of 1940 although he was over age, at 35, and considerably overweight for that particular branch of the service.

Last October he suffered a leg fracture in a practice jump.

BUT NEVER ITALY

A good many people continue to look for their favorite light reading to Virginio Gayda. Even then Mussolini's No. 1 editor is threatening the United States with the most dire consequences he has such an original way of doing it.

Every little while Signor Gayda will remind the American people of what the Japanese fleet is going to do to us, or what the German tanks will do to America, or to look out for a fatal stroke by Soviet Russia, or for a coup d'etat by Turkey. Signor Gayda reminds one of the Chancellor in "Iolanthe" and his pretty wards in chancery.

This perfectly awful blow to America is coming from him, and that blow from he, and this from thou, and that from ye, but never, oh, never, a real hard smash from me, Signor Gayda's Italy. — New York Times.

Three Saved From Drowning In W. Lake When Boat Founders

Two Wellington Fishermen Rescue G. Ketcheson and Two Guests After Waves Fill Craft

ON FISHING TRIP

The fact that their plight had been seen probably saved the lives of George Ketcheson, well-known Wellington, Ontario, farmer and sportsman, and two guests, Charles Rowe, 69, and Mrs. E. Finnegan, 65, both of Bowmanville, when their boat foundered in the wind-lashed waters of West Lake, late Sunday afternoon.

Charles Melton, and Bob Whitten, youthful local fishermen, who were patrolling the water in the lee of Garratt's Island, a half-mile away, saw the accident and immediately went out to the rescue. When they arrived, Rowe was clinging to the side of the boat, while Ketcheson, in an exhausted state, was keeping Mrs. Finnegan above water. She was in a semi-conscious condition.

The trio was fishing about 400 yards off Ketcheson's property, two miles east of Wellington when the accident happened. Drifting from the comparative calmness of the water off Stoney Point, the boat was suddenly swept into the white-capped waves of the open lake. Whipped by the wind into the trough, the boat took on water as waves swept over it. The motor stopped and the boat gradually filled and Mrs. Finnegan, attempting to stand on the gunwale suddenly toppled into the water. Her action brought the foundering boat to such an angle that it capsized as the men attempted to save her.

The woman, unable to swim, and hampered by heavy clothing, sank to the bottom. Ketcheson immediately dived but failed to locate her. A second later she came to the surface on the opposite side of the boat, and again sank. Ketcheson dived again, and managed to clutch the woman by the clothing.

Rowe, clung to the boat, and Ketcheson, unable to break the grip of the woman, was forced to let go several times, but managed to get back and secure a hold on the keel until help arrived.

The three were rushed by motor boat to Ketcheson's home, where Dr. R. S. Thompson, of Wellington, administered treatment. Mrs. Finnegan was successfully revived, but her condition was said to be anything but favorable on Sunday night.

Cobourg Chosen As Stopping Place For Victory Torch

Cobourg, Ont., May 27 (CP)—Cobourg has been chosen as one of the stopping places for the 1941 Victory Loan Torch and on June 9, the torch will be brought up under special escort from Trenton. A guard of honor, made up of a detachment of the Veterans' Guard of Cobourg will present arms when the torch arrives at Victoria Park in Cobourg June 9 at noon.

The scroll which accompanies the torch is being signed by the Mayors of all the municipalities thus visited, and in Cobourg Mayor Jack Burnett will sign the scroll on behalf of the citizens of that town.

Judge L. V. O'Connor will administer the pledge to the citizens in which they promise to hold aloft the torch of freedom. A gigantic parade has been organized for that date to mark the visit of the torch.

In the afternoon the cavalcade of floats will arrive in Cobourg on its journey eastward and this event will also be marked by a parade. At the request of the local Victory Loan Committee, the Mayor will proclaim the whole day a public holiday. Guest speaker at the morning program will be W. A. Fraser, M.P., of Trenton, member for Northumberland County.

ACCUSED FACES FIRING SQUAD

Executed at Rome for Attempting to Take Life of King Victor Emmanuel

Rome, May 27—(AP)—Vasail Laci Mihailoff accused of firing several shots at an automobile in which King Victor Emmanuel was riding with the Albanian Premier on a visit to that country May 17 was executed at dawn today in Tirana prison.

The Italians claimed Mihailoff, who was described as a Greek afflicted with "a poetic madness", fired the shots in an attempt on the life of the Albanian Premier, Shefket Verlaci. All the shots went wild.

Mihailoff was convicted by a military tribunal and sentenced to death before a firing squad.

SIX-YEAR-OLD HERO REWARDED

Action of young six-year-old Freddie Harrison in saving his little sister Mary from the ruins of their home after it had been bombed, has earned him the admiration of Britain and the U.S. More material appreciation from the U.S. took the form of a cheque for $4.15 (about £1), sent by a member of the Vimy post of the Toledo Canadian legion, Ohio. The mayor of Hendon is shown presenting the cheque to Master Freddie Harrison at Hendon town hall. His little sister, rescued by him during the blitz is on the left.

Cairo, May 27 (AP)—A number of small Axis columns have crossed the Egyptian frontier in the region of Salum and advanced several miles to the east, compelling British forces to give ground, the Middle East Command announced today.

In the lakes area of Ethiopia British forces are engaged "in clearing the battlefield and rounding up scattered remnants of Italian forces," it added.

Rains Quench Most Of Forest Fires In Canada

(By the Canadian Press)

For the first time in a week fire-fighting crews battling major forest blazes in Ontario and Quebec had the situation in hand today after rains drenched out most of the fires and checked the spread of others.

Only in Gogama area north of Sudbury, Ont., where the rain which fell yesterday was not heavy enough to douse the flames, was the fire still raging. The showers, however, dampened the woodland enough to slow down the advance of the 600-square mile fire.

Another fire around Timmins, Ont., north of Gogama was almost extinguished after showers fell over the 15,000-acre area which it covered.

A downpour doused the fires which have been burning for a week near St. Donat, Que., in the Laurentian Hills. Forestry officials said all the blazes were under control, permitting 200 soldiers sent into the region from Joliette military camp to return to their base.

Extensive Damage

Damage believed extensive was caused in timber stands of the Gatineau Valley before the rain quelled the flames burning in eleven places in that area. Fire-fighters said the rain was a "Godsend."

Cloudy skies over Northwestern Ontario held a promise of more rain in the area east of Port Arthur where showers have already dealt a death blow to two huge fires. The fires, which threatened the lumbering communities of Red Rock and Nipigon, destroyed 1,000,000 cords of pulpwood before they were brought under control.

In the country west, northwest and southwest of Edmonton fires which blazed last week were brought under temporary control when rain and snow fell in the area. One fire, in the Rocky Mountain House district southwest of Edmonton, destroyed several saw mills and farm buildings.

Deafness in Many Cases Not a Disease

Medical authorities have proven that in a large number of cases deafness is brought about by conditions not due to disease. Aurine Ear Balsam, a prescription, has proven a blessing to many people. Used since 1895 by those who are deafened and bothered by ringing, buzzing head noises due to hardened or coagulated wax (cerumen). Over a million packages sold. Make a no-risk test. Must satisfy or money refunded. Ask today for Aurine Ear Balsam at Doyle's Drug Store or other leading druggists.

TO US - THE TORCH IS THROWN

CANADA!
Ypres, April 22-24, 1915

In this famous drawing from PUNCH, Sir Bernard Partridge commemorated for all time the heroic stand of Canada's First Division against poison gas and overwhelming odds. As our soldiers held the line then, so Canada must hold it now.

A generation ago, from Flanders Fields, our soldier dead threw us their torch to hold it high, as they had held it from Second Ypres to Mons, from Somme to Passchendaele.

For four years they kept their rendezvous with death. They knew no peers but the living who served with them, and their spirit so animated the Canadian Corps that it became the spearhead of victory. That same spirit animates our troops today.

We hold the torch. We cannot do less than pour out our dollars as they pour out their all — FOR FREEDOM.

Zellers And Deacon Shirt Head Girls' Softball Loop Following Weekend of Heavy Shellacking

Zellers Had Chance to Head Loop Alone but Could Not Finish Game

HEAVY HITTING

War clubs of the participating teams on the girls' City Softball League beat out a husky holiday tattoo over the week-end. When the smoke had cleared the champion Zellers' squad and the Deacon Shirt nine headed the loop with one victory against no losses, while Corbins, Vikings and Swaco occupied the last three positions with one loss and no wins.

The rampaging bats of last year's champion Big "Z" swamped the offerings of two Swaco pitchers on Monday night, but proved their own undoing as the pastime was called on account of darkness with a full inning left to play. At the end of the sixth Chuck Barnett's prides were leading 33-14, but Umps Cy Young and Eddie Schrieder decided "no more" and that was that. The pastime was called no game and will be replayed.

On Saturday night a spectacular fielding play by Deacon's Betty Ridley in the last inning pulled the game out of the fire, Deacons copping the tussle by a 20-19 win.

Zellers-Swacos

Smashing out 11 runs for eight hits in the first innings, the Zellers' squad blasted the offerings of Mondeville and Stead Swaco hurlers, for a total of 33 runs and 27 hits before darkness intervened. Mondeville took the Zellers' batting blitz for nearly three innings, yielding 24 runs and 19 hits before the elongated Stead came to the rescue.

The Zeller war clubs, however nurtured their barrage and aided by some sloppy fielding on the part of the opposition, smashed out nine more runs before the curtain fell.

"Pee Wee" Colden did a good job on the Zeller mound, giving up but 7 hits in the first four frames, but she let up in the last two inning when she was nicked for eleven more.

Helen Garrow led the Zeller big guns with a homer, a double and three singles; Douglas got two doubles and three singles; Wilma Clark four singles. Every other member of the team hit safely.

Corneal's homer, double and two singles, paved the way for the loser's 13 runs. Langman, Swaco receiver, lined out a homer, double and single with Colden getting three singles to help along the cause. The Swaco defence was not up to par and many errors opened the way for more Zeller runs.

The teams:

Zellers—Clark, r.f.; Bennett, 3b; Garrow, s.s.; Douglas, l.f.; Sherry, 1b; Thompson, c; Hunter, 3b; Doolittle, 2b; Colden, p.

Swacos—Fralick, 3b; Corneal, r.f.; Stead 2b; Colden, l.f.; Rowbotham, 1b; Mondeville, p., 2b; Langman, c; Richardson, s.s.; Evans, c.

A Real Surprise

Betty Ridley's double-play catch in the last half of the ninth inning gave the Deacon lassies a 20 to 19 win over the Corbin Lock girls on Saturday night following a game that saw lusty hitting, some sensational fielding and a comedy of errors tossed in for good measure.

Deacons scored seven in the initial frame and seven more in the fifth to shell Marg. Anderson from the Corbin hilltop and then were forced to come from behind in the ninth to score three to assume the final lead, after the Corbin lassies had rallied in the latter stages. With the tying and winning runs aboard Betty Ridley sewed up the piece with a spectacular double-play catch of Miss Burgess' liner for the last out.

Deacons counted no less than eight extra base hits, including homers by Miss Sharpe and Jean Corneal, Joyce Hoodhouse, the Deacon's steady catcher banging out two doubles and a single for good measure. Sylvia Reddick led the Corbins on the attack with two circuit blows and a single in three official tries for a perfect batting average. Miss Burgess, "Pete" Haslip and M. Ellis also hit well for the losers.

The line-ups:

Corbins: Marsh, 2b; Burgess, c.f.; Blaind, c; Reddick, 1b; Anderson and Reid, p.; Hill and B. Reddick, l.f.; McKenna, s.s.; Crouter and Haslip, 3b and Ellis, r.f.

Deacons: McMurter, p.; Hoodhouse, c.; Sharpe, c.f.; Dolden, 3b; Weeks, 1b; Samain, s.s.; Ridley, 2b; Corneal, r.f. and p.; Barragar, l.f. and Danson, r.f.

RELIANCE MOVES INTO SECOND SPOT OF MEN'S LEAGUE

Archie Major Holds Point Anne to Eight Scattered Singles to Win 19-7

SCORE 7 IN SEVENTH

With Archie Major scattering eight single-base blows in a masterful manner his Reliance teammates made merry at the plate as the "plane-makers" downed the Point Anne "Cementmen" 19 to 7 in a City League softball fixture at Coleman Flats last evening. By winning the Reliance "mushballers" advanced into second place in the City League standing.

Archie Major hurled steady softball for the Reliance and was actually never in trouble, errors by his infield mates helping the "Cementmen" in some of their scoring. He allowed but eight one-base blows, walked three and struck out the last batter of the game. Skipper Bubby Gaulin started his youthful pitching protege, 18-year-old Doug Bennett, who yielded up twenty hits, including home runs by Vern Goyer, and Andy Gray, Alfie Rowbotham getting a single, double and triple, as Major helped his own cause with three timely singles.

Goyer Helps

The hero of the piece, aside from Major's pitching effort, was Vern Goyer with his sensational fielding and his three hit effort, including one circuit blow. The "Cementmen" kept within striking distance of the winners until the Reliance broke out with a seven-run splurge in the seventh and tie up the bag. Despite the fact the Reliance booted the ball for eight bad errors, they tightened up in the clutches and kicked through with three double plays to choke off Skipper Gaulin's rallies.

The lucky draw ticket numbers for War Saving stamps were 81, 210 and 128.

St. Louis Cardinals Only Club In National League that Packs Real Dynamite at the Plate

Score Seventh Straight Win by Defeating Cubs 12-11 in Eleven Frames

DETROIT WINS ONE

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The only club in the National League that packs dynamite at the plate is that swashbuckling crew bossed by Billy Southworth in St. Louis.

They have had more "big innings" than any other team in the senior circuit this spring and they are dangerous right up to final out in every game.

They proved it again yesterday by chopping down Chicago Cubs 12-11 with two home runs in the 11th inning.

It was a wild affair. The Cards took a 9-0 lead in the first three innings, scoring seven times in the third, and then came apart in the next stanza to let the Cubs score six runs and eventually take the lead 10-9 in the seventh.

Then in the last of the ninth Don Padgett doubled home the tying run. In the 11th Bill Nicholson homered to put the Cubs ahead again but Jim Brown, who had doubled with the bases loaded in the third, hit a home run to tie the score and Padgett followed immediately with another round-tripper to win the game.

This was the Cards' seventh straight victory.

Dodgers Presented with Win

Brooklyn Dodgers were presented with a 6-4 triumph by the humble Phillies when Centrefielder Joe Marty dropped a fly with the bases loaded in the fifth and Shortstop Bob Bragan made a wild relay on the same play. The combination of the two errors allowed all three runners to score.

Cincinnati Reds outslugged Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 in a night game. The Reds punched out 13 hits, including home runs by Harry Craft and Ernie Koy. Bucky Walters was racked for 10 safeties, but squirmed through the route for his fifth victory against four defeats.

In the only American League encounter Detroit Tigers stopped Cleveland Indians 5-3 with three runs in the ninth, two on Bruce Campbell's double with the bases loaded.

The blowoff in the ninth brought Buck Newsom his much-needed third victory instead of his seventh defeat after he had been removed for a pinchhitter.

HORSE-RACING SITUATION STILL IS DEADLOCKED

Official From Ottawa Coming to Toronto to Investigate the Trouble

DEMANDS NOT MET

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—The horse-racing situation was still deadlocked today after a meeting of the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association at which they re-affirmed their decision to refuse to race their horses unless the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association, governing body of racing in Ontario, grants their demand.

The horsemen are demanding that the I. C. R. A. recognize Ryland New of Oakville, Ont., as their representative on its board.

Their stand has already resulted in the breeders refusing to enter horses in the final two days of the spring meeting at Woodbine Park last Friday and Saturday, and cancellation of Thorncliffe Park's spring meeting which was scheduled to open yesterday.

Race followers could see only two possible openings which might lead to immediate resumption of racing in Toronto. One was that the I. C. R. A. might yet recognize New. The other was rumored possibility that the Long Branch and Dufferin Parks might withdraw from I. C. R. A. Both these tracks are operated by the Fred Orpen interests.

Meanwhile, it was reported that a government official was on his way to Toronto from Ottawa to confer with racing officials with a view to straightening out the differences between horsemen and track operators.

Kingston Combines Win Two Games In New Ball Loop

(By the Canadian Press)

Unless the early portents are misleading, the rest of the Senior Interprovincial Baseball League may have reason to regret that Kingston Combines ever joined their group.

When sport-minded folk in Ottawa and vicinity began laying plans for the new circuit, Kingston was invited to enter and accepted with alacrity. Now that the first week-end's games have been played the "outsiders" lead the six-team field by two full games.

Combines only looked as good as they needed to in winning their week-end set with Hull B. and B. and Buckingham, but they have the pick of the Kingston City League to choose from and appear to have an edge, in manpower at least, on the rest of the teams.

For the former Central Ontario League affiliates, tight pitching and timely hitting proved the successful formula in each contest.

Elliott's Homer Wins Game

Young Wayne Conner, former junior star, set Hull B. and B. down with seven hits in the inaugural at Kingston Saturday while his mates collected 10 off Barbaro for a 6-5 verdict. In the game at Buckingham, Sunday Manager Bob Elliott's home run with one man on in the eighth was decisive in Kingston's 8-3 victory.

The victory over Buckingham was important since Kingston and Buckingham play a double schedule. Each game in the win column stands as two victories and each loss sets the losing side back two games.

In the other Saturday game, Smiths Falls Railroaders rode out a five-run, first-inning assault by Hull Volants, and went on to an 8-7 triumph in 11 innings. Herb Morton, of Brockville, Ont., struck the winning blow in his own cause by singing home the winning run after holding Volants to five hits in the last 10 innings.

Cardinal Refused Entry

In a Sunday double-header at Hull's new stadium, Ottawa Royal Canadiens made their first start a winning one by trouncing Smiths Falls 7-5 while Hull B. and B. handed Hull Volants their second loss by an 8-5 count.

An application by Cardinal, Ont., for entry in the league was rejected. Officials said last night it had been decided to continue with six teams for this season.

Billy Conn Scores T.K.O. over Knox In Eighth Round

By DUKE MORAN

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Pittsburgh, May 27 (AP)—Billy Conn, waltzing light heavyweight champ stalking Joe Louis, points proudly to his eighth-round knockout triumph over pudgy Bobby Knox, Dayton, Ohio, heavyweight, as a sample of what he "will give Joe next month."

"I've had the workout I needed now and I'm ready for the bomber," asserted Billy a few minutes after his thumping lefts and rights floored Knox three times and beat him into helplessness last night before Pittsburgh's largest fight crowd of 27,043 spectators.

Billy, weighing 180, was 10 pounds lighter than his 24-year-old opponent. He started slowly against Knox.

"That boy can hit harder than anybody gives him credit," commented Knox later. "He doesn't have much of a right, though."

Before the battle promoter Mike Jacobs had indicated he might listen to demands that Buddy Baer be substituted for Billy in June unless Conn proved his rights against Knox. The clamor for Baer arose after his gallant stand against Louis last Friday.

Conn's hometown stand brought him the biggest purse of his career —a 33 1-3 per cent slice of the $66,000 house.

Canam Loop Raises Monthly Salary Limit

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 27 —(AP) —The eight-team Canadian-American baseball league voted yesterday to increase the monthly salary limit from $1,600 to $1,800, maximum for a Class C league.

The change, requested by the Rome club on the ground defence industry salaries are proving attractive to players, was favored by six teams, Rev. Harold J. Martin, president, announced.

At the same time, Father Martin announced Art Prince, formerly of the provincial league, had replaced Bob Williams, Noblesville, Ind., on the league's umpiring staff.

The aggregate score of the tournament resulted in 134 for the President's team and 113 for the Vice-President's squad.

On the day's play, that was determined with three 12-end games played by each club, Ab Wonnacott's team won the trophy with a score of 36 plus three. The winning team was composed of Mrs. C. B. Colling, J. B. Black, Mrs. A. Pascoe and Ab Wonnacott, skip. The other three-game winning team was made up of H. Tilley, Douglas Row, Mr. Pomfret and C. N. Sulman, the grand old man of Belleville lawn bowling, as skip.

Other club tournaments will be staged throughout the coming season.

CONTINENTAL CAN RETAINS HOLD ON FIRST PLACE

Score 12 to 9 Win Over 6 A.R.D. in Hard Fought Contest

Trenton, May 27 (Special)—Continental Can retained its hold on first place in the Trenton Softball League on Saturday night by defeating 6 A.R.D. 12 to 9, in a hard fought game.

Both teams played on even terms for the first four frames until the Continentals solved the slants of Davis and garnered four runs in the fifth and then added another four in the sixth before he was replaced by Russel. The local boys with the exception of these two frames did not appear to be on a par with their rivals.

The Aircraft repair boys scored the first run in the second frame and added three more in the fourth to take a one run lead on their opponents. However in the next two frames the team fell down badly under the battering attack of the locals. An attempt to even the score in the eighth and ninth frames resulted in five runs being scored.

Stacey, the elongated pitcher from Wooler, not only hurled his team to a win but was responsible for six runs of the Continentals. Two runs he batted in on long singles and four runs he collected himself. On the mound, he caused 12 of the opposition to whiff the ozone, while giving up six walks.

Davis and Russell who shared the mound duties for the aircraft repair boys struck out four and gave up three walks. The line-ups:

6 A.R.D.—Harnden, ss; Sponarski, 1b; Pruner, 2b; Goldstein, rf; Hodgkinson, c; Holf, lf; Roach, cf; Harrison, 3b; Davis, p; Russel, p.

Come From Behind

Trenton, May 27.—Coming from behind, the R.C.A.F. Flyers made a last minute rally here last night to defeat the Centuries 16 to 9.

The Centuries took an early lead on their opponents and held it throughout the game until the eighth frame, when they went down under the deluge of hits, many for extra bases by the Flyers, when the latter team gained 11 runs to practically cinch the ball game.

The hurlers who both have the surname of Burtt, although no relation, waged a duel in which J. Burtt for the Centuries held a considerable edge until the fatal eighth frame when he blew badly. During the first seven frames he held the Flyers practically at his own mercy striking out eleven of the batters that faced him.

In the eighth frame, every batter for the winners garnered a hit and run with the exception of Rodgers, who failed to connect. Gauthier started the boys on the merry-go-round with a long clout to centre field and his teammates followed suit by clipping the ball to all corners of the lot before Burtt could recover. The line-ups:

Centuries—Niddery, Morin, C. Ellis, H. Long, S. Ellis, Jensen, Davis, Cook and Burtt.

R.C.A.F.—Legris, Whalen, Snape, Rodgers, Burtt, Gauthier, Roemell, Casey, Richard.

At the close of his talk before a Sunday school the bishop invited questions. A tiny boy with white, eager face at once raised his hand. "Please, sir," said he, "why was Adam never a baby?"

The bishop coughed, in doubt as to what answer to give, but a little girl, the eldest of several brothers and sisters came promptly to his aid. "Please, sir," she answered smartly, "there was nobody to nurse him."

The weatherman smiled on holiday sports attractions, as a complete program of summer sports were ushered in with softball, tennis, golf, bowling et al taking their respective parts in the conventional Victoria Day annual ushering in of out-of-doors sporting activities. A goodly number of golfers dotting the Country club course all day Monday, while at the Belleville Golf Club a men's "kickers' handicap" sweep officially opened the season with Archie Graham and Harry Ridley trying for top honours. Other winners were Wally Waldorf, Freddie Stirling and Harold Carruthers. A number of local racing fans journeyed to Toronto to enjoy a holiday week-end watching (?) the jockeys get a ride at least.

With former Central Ontario League stars playing a prominent part the Kingston ball team won their first two starts in the Interprovincial League as the Combines beat Hull 6 to 5 on Saturday and journeyed to Buckingham, Que., for an 8 to 3 victory on Sunday. Strangely enough the Kingston Pressmen just can't forget the old Kingston Pony monicker and no wonder when we find such veterans as Bob Elliott, Yammy Jamieson, Stan Scrutton, Joe Corkey and Ken Chambers; former Belleville infielder, playing the lead roles in the Kingston victories.

The Belleville Beaches Association is endeavouring to provide for this city a recreational and beauty centre worthy of a project that some day will be a credit to Belleville and the entire Bay of Quinte area. For the past three years Freddie Sims has brought his carnival show into Belleville and co-operated to the hilt with the Beaches Association in a spring showing. The Sims Shows have a clean entertaining lot of amusement at the Cricket Field this week and a goodly percentage of the profits will be devoted to the furtherment of the Belleville Beaches. How's about a little patronage, boys?

The local gals' softball loop provided just about as many upsets over the week-end as is usually found when the wise boys go to the race track. Little or no chance was given the newly-entered Deacon Shirt girls versus the seasoned Corbin lassies on Saturday night. The apparent impossibility happened when the Deacon gals showed little respect for the seasoned Corbin outfit and finished off a 20 to 19 win when Betty Ridley pulled off a surprise ninth-inning double play to win. Aside from Sylvia Reddick's two homers, the Corbins took things for granted and lost, while the newly - initiated Deacons, headed by their battery mates of McMurter-Hoodhouse, Sharpe and Jean Cornell looked as though they were veterans but this corner hopes the Deacon lassies don't count that win too heavily. Last night the Big Z lassies whacked out 16 runs in the first inning and delayed the game by scoring runs until they lost one in the win column by beating the Swace 33 to 14 in a sixth-inning affair, that is "no count." Girls' softball fans saw two former veterans return to their love last night when Twila Langman (nee Warham) and Bessie Doolittle tried a comeback Twila hit a homer, double and single—just like old times.

Six extra base hits, including home runs by Andy Grey and Vern Goyer and a triple from the bat of Alfie Rowbotham, coupled with some spot pitching by Archie Major gave the Reliance a 19 to 7 win over the Point Anne "Cementmen" last night. Skipper Johnnie Kerr shook his line-up around a bit, but eventually had to insert help, which really came through in the seventh inning for seven runs and an assured win. Aside from Majors' fine mound effort—eight singles from his deliveries — the Reliance did not impress, except for Vern Goyer's efforts in left field and at bat. The Reliance took over sole possession of second place and actually showed more of a concerted effort, but their infield work, as the box score proves, with eight errors on thrown balls only, needs practice. Skipper Gaulin, of the Cementmen is still the top-spot manager with Barnhart and "Ding" Luffman as pitchers and the veteran Murney Green handling their slants for the City League bunting, however.

Sport Spice — And the next gals' softball game will be played Thursday.... Unless the unforeseen crops up, Bob Feller is a cinch for 30 wins this season.... As suggested in these lines—"little can be done about the Louis-Baer probe," but it's a cinch they'll meet before a capacity crowd inside one of the New York ball parks before the snow flies.... Despite what the a.m. news sheet says—the Cementmen did not win the city softball championship in 1940.... Fans are raging about the stand of the Indians, but did they ever look at the percentage of the Cardinals?.... It does not pay to protest major league ball games, well at least the Dodgers found that out when they went well out on the limb to call the Dodgers' bluff.... It cost the Flatbush crowd a half G, but they still cling to their wins of May 18 and 19th.... The Hume arena management must be keeping that wrestling date they told us of well in seclusion, or actually was there any?.... After witnessing the sailing efforts of the week end, it's too bad some person does not line-up the local wind-jammers into a compact racing picture.... It's nice weather for it.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—Base metal and industrial stocks were unchanged to slightly higher in the early hours and minor index losses were posted by the golds and the western oils. Volume was only fair at 62,000 shares for the first three hours.

Bell Telephone, Brazilian, Dominion Stores, Loblaw B, Moore Corporation and Standard Radio were among the industrial gainers.

Nickel, Noranda and Ventures posted gains and in the gold group Kirkland Lake, Preston and Teck Hughes were down narrowly while gains of a cent or two appeared for Chesterville, Little Long Lac and a few others.

Okalta posted a loss of 10 cents to 35 and other western oils were steady.

WALL STREET

New York, May 27—(AP)—Stock buyers kept a tight grip on their purse strings today pending tonight's world address of the President which many thought might point the way for the next market move.

Scattered aircrafts and coppers managed to tack on fractions after a hesitant start but numerous issues were at a standstill or a shade lower.

Aviation stocks were benefited by President Roosevelt's approval of $3,500,000,000 additional aircraft contracts.

Among stocks favored now and then were Douglas Aircraft, United Glenn Martin, Lockheed Curtiss-Wright, Anaconda, Kennecott, Great Northern, Standard Oil (N. J.) and General Motors.

Down occasionally were Chrysler, U.S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, Crown Cork, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical and J. C. Penney.

Smashing of the Bismarck apparently had a cheering effect on securities in the London market. British funds finished at their high marks of the day and recently heavy shipping and industrial stocks tilted higher.

Canadian issues were easy. Dome lost 3-8 and Lake Shore 1-8. In the Bond Market Canada 4s were unchanged.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Royal Air Force is making a strong effort to dislodge the Germans from their foothold in Iraq while the attempted invasion of Crete continues to call for an even larger proportion of Nazi air strength in the Middle East.

Although Rashid Ali's pro-Axis uprising seems to have failed as far as Iraq as a nation is concerned the Germans are in control of most of the country's airdromes, particularly in the northern region where the oil wells are located.

The Iraq rebel communiques, which reach the world through the courtesy of the Vichy regime in Syria, continue from day to day to speak of "battles raging." Just as consistently British general headquarters in Cairo announce that as far as the British Expeditionary Forces are concerned the situation continues quiet.

There can be little doubt that Rashid Ali's movement is about finished unless the Germans can do something quickly. Turkish reports that the insurgent leader had fled have not been confirmed, but the situation at Baghdad, the capital appears serious for him. British forces are not many miles away and their advance has been hampered by heavy rains rather than resistance by Rashid Ali's troops.

Riots have been reported from some districts and tribal chieftains who were sitting on the fence pending a decisive turn in events will now be more favorably inclined to Britain. Iraq will also serve as a lesson to ambitious pro-Axis personalities in the Middle East that Nazi promises of aid are not all they are cracked up to be.

It is probable the Germans will withhold anything on a large scale in this sector until the Battle of Crete is decided. On the other flank of the Middle East front, however, it is likely the Germans are taking advantage of the Royal Navy's preoccupation with Crete to slip reinforcements and supplies over from Sicily to the German forces stalled on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier.

FUNDS PROVIDED BACON BOARD TOMEET ADVANCES

Action Taken to Offset Further Price Gains in United States

85-SHILLING PARITY

Ottawa, May 27 (CP)—To ensure ability to fill Britain's increased requirements for Canadian bacon, monetary provision has been made to avoid large-scale sales of Canadian hogs across the international boundary in the event of further price gains in the United States.

"In accordance with the proviso in the recent revision of the price to be paid by the British Ministry of Food for bacon," Agriculture Minister Gardiner said yesterday, "money now has been made available to the Canadian Bacon Board to provide for any further increase in the price of export bacon that might be necessary should hog prices in the United States advance beyond a parity of 85 shillings."

The revision to which Mr. Gardiner referred in his statement was made May 1, when the Bacon Board announced an increase of $1 a hundredweight in the price it would pay packers for bacon destined for Britain. Next day Mr. Gardiner told the House of Commons this increase would be borne by the United Kingdom but any further increase that became necessary would be financed by Canada.

Officials said here last night they were reluctant to estimate what prices would have to be reached by hogs in the United States to make exports over the border profitable at the existing price level in Canada.

Price Increase Likely

But the fact provision had been made for an increase in Canada was taken in some quarters as an indication U.S. prices were expected to reach a level which would lead to diversion from Britain of a considerable number of Canadian hogs and that an offsetting increase in Canadian prices might be expected shortly.

A duty of one cent a pound is imposed on Canadian live hogs entering the United States, 1¼ cents on fresh and chilled pork, and 2½ cents on frozen. Bacon, ham and other prepared or preserved products pay a duty of two cents a pound.

A partial offset to the duty, however, is the Exchange situation, as payment in United States funds would return the Canadian seller more than he would receive in the Dominion.

When the $1 a hundredweight increase in payments to packers was announced at the beginning of this month officials said the move had two purposes:—

1. To reduce exports to the United States.
2. To increase prices in the domestic market and thus cut down consumption at home. Pork prices in Canada at that time were described as "low".

Subsequently, on May 15, a further move toward curtailing domestic consumption was taken to meet what the Bacon Board termed a "substantial increase" in British requirements over the 425,000,000 pounds of pork products which the Dominion was to ship under this year's agreement with the United Kingdom.

The Board order said the quantity of pork products available for sale in Canada would be reduced to the weekly average made available last year.

F.D.R. BRUSHES UP

Nor would he go into any detail on the possible contents of the Presidential address tonight. He said that it had been cut and worked over and eliminations and additions made until it had reached the point where it could not very well be fitted into the original 30 minutes for which it was scheduled.

Accordingly, Early is asking the broadcasting companies, which will transmit Mr. Roosevelt's words to the entire world, for a 15-minute extension of time.

Again today, Early offered no discouragement to reports that the address would probably be one of the most significant ever delivered by the President.

The President planned to devote most of the day to completion of the address, and the White House indicated that it would take into consideration virtually any major change in international affairs occurring before 10.30 p.m. E.D.T. when Mr. Roosevelt speaks by radio.

A all-network transmission will carry the President's words to the four corners of the nation, and a world-wide short wave relay will broadcast the address to other lands. In addition to the direct English relay, here will be translations in French, German, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese.

May Demand More Aid

Highly-placed officials were of the opinion that one portion of the address would contain a demand for more active aid to Britain, regardless of Axis threats.

Whatever the contents of the "Fireside Chat," the President has received no end of volunteered advice and suggestions. They ranged from appeals for convoys to recommendations he seek to effect a negotiated peace. In the field of domestic affairs, demands have centred on the need for a policy that would end the defence production stoppages due to strikes.

Suggestions Flow In

The suggestions apparently would continue until tonight. One group of opposition legislators collaborated today on a last-minute letter urging the President to say nothing which would have the effect of putting the United States into war "without the approval of the people through their Congressional representatives."

In another meeting yesterday the executive council of the American Federation of Labor made a formal advance declaration of support for the pronouncements the President may make on matters of foreign policy. The council also urged action to "redouble quantity and speed" American aid to Britain.

The President will deliver his "Fireside Chat" from the East Room of the White House before an audience that will include the entire Latin-American diplomatic corps and their families, members of the cabinet and personal guests of Mrs. Roosevelt.

In preparing the address Mr. Roosevelt has had the assistance of Playwright Robert E. Sherwood and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court.

OLD MAN NOT VERY GRATEFUL

Quebec, May 27.— (CP)—An old man in Bellechase County, who had been on relief for some time, sold an old piano for practically nothing. The new owner later found $8,500 in United States and Canadian currency hidden away in the piano, and returned it to the old man.

"Before she died my wife told me she had hidden away all of her money somewhere", commented the old man as he shut the door.

And that seemed to be that.

LILAC BLOOM GROWS DIRECTLY FROM THE GROUND

Another of those freaks of nature which crop up occasionally, very much to the wonderment of the populace, has been reported by a West Hill resident. A Mrs. Green, of Murney Street, this morning found a lilac blossom in her yard which was growing directly out of the ground, the remarkable feature of the blossom being that there was no bush or foliage visible. The blossom, one of the purple variety, was found quite near a lilac hedge, but was of a much paler hue than the regular blossom.

"Iron Duke", With Many Battle Scars From Battle Of Britain, Arrives Here

Gaping holes in its body, sinister reminders of bomb-wracked Britain, the "Iron Duke" battle-scarred mobile unit of the Y.M.C.A. arrived in the city shortly after eleven o'clock today.

The veteran of the Battle of Britain, which has seen service in thirty-three air raids, was the cynosure of thousands of eyes as the curious public lined up to inspect the "war vetrean" in front of the City Hall.

It is a '32 model car. On its paint-scarred sides are pencilled autographs of hundreds of members of the Empire's fighting services. Machine-gun bullet holes puncture the hood, shrapnel from anti-aircraft, and the Luftwaffe have pierced the body of the truck. It's tires are worn. It has nothing of the newness of the Canadian units.

It is fresh from six months tour of the United States where the folks south of the border got a first-hand glimpse of what these units are doing and what they are going through.

It was inspected by Lord and Lady Athlone governor-general of Canada a few days ago and is now on a tour of Ontario. This afternoon it will visit the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and from that point will go on to Trenton.

Mrs. Lionel Gibbs, a lovely English woman is in charge of the unit. With her is Mrs. R. B. Gurdon, another English lady. who, tin-hatted, served tea today to curious spectators.

Mrs. Gibbs was with the unit during the disastrous London fires of last December when the Germans first introduced incendiary bombs. "It was a bit disastrous, y'know" she said in her delightful English accent, "but we managed to pull through. As far as that goes," she said confidently "England will muddle through some way."

"One of the most outstanding things in this Battle of Britain" she said, "is the appreciation of what the outposts of the Empire are doing for the Mother Country."

"People in Britain," she said, "are most appreciative when they learn that foodstuffs and supplies come from the members of the Commonwealth of Nations of the Empire."

The unit is touring Canada in aid of the Queen's War Victims' Fund and Mrs. Gibbs glowed with pride and appreciation as she showed newspapermen a cheque for $50.00 given her by officials of the St. Julien Chapter, Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire.

Tin-hatted, a typical picture of the women of Britain, Mrs. Gurdon pleasantly served tea to a number of curious but appreciative residents. The unit is equipped with all facilities for not only serving tea, but other necessities of bomb-wracked cities of Britain.

Mrs. Gibb chatted pleasantly with Mrs. Tom Jordan, war widow of the late Regimental Sergeant Major Thomas Jordan, M.C., D.C.M., M.M. and other decorations. A little boy bashfully smiled as Mrs. Gibb held him before a photographer while he scrawled his name on the scarred side of the "Iron Duke."

Mrs. Gibb smiled as she practically re-iterated the words of Prime Minister Winston Churchill: "Give us the tools and we shall finish the job."

"You have a wonderful country here," she said, "but you go to bed at night without the sound of screeching bombs of wailing sirens. As a matter of fact, we in England don't mind it so much now, we are used to it. But I wish you Canadians could visualise what the grand people at home are going through. I am sure you would do even more than you are doing now, and that is a great effort."

Mrs. Gibb is a real veteran of the Battle of Britain. In addition to her relief work near Southampton she spent a great deal of time in London at the height of the Nazi air onslaught last Autumn.

The four members of her family who live in London have had their homes wrecked and Mrs. Gibb's house was badly damaged while she was in it.

When she emplaned for Lisbon on her trip to this continent she was caught in a southern port during one of the severest German air raids of the entire war.

Nevertheless she plans to return to her relief work in England after spending the summer with her children.

There are many who have lost clothing, furniture, house, and even family, in the indiscriminate blast of bombs. If they could tell us in person of their sufferings, there is not one of us who would not feel privileged to help. But they do not complain, they get on with the job. However, there is one to speak to us, and that is the Iron Duke (Mobile Tea Canteen No. 239). The Iron Duke may be without tongue, but its battle scars are eloquent. It was in daily service for six months —from June to December of 1940— carrying out the errands of mercy that have already made Mobile Tea Canteens an honored legend of the Second World War.

It travelled a total of 11,000 miles in the areas skirting the Channel coast and East Anglia . . . It was under Nazi fire a total of 38 times . . . Messerschmitts machine-gunned it . . . Stuka bombers plunged from the skies in repeated attempts to destroy it . . . incendiaries set it ablaze. Through it all the Iron Duke bore a charmed existence, continuing to fulfill its duty to civilian and soldier alike. It served countless cups of tea, thousands of sandwiches, bowls of soup and of stew. Swiftly it brought cheer and comfort.

It final mission was perhaps its greatest. Old wounds patched up, it was recalled to duty the night the "City" of London went up in flames under the ceaseless rain of incendiaries. From that Sunday night of December 29th to the following Wednesday dawn, the Iron Duke and scores of other Mobile Tea Canteens kept up a steady flow of hot tea and sandwiches to the exhausted fire-fighters unable to leave their posts.

Reconditioned and "dressed up," the Iron Duke still bears the scars of honourable service. It has recently been on tour in the United States on behalf of the campaign of the British War Relief Society for funds for Mobile Tea Canteens. Now, thanks to the generosity of the British War Relief Society, it is touring in Canada on behalf of the Queen's Canadian Fund.

The Iron Duke is one of the earliest models of Mobile Tea Canteens. Today, modern and specially designed cars are being delivered to Britain's bombed areas as fast as they can be manufactured, and fifty or more have been provided already by the Lord Mayor's Fund.

BISMARCK

days.

The loss of the Bismarck, capable of thirty knots, reduced the number of German capital ships to three—the Tirpitz, a brand-new 35,000-ton sistership of the Bismarck, and the Gneisenau and the Scharnhorst, sisterships of 26,000 tons, which have been under Royal Air Force bombardment at Brest since mid-March.

Launched in 1939.

The Bismarck was launched Feb. 14, 1939, the first of four ships rushed into construction when the Washington and London Limitations Treaties terminated on Dec. 30, 1936. Jane's Fighting Ships, British manual on warcraft, lists the Bismarck as 792 1-3 feet long with a beam of 118 feet and a draught of 26 feet.

Her armament consisted of eight 15-inch guns, twelve 5.9-inch and sixteen 4.1-inch guns. She carried four aircraft and two catapults. Her armor and complement were undisclosed.

The loss of the Hood left the British navy with fifteen capital ships—the number she had when the war began—with seven others building. The Royal Oak, 29,150 tons, was torpedoed by a German submarine at Scapa Flow, Scottish naval base, on Oct. 15, 1939.

Two battleships, the King George V and the Prince of Wales, have been placed into commission since the war's start and they fill the gap left by the loss of the Hood and the Royal Oak.

Graf Spee Lost Running Battle.

Early in the war the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee lost a running battle with three British cruisers off the South American coast and was scuttled at Montevideo.

The British aircraft carrier Glorious was sunk in June, 1940, during naval fighting off the coast of Norway. German sources claimed the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau scored the sinking.

With the termination of the limitation treaties, Germany began building a navy with a nucleus of 59 ships of all classes, totalling 128,382 tons.

In January, 1937, Hitler put into service the 1,625-ton destroyer Lebrecht Maass, the first of sixteen "of an entirely new type". The ship was sunk in operations coinciding with Poland's conquest.

Building Two Aircraft Carriers.

By March 1938, shipyards along the Baltic and North Seas were working overtime and warcraft totalling 335,297 tons were plying the sea or under construction. At that time two aircraft carriers of 19,250 tons each were said to be part of the Nazi fleet, but neither has been heard of in action so far.

Just how many submarines Germany now has is not known outside Berlin official quarters. On Jan. 1, 1940, Germany was reported to be building a submarine a day. In February of this year London sources said they heard Germany expected to have 600 submarines ready for spring action.

German Losses.

A recapitulation of previous German losses listed by Jane's shows:

Pocket battleships—1.
Cruisers—4.
Destroyers—14.
Torpedo boats—2.
Minesweepers—2.
Trawlers—8.
Submarines—undetermined.

The following are listed by Jane's as remainig units of the German fleet:

Battleships—3 (and 2 more building).
Pocket battleships—2.
Aircraft carriers—2.
Heavy cruisers—4.
Cruisers—4 (two more building).
Destroyers—11 (two more building).
Torpedo boats — 12 (four more building).

AT THE BELLE

"The Philadelphia Story"

More than 200 chuckles, laughs and howls are guaranteed in "The Philadelphia Story", picturisation of Philip Barry's New York comedy stage hit, which stars Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn and James Stewart, and opens today at the Belle Theatre.

The laughs were checked and double-checked, and thoroughly public-tested during the fifty-two solid weeks in which Miss Hepburn played the capacity audiences on Broadway. A sound track was made of an actual performance at the Shubert Theatre and used as a guide in bringing Barry's sparkling comedy to the screen without the loss of a single chuckle.

A new, more vital and dynamic Hepburn is to be seen in the picture. She plays a young woman of high society, who has no tolerance for human weaknesses. Having divorced her debonair first husband, Cary Grant, because he did not come up to her idea of perfection, she is about to wed a second time. Her choice is a stalwart man of the people, John Howard. Complications arise when Grant, realizing that his ex-wife is making a mistake, turns up for the wedding. He brings with him a reporter from a keyhole society magazine, Spy, and then the fun begins. The reporter is played by James Stewart, who also falls for Miss Hepburn. Which one gets the girl? That is all a part of the whirlwind comedy plot which reaches a hilarious climax when Miss Hepburn's foot slips and how!

A noted group of stage and screen personalities are seen in support of the trio of stars, Ruth Hussey, who recently scored opposite Robert Taylor in "Flight Command", is now seen as James Stewart's girl friend. Roland Young offers another of his special comedy portrayals as Miss Hepburn's Uncle Willie. Her parents are played by John Halliday and Mary Nash, and her precocious younger sister by the talented young Virginia Weidler. Also in the cast are Henry Daniell, Lionel Pape and Rex Evans.

The film version of "The Philadelphia Story" was directed by George Cukor, famous for his direction of such hits as "Susan and God" and "The Women".

The Belle News of the Day will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Waterloo Bridge"

With Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor perfectly teamed in the starring roles, "Waterloo Bridge," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre is one of the grandest film treats since "Smilin Thru" and "Farewell To Arms" tugged at your heart-strings, do not miss "Waterloo Bridge" if you thrill to screen entertainment of the best.

Balancing a tender and beautiful love story against a powerfully dramatic background, the picture has everything in the way of brilliant performances, an absorbing romance, spectacular settings, exciting action and unusual photography.

If Miss Leigh had not already displayed her versatile talent to the complete satisfaction of all in her Academy Award performance of Scarlett O'Hara, her fascinating portrayal of Myra Lester, the little ballet dancer of the Robert E. Sherwood drama, would assure her lasting screen fame. She is completely believable and interesting in every mood of an exacting role.

A pleasant surprise is the work of Taylor in the finest role of his career. He is at his best as a British army officer, a part that requires him to age from twenty-five to forty-eight, and in which he is always convincing. He wears a mustache for characterization, which gives him both a new maturity and dignity.

The story has been made vitally timely, with its opening scene in the wartime London of today with its blackouts and bombproof shelters, and then flickers back to events in the First World War. The romantic theme is woven around the twenty-four hour, whirlwind courtship of the petite dancer and the dashing officer, who meet on historic Waterloo Bridge during an air raid.

Excellent supporting performances are contributed by Lucile Watson, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya and C. Aubrey Smith. Direction by Mervyn LeRoy is deftly handled. The film was brought to the screen by Sidney Franklin, who as a director won fame with such pictures as "The Good Earth," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Smilin' Thru'."

"Who Killed Aunt Maggie"

The McCarthy Theatre program also includes the laugh hit "Who Killed Aunt Maggie" featuring John (Turnabout) Hubbard, Willie (Ghost-Breakers) Best, Wendy Barrie and Edgar Kennedy, plus latest Fox News events. A perfect show from first flash on the screen until the final fade-out. Glasbake ovenware is also presented to the ladies or only a five cent service charge on the evening admission. Next week the large pie plates are given out, therefore do not fail to come now or next week, ladies, for two lovely ovenware pieces.

AT THE CAPITOL

"HIGH SIERRA"

The peak of screen excitement is reached in "High Sierra," now at the Capitol. Moving inexorably to his doom, "Mad Dog" Earle, as portrayed by Humphrey Bogart, is the enemy of all that is decent and good defiant of every law on earth —except the High Sierras. He is a strange man, and his is a strange story that grips your interest with its powerful fascination.

When the prison gates swing back to release Roy Earle, he is not yet a free man. First he must pay back the debt he owes to the mob leader who bought his pardon. Across the continent he rides, past the little farms like the one he lived on as a boy. When he is truly free there will be such a farm for him.

Humphrey Bogart is magnificently at home as Earle, playing the role with such a sureness that the gangster comes sharply to life as a man you pity, hate love and fear. Ida Lupino gives poignantly dramatic interpretation of Marie, that definitely ranks with the finest screen work of the year. Other standout performances are scored by sixteen-year old Joan Leslie as Velma, Arthur Kennedy and Alan Curtis as the two henchmen and Henry Travers.

As in his recent hit, "They Drive By Night," Raoul Walsh's direction is superb; throughout. W. R. Burnett's novel, adapted for the screen by John Huston and Burnett himself tells a story for which the screen is the perfect medium. In bringing it to the screen, Warner Bros. have contributed one of the most exciting films of all time, a definitely must-see hit.

The same program includes a colored cartoon, "Sniffles Bells the Cat", and a riotous comedy, "Saved by the Belle" starring the inimitable Three Stooges.

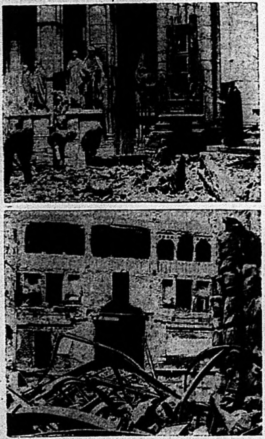
LONDON LANDMARKS SMASHED BY NAZIS



On May 10, the Saturday Rudolf Hess, Nazi No. 3, flew from Augsburg, Germany, to a point near Glasgow, Scotland, and parachuted to earth, German bombers passed over London and left these scenes behind them. At the TOP, workmen clear debris from the floors of historic Westminster Abbey. The verger, RIGHT, has just picked up a prayer book from the wreckage. At the BOTTOM, you're looking toward the Speaker's chair in bomb-blasted House of Commons.

KILLED OWN TROOPS

New York, May 27 (CP)—Edward Chorlian, CBS correspondent in Cairo, said last night in a broadcast from that Capital that Nazi attackers bombed the cities of rete so severely that "they are believed to have killed members of their own troops."

He said also that the Nazis have "supplied the British with quantities of stores dropped from the air under the impression that German troops would receive them."

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey came for dinner and we all sat down to eat it, and pop clapped his hands together, saying, Let the slaves bring on the food. On what rare and costly viands do we regale the inner man this evening? he said.

Meaning what was for dinner, and ma said, We have a nice roast chickin, Gladdis and Harvey are both fond of a roast chickin.

And who can say that a roast chickin isn't equally fond of them? pop said. I feel the old urge, the old urge that comes over every real man to carve a roast at the head of his own table, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum I thought that matter had been settled long ago by your own repeated failures. Dont you learn anything from experience for land sakes? she said.

Yes my dear, and experience teaches that if a man really wants to do something with his whole heart and sole, nothing can keep him from accomplishing his purpose is to be able to carve a chickin gracefully in my own home, pop said. I'm tired of waking up at night in a cold perspiration with the realization that a carving knife and fork are powerless in my hands, how about it, Harvey? he said, and Harvey said, Absilutely, the man who cant carve his own fowl is a mollycoddle and a stranger within his wife's gates.

Now Harvey, you'll never be a carver if you live to be a hundred, any more than father, Gladdis said.

Wich just then Nora brought the chickin in all carved already, saying, I heard the discussion and I thought I better do the carving in the kitchin. I'd like to see me nice clean tablecloth do for at least 2 times, she said.

Being the end of the subject at least till the next time.

39 SURVIVORS ARE PICKED UP

Rescued From Torpedoed Merchant Ship Somewhere in Atlantic

Washington, May 27 (AP)—The Coast Guard announced today the cutter General Greene had picked up 39 survivors of a torpedoed merchant ship somewhere in the Atlantic early today.

Officials refused to give the exact location of the rescue, the name or nationality of the sunken ship or to say whether the sinking had occurred in the Western Mediterranean.

The survivors, rescued from two lifeboats, were quoted as saying that three other lifeboats containing about 60 more men were still to be accounted for. The General Greene was searching for them in heavy fog.

The ship was torpedoed yesterday. The only hint of its location was the fact that the Greene spotted the lifeboats about 4 a.m. E.S.T. today while on ice patrol in the North Atlantic. This patrol usually is off Greenland.

Germans Believe Convoys Guarded By Battleships

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, May 27 (AP). — Although the loss of the battlecruiser Hood was tragic for Britain, the loss must be set down as another grim but inconclusive incident of the war. It does not materially alter the battle odds in the Atlantic. For that matter, the controlling circumstances of that brief sea fight have not yet been sufficiently revealed to permit any intelligent assessment of its larger significance.

It is possible that the Hood and her people went to their death as victors rather than vanquished. If a Nazi attempt to turn loose the new battleships Bismarck and Tirpitz for commerce raiding has been foiled even temporarily, the sacrifice of the Hood was not in vain.

At no moment in the Atlantic battle has Britain's life line for food and munitions from the new world been in graver peril than when the two Nazi battlecruisers, Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, were at large, cooperating with German U-boats and aircraft in a deadly "cat-and-mouse" attack on British convoys. With their withdrawal to Brest Harbor for whatever reason, there was a notable slackening in British tonnage losses in that sea.

Battle Cruisers Failed.

The Nazi battle cruiser twins failed as super commerce raiders. They were last reported still at Brest under merciless British bombing. And the probable real purpose of the Nazi battleship foray which sent the Hood down was to renew that hit-and-run surface warfare in the Atlantic under more favorable conditions.

It must mean a Berlin belief that heavily armed and armored British battleships are being used to screen Atlantic convoys and that nothing less powerful could stand up against them. If the Bismarck and her probable mate have been turned back, injured or uninjured, as meagre London reports would indicate, the Hood-Bismarck fight for all the loss of the great battle cruiser, must be scored as a British victory, as was the Battle of Jutland.

And in a technical sense for naval strategists, the loss of the Hood merely confirmed the lesson of the Jutland fight that battle cruisers, speedy and heavy-gunned but lacking full armor protection, were of doubtful value. The Hood was the last ship of that type added to the British Fleet.

Indians are multiplying so rapidly in the United States that anthropologists have estimated that there will be as many in 1980 as there were when Columbus discovered America.

TO FERRY BOMBERS

Mrs. Faith Bennett is shown in her New York hotel suite just before sailing to begin work on Britain's bomber ferry line, flying planes from factories to their fighting stations. Although a non-combatant, she will run the risk of being shot down if spotted en route by German warplanes.

Lafleche is now deputy-minister in charge of national mobilization of men.

Text Of Prime Minister's Statement On Battle Of Crete

London, May 27 (AP)—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in the House of Commons today follows:

The Battle of Crete now has lasted for a week and during this whole time our troops have been subjected to an intense and continuous scale of air attacks to which, owing to geographical conditions, our air force has only been able to make a very limited but gallant counterpoint.

We have not, however, been able to prevent other descents of air-borne troops to reinforce the enemy and the weight of this attack has grown from day to day.

The battle has swayed backwards and forwards with indescribable fury at Canea and equally fiercely, although on a smaller scale, at Retimo and Hercleon (Candia.)

Magnificent Resistance

Reinforcements of men and supplies have reached and are reaching General Freyberg's forces and at this moment the issue of magnificent resistance hangs in the balance.

So far the Royal Navy has prevented any landing of a sea-borne expedition, although a few shiploads of troops in Greek caiques may have slipped through.

Very heavy losses have been inflicted by our submarines, cruisers and destroyers upon transports and upon these small Greek ships and it is not possible to state with accuracy how many thousands of the enemy troops have been drowned.

Losses Heavy

But our losses have been heavy.

Services rendered by the navy in defence of Crete have not been discharged without losses to them.

Our fleet has been compelled to operate constantly without air protection.

Claims even more exaggerated than usual have been made by the German and Italian wireless which it has not hitherto been expedient to deny.

It may be stated, however, that we have lost the cruisers Gloucester and Fiji, and four destroyers, the Juno, Greyhound, Kelly and Kashmir.

Greater Part of Crews Saved

By far a greater part of their crews have been saved.

Two battleships and several other ships have been damaged, but not seriously, either by hits or near misses, but all will soon be in action again and some already are at sea.

The Mediterranean fleet is today relatively stronger compared to the Italian navy than it was before the battle of Cape Matapan.

There is no question whatever of our naval position in the Eastern Mediterranean having been prejudicially affected.

However the decision of the battle may go, the stubborn defence of Crete, one of the important outposts of Egypt, will always rank high in military and naval annals of the British Empire.

Situation Improved in Iraq

In Iraq our position has been largely re-established and the prospects are greatly improved.

There have been no further adverse developments in Syria.

In Ethiopia daily Italian surrenders continue, many thousands of prisoners and masses of equipment being taken.

While this drama has been enacted in the Eastern Mediterranean, another episode of arresting character has been in progress in the northern waters of the Atlantic Ocean.

Bismarck at Bergen

On Wednesday the 21st.—Wednesday of last week—the new German battleship Bismarck, accompanied by the new 8-inch Prince Eugen, was described by our air reconnaissance at Bergen, and on Thursday, the 22nd., it was known to have left.

Many arrangements were made to intercept them should they attempt, as seemed probable, to break out into the Atlantic Ocean with the view to striking at our convoys from the United States and during the night of the 23rd-24th. cruisers got into visual contact with them as they were passing through Denmark Strait between between Iceland and Greenland.

At dawn on Saturday morning the Prince of Wales and the Hood intercepted these two enemy vessels.

Events Move Rapidly

There is no detailed account of the action because events have been moving so rapidly since, but the Hood was struck at about 23,000 yards by a shell which penetrated into one of the magazines and she blew up with only a very few survivors.

This splendid vessel, although designed 23 years ago, is a serious loss to the Royal Navy and even more so are the men and officers who manned her.

During the whole of Saturday our ships remained in touch with the Bismarck and her consort and arrangements were made to effect battle at dawn yesterday morning but during the night the weather deteriorated, visibility decreased and the Bismarck, by making a sharp turn, shook off pursuit.

The Prince Eugen

I do not know what has happened to the Prince Eugen, but measures are being taken with respect to her.

Yesterday shortly before midday, Catalina aircraft, one of the considerable number of those very far-reaching scouting planes which have been sent to us by the U.S.A., picked up the Bismarck and it was seen that she was making for French ports—Brest or St. Nazaire and on this, further rapid dispositions were made by the Admiralty.

I may say that the moment she was known to be at sea, the whole apparatus of our ocean control came into play, very far-reaching combinations began to work and last evening—from yesterday afternoon I am afraid I have not had time to prepare a detailed statement—fleet air arm torpedo bombers and planes from the Ark Royal attacked and made a succession of attacks upon the Bismarck, which now appeared to be alone without her escort.

About midnight I learned that the Bismarck had been struck by two torpedoes—one amidships and the other astern.

Steering Affected

This second torpedo apparently affected the steering of the ship, for not only was she reduced to very low speed, but she continued making uncontrollable circles in the sea, in which condition she was attacked by our flotillas with two more torpedoes which brought her virtually to a standstill far from help and far outside the range within which enemy bomber aircraft from the French coast could come upon the scene. This morning at daylight or shortly after daylight the Bismarck was attacked by British pursuing battleships and I do not know what were the results of the bombardment. It appears, however, that the Bismark was not sunk by gunfire and she will be dispatched by torpedo. This is now proceeding and it is thought that there cannot be any lengthy delay in disposing of this vessel.

Importance of Bismarck's Loss

Great as is our loss in the Hood, the Bismarck must be regarded as the most powerful enemy battleship as she is the newest enemy battleship and the striking of her from the German navy is a very definite simplification of the task of maintaining an effective mastery of the northern seas and maintenance of the northern blockade.

I daresay in a few days it will be possible to give a much more detailed account but essentials are before the House and, although there is shade as well as light in this picture, I feel we have every reason to be satisfied with the outcome of this fierce and memorable naval encounter.

No Serious Traffic Accidents Reported Over The Holiday

Belleville was devoid of serious crime over the week-end holiday, only one drunk being presented in City Police Court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today.

His Worship openly congratulated the populace of the community upon their cautious handling of fireworks during the Victoria Day holiday period, as not a single serious accident was reported in Belleville as the direct result of the firing of the conventional fireworks.

Then the stout-hearted thoroughbred, now owned by H A. Bruns of Spokane, Wash., will be driven through Winnipeg Streets to Polo Park where stablemen, handlers and owners will be given an opportunity to exchange cash for a portion of Joey's bonds.

Joey, who was the West's major threats at Toronto tracks several years ago, collected a portion of the purse in 135 of his 189 races.

After winning the West's major two-year-old classic, the Winnipeg Futurity in 1932, Joey went on to finish first in 40 other races, second 40 times, third 28 and fourth 26 to compile an earnings of $37,000.

Fish Consumption In The Dominion Greatly Increased

Ottawa, May 27 (CP)—Fish consumption in Canada has increased in the past five years from 17 to 28 pounds per head a year, Fisheries Minister Michaud told the House of Commons last night during consideration of his departmental estimates.

He said increased export markets, coupled with increased consumption at home had contributed to much better conditions in an industry which had been greatly depressed on the Atlantic coast. Some years ago there had been some groups of fishermen who had never handled actual money until they obtained direct relief. They had traded entirely by barter.

POLICE BLOTTER

An automobile reported stolen at Point Anne last Saturday night was recovered in Shannonville over the week-end, according to reports from Motorcycle Patrolman McKellar today.

Ernest Preston, Sanford St., reported the theft of his bicycle. bearing city licence plate number 1204 and Lawrence Flagler, 344 Bleecker Ave., told police his bike had been taken also, but carried no licence plate. Arthur Villeneuve, also of Belleville, complained to police that a flashlight had been stolen from the front of his parked bike also.

James Coughlin, 27 Meyers St., complained to the city authorities that a dog had attacked and bitten his daughter Elva near the corner of Queen St. and Foster Ave. on Sunday. The injury was not serious, but Mr. Coughlin deemed it his duty to report the matter, which is being investigated by police.

While patrolling his beat early on Monday P. C. Evans found a plate glass window in Mason's grocery store, north of the upper bridge, had been broken. Following investigations Constable Evans was convinced that a stone, flipped from the tire of a passing motor car had been hurled into the glass.

No serious crime was reported locally over the week-end as a lone inebriate was the lone custodian of the cell block over the holiday.

'If He Has Written Lies, Let Them be Read —And Damned

Welland, Ont., May 27 (CP)—Banning of books, "Lindbergh's or any others," was scored here last night by Louis Blake Duff, author and historian, in an address before a service club.

"If Lindbergh has penned the truth, let his works be read and let the readers govern themselves accordingly. If he has written lies, let them be read—and damned," said Mr. Duff.

Mein Kampf damned everything that democracy stands for, yet not one of the six copies available at the library of Manning Pool in Toronto can be found on the shelves, so great is the demand, Mr. Duff added.

14 British Seamen Rescued After Ten Days In Open Boat

(By The Canadian Press)

Again Englishmen have suffered on the high seas for their country and like thousands of their countrymen before them, again they intend to return to their calling; the injured as soon as their wounds are healed, the uninjured as soon as they can get a berth.

Their freighter blasted and sent to the Atlantic floor by torpedo fire from an enemy submarine, this group of 14 Britons lived for ten days in an open boat before being picked up by a ship and landed on the Canadian side of the water.

Lacked Food and Water.

More than the usual amount of hardship was their lot. The wounds of the injured were aggravated by the tossing of the boat on the Atlantic combers. The hardy were tortured by lack of sufficient food and drink throughout the long days and nights.

A never-ending task was that of bailing.

Of the original group of 17, one died silently in the boat of his wounds. Two others were rescued only to die aboard the rescue ship.

Chief concern of the men upon landing was the fate of their twenty-six mates. They were certain all of the 43 aboard their vessel succeeded in getting into a boat or on a raft. But they received no further word of them.

Some were injured when the torpedo exploded in the ship's vitals. But to the best of their knowledge no one was killed. They believed the wireless operator succeeded in gaining the other ship's boat commanded by the captain although he kept flashing the distress signal until the last possible moment.

Used Two Torpedoes.

Apparently the submarine commander was worried lest the ship did not sink after it was abandoned for the undersea craft rose to the surface and sent anoher torpedo into the ship. She sank stern first, four days out on her westward crossing.

"The first 'egg' crashed into us shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon," said a member of the crew. "In 20 minutes the crew was in the boats'."

He added he believed there were no Canadians aboard.

Youngest crew members were two brothers, 15 and 17-year-old boys of Gates, Eng. They said heavy seas were running at the time of the attack.

For the first four days afterwards all they could do was bail. After that they were able to hoist a sail and cruise the busy sea lanes.

Suffering From Exposure. . . .

When picked up all fourteen were suffering from exposure and needed hospital attention.

"Two caskets of water, a tin of biscuits and two dozen tins of condensed milk were our rations," said one. "We were given two inches of water in a cup a day. The milk we gave to the injured."

FoxboroChurchReopens Renovated S. S. Rooms

Well attended and impressive services were held in Foxboro United Church on Sunday. In the morning the Sunday School rooms were reopened and re-dedicated after undergoing a thorough renovation. The work is not yet finished but it is in splendid condition to resume Sunday School sessions.

At 10 a.m. the school gathered in the church when the occasion was explained by the Superintendent, Mr. S. C. Gay and a worshipful attitude was created through an impressive call to worship. A processional hymn was then announced and the school went by classes, beginning with the primaries, into the Sunday School hall. Here an appropriate re-dedication ritual was carried through, led by the minister Rev. E. M. Cook and the Superintendent. There was an attendance of nearly one hundred including several visitors. These were welcomed and a short address was given by Mr. McFarlane of Montreal an old Foxboro resident and a frequent visitor and friend of many here. The clean white walls made a good setting for a lavish display of flowers and shrubbery which decorated the room. The re-opening will continue on Wednesday, May 28, with a re-opening festival including supper and concert and an address by Rev. A. Marshal Laverty B.A., B.D. of Stirling.

In the evening at 7.30 the Empire Youth Service program was used and adapted in a special youth service in which young people of the church took part. Eugene Spencer and Gordon Elder acted as ushers. Garth Sine read the scriptures and Miss Helen Davis and Miss Marion Daniels read other parts of the Westminster Abbey service. After an address by Rev. E. M. Cook on "Youth Today" the youth dedication service as prepared for the day was entered into by the whole congregation. The new Canadian youth hymnal was used throughout and the choir, which has been recently augmented by a considerable number of young people, sang an anthem consisting of a duet and full chorus. This service was well attended and was expressive and interpretive of the spirit and needs and challenge of these days. In attendance and earnestness and dignity of expression the day was most commendable of the rural church in action and its place in the life of its people.

NAZI DEAD GIVEN AT 18,000 IN BATTLE OF CRETE

Allied Garrison at Crete Said to be Receiving Reinforcements

NEW POSITIONS TAKEN

Cairo, Egypt, May 27—(AP)—The Mediterranean fleet has lost two cruisers and four destroyers in the raging week-old battle of Crete but has balked German efforts to land sea-borne troops, and the epic struggle on land now "hangs in the balance", the British authorities announced today.

Besides the sunken ships high official quarters said that two battleships and several other cruisers had been damaged.

The Allied garrison on Crete was said to be receiving reinforcements while the Germans also still were parachuting down troops in swarms.

With these reinforcements, the Middle East command said the Germans had been able to broaden their major foothold at Malemi Airport, west of Canea, the Crete capital. The Imperial forces were forced back to new positions.

Heavy losses still were being inflicted on the Germans in fierce hand-to-hand fighting and Greek sources placed the number of Nazi dead at 18,000. Of these 5,000 were drowned in attempts to land by sea.

Britain Loses 47 Destroyers Since War Began

The warships lost—all victims of Axis planes —were the cruisers Gloucester and Fiji and the destroyers Juno, Kelly, Kashmir and Greyhound. (This makes 47 destroyers lost since the war started.)

Despite these losses, and the damage inflicted on the other units, the British authorities in London declared:—

"The Mediterranean Fleet is today relatively stronger compared to the Italian navy than it was before the Battle of Cape Matapan.

"There is no question whatever of our naval position in the Eastern Mediterranean having been prejudicially affected.

"However the decision of the battle may go, the stubborn defence of Crete, one of the important outposts of Egypt, will always rank high in the military and naval annals of the British Empire".

Official quarters emphasized that the Mediterranean fleet was carrying on without air protection against the combined might of the Axis air and naval forces.

"Very heavy losses navo been inflicted", they added, "by our submarines, cruisers and destroyers upon transports . . . and it is not possible to state with accuracy how many thousands of the enemy troops have been drowned".

The German claim that eleven British cruisers, eight destroyers, five torpedo boats and one submarine had been sunk was declared "even more exaggerated than usual". Some of the damaged British war vessels, they added, already have put to sea again.

Royal Air Force headquarters here announced that five troop-laden Nazi transport planes were shot down yesterday at Malemi airdrome and that several other Nazi aircraft were destroyed.

1,300 Of Crew On the Bismarck Lost In Sinking

London, May 27 (CP)—Germany's proud new battleship Bismarck, crippled and staggering in wild circles under the blows of aerial torpedeos, was sunk today by the combined might of the Royal Navy and its air arm in full revenge for destruction of the battle cruiser Hood.

At 11 o'clock this morning, three days after the Hood had been blown to bits by a hit in the magazine from one of the Bismarck's 15-inch shells, the 35,000-ton Bismarck herself settled under the surface of the Atlantic.

Down with her went some 1,300 men, a German Admiral, Guenther Luetjens, and about one-fourth of Germany's known capital ship strength.

The 9,975-ton British cruiser Dorsetshire rammed home torpedoes which finished off the Bismarck after she had been shelled into helplessness by British "heavy ships" and destroyers.

The Admiralty, in a long communique describing the chase and destruction of the Bismarck, said the Nazi battleship had been slowed down to a speed of about eight knots after being hit by two aerial torpedoes and two torpedoes from British warships.

The communique disclosed that Royal Canadian Air Force planes based in Newfoundland participated in the long search for the Bismarck following the sinking of the Hood.

Playing a big part in the sinking of the Bismarck were torpedo planes from the Ark Royal, the aircraft carrier so often "sunk" by the Nazis. It was disclosed also that the new aircraft carrier Victorious —sister ship of the Illustrious and the Indomitable—is in service and participated in the Bismarck hunt.

Complete Group Of Italian Artillery Captured By British

Nairobi, Kenya, May 27—(CP)—South African troops patrolling from Sodou in Ethiopia have captured a complete group of Italian artillery with eight guns, British sources said.

In addition to the two Italian divisional commanders reported captured with their staffs at Soddu yesterday, it was learned that two brigade commanders, and six colonels also were taken.

1950 Italian Prisoners Taken

London, May 27 — (CP) — The capture of 1,950 more Italian and Colonial troops in Ethiopia and a pick-up in patrol activity on the Libyan front were reported today by authoritative British sources.

This information followed reports last night from Cairo that four Italian divisions had been mopped up and 8,570 prisoners seized during recent operations in the mountains north and west of Addis Ababa.

Seven Italian armored cars were taken with the latest group of prisoners.

Guelph, Ont., May 27 —(CP)—Among those believed lost when the H.M.S. Hood was sunk by the German battleship Bismarck last Saturday is John H. Laws, nephew of Mrs. Cecil H. Sharpin, Guelph, it was learned here today. Laws was a wireless operator aboard the British battleship when last heard from.

NO CONSCRIPTION FOR N. IRELAND SAYS CHURCHILL

Enforcement Would be "More Trouble Than it is Worth," Prime Minister States

London, May 27 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill yielded today to Irish pressure and told the House of Commons that enforcement of conscription in Northern Ireland would be "more trouble than it is worth."

"We have made a number of inquiries," he said, "in various directions with the result that we have come to the conclusion that at the present time, although there would be no dispute about our rights or our merits, it (conscription) would be more trouble than it is worth to enforce such a policy."

The House cheered Mr. Churchill and cried "no" when Sir Hugh O'Neill asked if it would not make "a rather bad impression throughout the Empire that once again the government had shirked this issue because of pressure from southern Ireland."

Mr. Churchill explained simply that "we thought it better."

Sir Hugh asked if the government of North Ireland thought conscription "could be, and ought to be, applied" and Mr. Churchill said, "yes."

Eamon De Valera, Prime Minister of Eire, told the parliament in Dublin yesterday that he had made strong representations to the British government against extending conscription to Northern Ireland, saying it would revive "old unhappy relations."

Lord Glentoran, Northern Ireland Minister of Agriculture, made the following statement:-

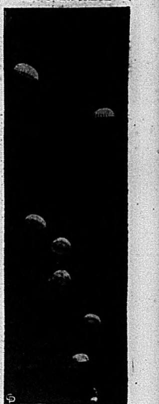
"Mr. Churchill asked the Prime Minister of Ulster to come over and give his views on the matter to the British cabinet.

THREE FREIGHTERS MAKE CALL AT DOCK

With three lake boats docked at the same time over the weekend, the Belleville harbor at least saw a brief return of the activity for which a number of years ago it was noted.

Included among the three freighters docked at the local harbor was the packet freighter, 'Glen Allan," in from her regular run to Montreal, a British American tanker, in with a cargo of gasoline and the "Henry C. Daryaw," a coaler in with the first load of coal for the Belleville harbor this season.

NOT OVER CRETE



Proving that accidents are only accidents, forty-one U.S. marine corps parachutists jumped from the same transport plane from which Second Lieut. Walter Osipoff dangled in midair until he was rescued by two navy fliers. The jumpers are members of Company A, Second Parachute Battalion — the first chute company in the history of the marine corps. The chutists are pictured after they jumped from the marine transport plane.

French Gov't Gives U.S. Assurances The Fleet Will Not Be Surrendered

Washington, May 27 (AP)—The French Government gave renewed assurance in writing today to the United States that the French Fleet and Colonies would not be surrendered to Germany or any other power.

A note containing specific guarantees was delivered by the French ambassador, Gasto Henry-Haye, to Sumner Welles, under Secretary of State.

The note, the ambassador told reporters, was drafted by him on instructions from the Vichy government. It was intended to remove misgivings here on the scope of French-German collaboration.

The French acted apparently in conformity with a request last week by State Secretary Hull that the Vichy Government should define its position clearly in writing if it wished to convince the world that pro-Hitler elements were not in supreme control at Vichy.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXXIII

Dale looked at her for a long minute and Devona was suddenly aware that hostility was gone from those beloved blue eyes now, that bitterness no longer curled those lips. Something had happened. Something wonderful! Scarcely daring to breathe, she waited.

After a moment, Dale went on: "Almost six months ago, I met the girl I'd been looking for all my life. I didn't then have sense enough to realize it. But it wasn't long before I knew she was different."

He took her hand in his, pressed it hard. "Then, one morning, I discovered I loved her. I told her so and she said she loved me, too. I was the happiest guy in the world. The next day she walked out of my life with only a sarcastic note by way of explanation."

Devona sat erect now, her heart thudding at her throat. "Dale—I——"

He pressed a finger across her lips. "Let me finish. Nearly crazy, I went to her mother for more explanation. What I got wasn't what any man can stand hearing—that a girl loved him for his money, and for that alone. And when she found out there wasn't any money—she didn't want to see him again—ever!"

Her own words — distorted like that! "Oh, Dale! How could you believe that?"

"I don't — now. Not after that eloquent plea this morning. But—Devona—why did you leave that morning? What did you mean by that funny, cryptic note?"

She Wanted Real Love

Devona drew back, winced with the pain of remembering why! Slowly, she released her hand from his.

"Because I wanted — real love. Not the shoddy, second-hand thing you were—offering. To me, love means loyalty, sincerity — " She moistened dry lips. "I wanted—marriage. I thought that was what you wanted too, until Vara told me."

"Told you what, Devona?"

She met his eyes squarely. "That I was a fool. That you were not the marrying kind. That you had been her lover for years."

His face went white. "She said that. You're sure, Devona?"

"Of course, I'm sure." But suddenly she was just as sure it wasn't true.

"And you—believed it?"

The tears broke then and she buried her face against his shoulder. "I'm sorry, Dale. I should not have. I didn't know. I thought you——"

Vara Exposed

Dale held her close then, his lips just touching her temples, his voice pleading softly. "Don't darling. Don't cry."

Suddenly Dale released her, rose quickly, paced the little room. "I see it all now. She needed what little cash I had pretty desperately. She was afraid if I got interested in you, I'd lose interest in her show. That's plain enough. And she's always pretended our relationship was something more than purely business. I never thought much about it. She's an attractive woman. She's never pretended to confine her flirting to any one man."

Dale stamped across the room again, hands jammed deep into his pockets. Then he faced Devona again.

"That accounts for her story about your being in an expensive school up North pursuing a rich husband. Of course, I knew you weren't in school. But I did believe you wanted the rich husband."

"I only wanted——" Then she stopped short.

For a moment they just stared at each other—and at the chasm that suddenly yawned between them. They still loved each other—exactly as before. That much hadn't changed unless to grow stronger, more compelling. But now——

Dale came to sit beside her again. "What are we going to do about this—now?" he asked quietly, his eyes searching hers, his face clouded with anxiety.

Devona went straight to the heart of it. "About—Tal, you mean?"

Dale nodded. At first, all kinds of wild schemes flooded into her mind—run away, elope, leave an explanatory letter, plan some way to make Tal hate her——

Fate's Crazy Ways

But, of course, they couldn't. Too much had happened now. They could never go back to the happiness of that afternoon eternities ago when heaven had seemed so nearly within reach.

"Nothing, Dale," she said quietly now. "Tal couldn't stand knowing that I—love him—only because of—you. I've got to keep my promise to him. It's the only way—now."

Dale drew a long breath, crushed her hand in his until she nearly cried out.

"Yes. This all come —too late to do any good."

Their eyes met, then. And—slowly—their lips. A kiss that spoke of everything—the boundlessness of their love, its infinite existence—its hopelessness.

"That's just to—remember you by," she whispered as she pushed him away. "From now on — it's just friendship."

Dale nodded. "Fate's crazy, isn't it?"

"A strange destiny," she murmured softly and tried to realize that she must kill the love that destiny had brought her — kill it that they all three, she and Dale and his brother, might survive.

Bravely she smiled into the stricken face of her future brother-in-law.

"There is no other way, darling."

"No—no other way."

Just what her strange destiny might have held in store for her if Vara hadn't stepped back into her life again, Devona could never imagine. Perhaps because Vara Vadne was part of that destiny inextricably. Perhaps because it was all written in the stars for an old Indian fakir to foresee—at any rate, Vara laid strong hands on the pattern threads of her daughter's life.

The message came just before dinner. Devona and Dale had spent a heart-breaking day being gay together. Gay over a delicious luncheon that neither of them tasted. Gay over shopping while Devona bought luggage and clothes for her coming wedding trip with Tal that they both tried to ignore for the moment. Gay over cocktails that only threatened to break down the reserve they were trying to build between them. Trying so hard to make love behave as friendship, passion as affection.

It wasn't working very well yet, Devona realized, catching sight of her flushed, happy face once in a back-bar mirror. But in time it would. They'd make it work! For Tal's sake they had to.

Her Mother Calls

Weary, nearly spent with the force of buffeting emotions, they had returned to the old Brasher home late that afternoon to find Tal pacing the living room frantically.

"I thought you'd never show up," he said, his eyes wild with worry. "Vara's collapsed. She's dying!"

"Vara!" Devona repeated, shocked.

"Yes, and she's been calling for you. Both of you. We've got to hurry."

"Mother!" Unconsciously, Devona revealed the tie that bound her to that woman who already had brought so much sorrow into her daughter's life. After all, Vara was—mother. Dad would have wanted—

Dale drove them to the hospital with magnificent indifference to traffic regulations.

"Daughter?" a kind-faced nurse asked. "Yes. She's been asking for you. Go in."

Days of Waiting

The room was small, darkened. For a moment, Devona could scarcely see the slim form in the bed. Then it moved, raised a hand in faint gesture of welcome.

"Come in." Vara's voice but so changed. "I want you."

That effort had proved too great a drain on Vara's slim reserve and though Devona went to her side instantly, Vara had already fainted away.

Frightened, Devona rang for the nurse.

"She's still too weak. You'll have to wait," the nurse said, crisp startched skirts rustling like old parchment.

And that waiting seemed endless. What message could Vara have that was so important, so great a weight on her mind that even in her weakness, her delirium, she clamored for a chance to tell it.

Dale and Tal both paced the long hospital corridor with her. Every time Vara's door opened they all three started, anxiously. Strange, Devona thought wryly, how each of them was bound to that slim, inert form lying there in that darkened room. Each in a different way. But bound, nevertheless.

"You needn't stay, Dale," Devona suggested after the first fruitless hour. "I hate taking so much of your precious time and—"

"Skip it," he muttered.

But in the end, they all had to go. The doctor, shaking his head anxiously, said Vara was much too overwrought about something to be disturbed. Any excitement, any strain on her already-weakened heart might prove fatal. Since mention of her daughter's name seemed to upset her, it might be several days before she could see her.

Tal is Busy

"I'll have to stay, Tal," Devona said later that evening when they were back in the Brasher drawing room. "After all—she is my mother. No matter what has happened. And she needs me now."

"Sure. Of course. We'll just postpone things until she's O.K.," Tal said, smiling, taking her hand.

"I hate upsetting your plans—"

"As it happens, you aren't." Tal came to perch on the arm of her chair. "Gay Dorset—she's the star for this show I'm working on — is arriving from San Francisco in a couple of days. I'm to meet her and go over some of the scenes. We'd have had to come back from Reno, anyway, darling. So—you see—it's working out O. K. all around."

Then she caught it back. Tal's eagerness, his renewed self-confidence had been bought at great price. But, she smiled up at him now, it was worth it.

Devona went to the hospital every day. But it was nearly a week before they let her see Vara. And when they did, Devona gasped with shock. Not Vara! Not that hollow-cheeked, pallid face against the pillow! It couldn't be.

"You're being swell about this aren't you Devona?" Dale smiled at her one afternoon when Tal was too busy with conferences to call for her after visiting hours at the hospital. "After all she didn't take her responsibilities toward you very seriously."

"She's ill now. And needs me. It's not being noble, Dale," Devona smiled wryly. "It's just being — dutiful."

Dale pressed her hand fiercely. "You're always that, aren't you? What would happen, I wonder, if we didn't either of us have a shred of conscience between us?"

Tears rushed into Devona's eyes again as they'd had a way of doing these past, hectic days. Tears she couldn't control. Tears that were always ready to put all the world out of focus.

Night of Revelry

"Look here. Let's pretend we have no conscience — just for tonight," Dale suggested as if he'd read her thought. "Tal's tied up with this Dorset dame, beauing her around Los Angeles while she makes up her mind if she likes the dialogue he's written for her. And surely there'd be nothing wrong in—say, our having dinner somewhere fancy and treating ourselves to a little dancing. Tal wouldn't care. And after all, we've not much to—remember."

There'd be harm, all right. Plenty of it. Every time they were together it was harder to go on with this masquerade. But, Devona couldn't refuse. One last glorious evening with Dale all to herself! She was human, after all!

Devona dressed carefully. One of the pretty lime green dinner gowns she'd selected as part of her trousseau. The color made her skin seem gardenia white, her hair blue-black. Slippers to match, a luxurious silver fox cape—Tal's engagement present to her. She stroked the soft fur a little guildily. This wasn't being exactly fair to Tal, she scolded herself. Not the dinner itself, nor the dancing—but the racing, tremulous thrill she couldn't suppress.

Determinedly, Devona tried to set a keynote of gay friendliness from the moment Dale crossed the Brownstone's dingy lobby to meet her.

"Look at the girl," he grinned, as he slipped her arm through his. "Isn't she gorgeous?"

"Isn't she, though!" Devona laughed back at him. "And her handsome big brother is no slouch himself. What kind of mischief shall we get into first?"

Dale accepted the keystone, pitched his own raillery to match as, over cocktails at the Top Hat and then dinner at Victor's, they bandied wisecracks as lightly as if their hearts were really in it.

"Now—let's go some place to dance," Dale suggested finally. "I crave soft music to soothe this savage soul."

Love Comes Back

So they went up onto the St. Claire Roof Garden where a muted orchestra played softly under a starlit sky. The warm, balmy night, the soft strains of the music, maybe it was the touch of Dale's arm about her waist, the smoothness of his chin pressed against her forehead—something snapped the frail bond by which she held her emotions in leash. Trembling washed over Devona and she clung to him, desperately, almost frantically.

Instantly responsive, Dale's arm tightened, his head turned until his lips pressed hard against her forehead, his heart thundered response to the clamor her own was setting up.

"Darling," he whispered. "Darling, how can I ever give you up?"

"I don't—know," she whispered, shaken. "I love you so."

"I love you too, my sweet."

After that, they drifed with the music— as if, for the moment, anyway, they had stepped into another world that held only themselves.

Another Prepesal

"Darling, we can't go through with this," Dale argued a little later as they stood looking deeply, hungrily into each other's eyes. "It's all a rotten mistake. But there's still time. We could slip over to Yuma. Once it was done—"

To Yuma. To be Dale's bride. Tonight, maybe. Details of that picture enlarged in Devona's, quick imagination. To belong to him "until derth" — forever and ever — Dale's!

That couldn't be. Devona knew that. Her shoulders sagged unconsciously under the burden of her renewed decision. And Dale must have realized it, too, because he said:

"I know. It's no use." And something died a little in his eyes. "Remembering what we'd done to Tal would stand between us the rest of our lives."

Devona nodded. After that, they danced in silence, arms, eyes, clinging hungrily as if this were to be the last look, the last embrace. Like hard-won reprieve from a life sentence to—

Suddenly Dale's eyes fixed on something just beyond her shoulder. He stiffened and surprise flickered across his face a moment before he covered it with poised control.

"There's Tal now."

Devona felt her own guilty conscience spread a quick flush to her cheeks. Tal! But—there was nothing to feel guilty about. Not now that they'd made the only right decision. Slowly—arming herself with her best smile—she turned to face her betrothed.

Every Ship In Huge Convoy Reaches Port

From Collier's Weekly (New York)

The largest ocean convoy in history—more than 50 ships loaded with $100,000,000 worth of war and food supplies for Britain — has safely crossed from Canada to England without the loss of so much as a bit of paint, according to a cabled report to Collier's Weekly from Quentin Reynolds, staff correspondent, who made the perilous North Atlantic crossing on one of the vessels.

Reynolds left a Canadian port in a convoy of some 25 ships.

"On the fifth morning," he reports, "we were given a surprise. Far to the southeast smoke fringed the horizon raggedly. We were almost stopped. Were these the raiders? We stood on the deck watching and then saw that this was not one ship but two — no, three, four, it was in fact another convoy come to join us; to add her strength to ours, the better to protect us both. In all there were 25 ships. They steamed solemnly toward us and took up their position to the rear. Then we sailed on—more than 50 of us, the largest convoy ever to attempt the crossing. I climbed the narrow steel ladder to the crow's nest. As far as the eye could see there were ships. Never before in the history of shipping did so many merchantmen form in orderly procession like this.

"In Canada the shipping agent told me that our cargo was worth about $2,000,000. This would probably be the average worth of each of the cargoes. That meant that our convoy (leaving out the actual cost of the ships themselves was worth more than $100,000,000. But, of course, this cargo cannot be valued in dollars and cents. In terms of lives that it will save, in terms of blows against Germany that it will strike and blows from Germany that it will ward off, its value is beyond any consideration of dollars and cents."

During the entire voyage the convoy was in danger of attack only once by submarine, and endangered once by a floating mine. The submarine was destroyed by one of several ex-American destroyers guarding the convoy and the mine was sunk by machine-gun fire. The only Nazi planes encountered were heard overhead, and they passed unseen in the night, unaware of the rich prize beneath them.

Reynolds recalls that two months ago Hitler boasted that when Spring came he would have 600 new submarines in action and that it would be impossible for convoys to reach England in safety.

"A few days after Hitler's boast," Reynolds states, "Churchill answered him and laughed at his grandiloquent ranting. Churchill knew how long it would take to build 600 submarines. But people I met in New York and Chicago and Detroit and Los Angeles shook their heads. Who was right?

"I came to England by convoy to find out. The answer is that I am writing this in the messroom of a freighter that has just crossed from Canada and now lies in an English port. I know that more than 50 of us left and I know that by late this afternoon every single one of those ships had arrived in British harbors. We would have been unable to do that had 600 German submarines been lurking beneath the surface of the Atlantic."

First Bottle Convinced Him Syntona Was Great Medicine

Tells of Relief from Stomach Misery, Constipation, Dizzy Spells and Muscular Pains.

"I am certainly glad I started taking Syntona when I did," said Mr. Henry Riehl, 317 Pall Mall St, London, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"I suffered greatly with stomach gas, acidity and constipation and I had become badly rundown. There was a scalded feeling in my throat and chest and I had pains in my arms and shoulders. Awful dizzy spells used to come over me, my tongue was constantly coated and my breath was bad. I slept poorly and I felt constantly fatigued.

Syntona had helped other members of my family and they advised me to take it, too, and it has done wonders for me. Right from the first few doses, my appetite picked up, my food began to digest better and my bowels became more regular. Now, after continuing with this medicine for a few weeks, I feel just fine once more. The pains have gone from my muscles. I am rid of those dizzy spells and I can do work around the garden which I was not able to do all summer. Since I have been getting my proper sleep. I feel more energetic and happy than I did in years. I think it is great, at my age, to get a medicine that does so much for me.

LONDON DESCRIBES CRETE SITUATION "SERIOUS"

President Promises Dynamic Defence Against Attack

Roosevelt Proclaims State Of Unlimited Emergency In Historic Radio Address

APPEALS FOR UNITY

Washington, May 28—(AP)—The United States is committed unreservedly to a policy of active resistance against all Nazi efforts to gain control of the seas.

President Roosevelt proclaimed a state of unlimited emergency in an historic radio address last night and promised the United States a dynamic defence against attack or threat of attack.

He told the world, in the face of Berlin warnings, that the administration is determined to deliver munitions and goods to Britain, utilizing the present patrols which "are helping now" and "all additional measures . . . (which) are being devised by our military and naval technicians."

He accused Hitler and his Axis partners of an intent to conquer the world and "strangle the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada." He added that the war was "coming very close to home."

He gave advance notice that occupation of Dakar, the Azores or the Cape Verde Islands by Axis forces would constitute a direct danger to the safety and freedom of the hemisphere.

"We in the Americas," he declared, "will decide for ourselves whether and when, and where our American interests are attacked or our security threatened.

"We will not hesitate to use our armed forces to repel attack."

Strengthen Defences

To underscore the acute gravity of the world situation as he saw it, President Roosevelt issued his formal declaration "that as unlimited national emergency exists and requires the strengthening of our defence to the extreme limit of our national power and authority."

"Your Government," he told the people of the United States, "has the right to expect of all citizens that they take part in the common work of our common defence—take loyal part from this moment forward."

Addressing himself particularly to capital and labor, he said no disputes must interfere with arms production. The Government henceforth would exert all its powers to end production stoppages.

Referred to Canada

The President referred repeatedly to Canada and her place in

British Sub Sinks 18,000-ton Liner Bound For Libya

London, May 28 (CP).—An 18,000-ton Axis liner, carrying probably 3,000 troops to Libya, was counted as sunk today in what the Admiralty called heavy, new losses dealt by submarines "upon the enemy's reinforcements and supplies for his armies" in North Africa.

Besides the liner, which a communique said was hit by two torpedoes and is considered to have been sunk, the Admiralty said a 5,000-ton French tanker headed toward Tripoli definitely was sunk, a 5,000-ton transport or supply ship was probably sunk by torpedoes and a heavily-laden, 4,000-ton tanker was hit by torpedoes.

These attacks, it said, were delivered while the Axis vessels were under heavy escort by Italian warships.

"It is now known," the communique added, "that the Italian destroyer described in the Admiralty communique of May 23 as probably sunk was destroyed."

This, too, was in British submarine action against Axis sea communications to North Africa. The Admiralty then announced destruction of a 9,000-ton troopship, a 7,000-ton tanker and a schooner of a type used to ferry ammunition.

Lord Mountbatten Safe In Crete

London, May 28—(CP) — Lord Louis Mountbatten, 40-year-old cousin of King George, was reported safe in a cabled message received by Lady Mountbatten today after the destroyer Kelly under his command was lost in the furious fighting off Crete five days ago.

It was not stated how Lord Louis, a naval veteran of two wars and son of a German prince who once was Britain's First Sea Lord, was saved.

The royal family here has been waiting anxiously for news of him.

Lord Louis was the second son of Louis Alexander Mountbatten, who, as Prince Louis of Battenberg, became a naturalized Briton in 1868. The father's German descent partly was responsible for his being forced out of office as Britain's First Sea Lord in the early days of the first Great War.

Commission Rejects Buddy Baer's Claim

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Buddy Baer's claim to the world heavyweight title, on the contention he was fouled today by the District of Columbia Boxing Commission.

The Commission upheld Referee Arthur Donovan's action in declaring Baer the loser by disqualification.

Chairman Claude Owen announced that Promoter Mike Jacobs had agreed to match Baer and Louis in a return title bout here the first week in October.

ROYAL AIR FORCE STILL POUNDING NAZIS ON CRETE

British Troops, Who Held Canea, Withdraw to More Favorable Position in Rear

FASCIST DIV. QUITS

Cairo, Egypt May 28.—(AP)—British troops who had held Canea, capital of Crete, have been "obliged to make a further withdrawal to a more favorable position in the rear", but "severe fighting continues", the Middle East Command announced today.

Its communique also said British troops had "temporarily withdrawn from Halfaya Pass", strategic position in the Salum area, on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier. This retreat was made in the face of "numerially superior forces", the communique added.

The Royal Air Force still was pounding at the Germans on Crete, flying there from bases on the African mainland, and a Middle East R.A.F. communique today reported "a number of successful attacks" Monday night and Tuesday on the German-occupied airdrome of Malemi, ten miles southwest of Canea.

26th Italian Division, General Surrender

In Ethiopia, Gen. Cafarati, commanding the 26th Italian division, has surrendered "and the while 26th division is reported to be coming in".

This is in the lakes region where the communique said, heavier British pressure is being brought to bear on the Italians.

In Iraq, the situation is called unchanged in the Habbaniyah-Falluja area and still quiet at Basra.

Axis Planes Destroyed

The R.A.F.s communique said that a heavy daylight attack yesterday destroyed a number of Axis planes on the ground at the Crete air base of Malemi and that three German dive bombers were shot down north of the island by long-range British fighters.

During a Monday night attack, five German planes were destroyed on the ground at Malemi and several others set afire on nearby beaches.

2 Axis Merchant Ships Hit

Other R.A.F. bombers, it was announced, directly hit two Axis merchantmen, of between 8,000 and 10,000 tons each off the African coast. Aditional forces raided Bengasi Monday night, demolishing a building and starting waterfront fires, the communique said.

21 American Republics Plan Strict Control of Exported War Materials

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Bulwarking President Roosevelt's unmistakable challenge to the Axis, the 21 American Republics today planned strict control of all exports of war materials as economic defence against Nazi threats to the peace and security of the Western Hemisphere.

Inter-American diplomatic negotiations already under way, it was learned authoritatively, are designed to achieve continental solidarity in the words of President Roosevelt "against the common danger" by having eaeh American nation impose export control systems.

Such systems would:

1. Conserve all strategic raw materials and manufactured products required for defence of the hemisphere (and aid to Britain) by placing restrictions on export of war supplies to areas outside this continent.

2. Prohibit re-export of vital materials and goods (except to other American nations) which have been imported from another country, in order to plug any leaks through which Germany, Italy, or Axis-dominated countries might obtain supplies.

At least seven South and Central American Repunlics already have adopted export control systems of varying degrees, and negotiations inspired by the United States are in progress among the other republics.

To encourage the "unity of action" asked for by the President of the United States, it was learned, is prepared to:

1. Buy from the other American republics materials which in the past they exported to European or Asiatic nations, particularly rubber, tin, copper, mercury and a long list of strategic minerals.

2. Grant general licences for export to the American republics of United States materials and supplies at present strictly rationed and exportable only when individual licences have been obtained for each shipment.

The United States adopted the export control system not only to conserve scrap metal, aluminum, machine tools and other vitally-needed raw materials and products but to prevent their reaching the Axis.

The President's strong plea for unified hemisphere action, it was said, may spur other American republics in utilizing Axis ships and other foreign-flag vessels now lying idle in American ports.

Roosevelt is Expected To Clear Up Question Of Convoys With Press

Washington, May 28 — (AP)—President Roosevelt will hold a special press conference late this afternoon at which he is expected to clear up the question of convoys.

Stephen Early, Presidential Secretary, was advised by reporters that the President's speech last night in which he committed the United States unreservedly to a policy of active resistance to all German efforts to gain control of the seas left some confusion around the convoy issue. Early replied:

"I think he will clear that up this afternoon and I would rather he would do it."

In his momentous radio address to the world last night the President did not speak specifically of American naval escorts for British-bound ships. But he did say that the American patrol system was expanding and that all necessary additional steps would be taken to guarantee the arrival of American-made war supplies to Britain.

Secretary Gives His Opinion

Early had explained that he thought Mr. Roosevelt meant that the patrol would be made better and more efficient and more ships would be added to it.

Probably, he indicated, Mr. Roosevelt will feel inclined to dispel doubt about what may be done, if anything, about revision of the Neutrality Law.

To a question whether the President's plea that all citizens put defence first meant that time for debate was over, Early replied by declaring that certainly free speech would continue.

He said that while the speech last night represented "80 per cent of the job," the President had about a 20 per cent "clean up to do."

Severe Electric Storm at Toronto

Toronto, May 28 (CP).—One of the worst electric and rain storms in years swept over the Toronto area late last night and early today.

Power was off in several sections of the city, Hydro officials reporting that one area of Parkdale, in the west end, was without lights for seven hours.

By retiring to bed a few minutes earlier than usual, Frank and Mrs. Brown of Rosethorn Avenue, escaped possible death when lightning struck their kitchen and resulting flames swept through that room.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their three children were almost hurled out of their beds by the lightning bolt.

SEND CABLE TO HITLER

Rockford, Ill., May 28 (AP)—Rockford Chapter of the Committee to defend America by aiding the Allies last night cabled Hitler to "abide by your pledge word and stop bombing defenceless women and children and open towns and cities; return all territory you have seized unlawfully and which you pledged nl 1939 you had no designs upon. . . ." The cable was addressed to "Warmonger No. 1, Berlin."

NEW TYPE LANDING GEAR

New York, May 28 (CP).—Designs for a new type of landing gear just developed by English engineers to enable planes to take off from bomb pitted airports were brought here yesterday on the Atlantic clipper by two representatives of the United States Army Air Corps. The Royal Air Force has not yet used the device.

BRITISH WARSHIPS SCOUR OCEAN FOR GERMAN CRUISER

Admiralty Hoping for Clean Sweep of Bismarck Squadron

DASHED FOR SAFETY

London, May 28 (CP)—Fifty to 100 British warships and a swarm of planes searched the vast Atlantic today for the 10,000-ton German cruiser Prinz Eugen, in hope of a clean sweep of the Bismarck squadron.

Into the quest was thrown much of the powerful concentration of naval forces which closed for the kill yesterday on the 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck, hounded 1,750 miles down the Atlantic from close to the Arctic circle, crippled, trapped, then sunk in a thunder of shellfire and torpedoing.

The Prinz Eugen, which was with the Bismarck last Saturday when she sank the battle cruiser Hood and damaged the new 35,000-ton Prince of Wales, had dashed for safety perhaps back to the Norwegian port of Bergen from which the German ships sailed.

R.C.A.F. Issues Casualty List

Ottawa, May 28 (CP)—Twelve airmen, eight overseas and four in Canada were reported killed in flying accidents in the 45th casualty list of the war issued today by Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters.

Today's list brought the total number reported dead and missing in R.C.A.F. casualty lists since war began to 273.

The list also contained the names of one airman missing and presumed drowned overseas, one dead from natural causes in Canada, one dangerously injured in a flying accident in Canada, one dangerously ill in Canada, two seriously injured in flying accidents in Canado, and one listed simply as seriously injured in Canada.

561 AXIS SHIPS SUNK, SCUTTLED OR SEIZED IN WAR

Nazis Using Coastal Vessels To Ease Internal Transportation Situation

GET 33 IN WEEK

London, May 28 (CP).—Five hundred and sixty-one Axis ships totalling 2,873,000 tons have been sunk, captured or scuttled since the war began up to the middle of May, it was learned officially today.

The Germans lost 346 ships totalling 1,773,000 tons, of which 61 were captured or seized and 285 sunk or scuttled.

The Italians lost 215 ships totalling 1,100,000 tons of which 39 were captured or seized and 176 sunk or scuttled.

An additional 38 ships of other countries totalling 67,000 tons which had been sailing on behalf of Germany "have been disposed of by one means or another," it was stated.

The sinkings are continuing, officials said, indicating that the Axis ships are still trying to run the blockade.

In the week beginning April 23, the navy accounted for 14 German and 19 Italian ships.

Between March 13 and May 14 the bomber and coastal commands sank or directly hit 61 vessels off German or German-occupied coasts. Some were in convoy, some sailing singly but not all were sunk.

The Germans are using coastal waters to ease their internal transportation situation.

German Radio Denounces 'FDR' On Freedom of Seas

New York, May 28 (AP)—The German radio, in a propaganda broadcast heard here today by the Columbia Broadcasting System, denounced President Roosevelt's attitude on freedom of the seas as meaning "nothing short of unlimited control by Washington of the world's sea lanes" and an "economic dictatorship" which Germany cannot tolerate.

It insisted that "Germany is only too willing to carry on commerce with the entire world," and that European markets would be able to absorb immense quantities of American products "if Washington's policy were a more helpful and realistic one."

TRIAL ENDS QUICKLY

Boston, May 28 (AP)—The trial of Mrs. Ruth Steadman, 26, for the strangling of her married sweetheart, Robert Emery, 26, ended abruptly today when she pleaded guilty to manslaughter. She was immediately sentenced by Judge Vincent Brogna to serve 15 years in woman's reformatory.

Several Famous Landmarks Damaged in Recent Nazi Air Raid

London, May 28 (CP).—The authorities permitted the announcement today that several noted London landmarks, including the Temple, Gray's Inn, Serjeant's Inn and St. Nicholas Cole Abbey had been damaged in recent German air raids.

The Temple, heart of legal London, and Temple Church, largest of the remaining round churches in England, suffered heavy damage.

The tomb of Oliver Goldsmith, in the churchyard, was battered by falling masonry but his statue had only a chip knocked from the tip of the nose.

Flames spreading through the church, whose round section was consecrated in 1185, burned for six or seven hours, melting the leaden roof and destroying stained glass windows.

The ancient Masters House of the Temple, damaged in a previous raid, was hit again, demolishing a reading room of the library and inner Temple Hall.

Flames spread from inner Temple Hall to the Cloisters, Fig Tree Court and Crown Office Row, which contained the Charles Lamb memorial.

Six of eight statues of crusaders—the Temple originally was the seat in England of the crusading order of Knights Templar—were made unrecognizable by tons of falling masonry.

It was said authoritatively that half the Temple was destroyed.

Gray's Inn, fourth and last of the great inns of court, to which many famed Elizabethans belonged, also was heavily damaged. The 16th Century Hall was destroyed and the library, with most of its 20,000 volumes, was burned out.

A relic of the first great war—the remains of a German incendiary bomb which fell in the neighborhood—was lost, but a Catalpa tree planted by Sir Walter Raleigh was undamaged.

British And Greek Troops Fight Under Appalling Strain

Constantly Reinforced Invasion Forces Now Apparently Outnumber Defenders

CONTINUOUS BOMBING

London, May 28 (CP)—An authoritative source stated the Nazis had further strengthened their positions in Crete in the last 24 hours.

He said British troops were fighting under "the appalling strain of continuous bombing from the air, day and night, with no let up."

The German invasion forces, constantly reinforced by air, now apparently outnumbered the British-Greek defenders, it was said earlier, and the situation was described as "serious."

Painting what he characterized as "not a rosy picture," an authoritative source said the worst danger spot was still the Malemi area but that the Allied position around Canea and Suda Bay also "undoubtedly is precarious."

Some Improvement at Retimo

There has been some improvement at Retimo, but further German reinforcements have landed by parachute at Heraclean (Candia) and the situation there is "not too good," this source asserted.

Would Conscript Canadian Manpower

Kimberley B.C., May 28 (CP) — S. G. Blaylock President and General Manager of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company in an address to the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia last night called for conscription of manpower in Canada and said he would like to see 'every male over 20 years old conscripted and put on army pay."

'It is fairly evident that our main political parties frowned on conscription largely for fear of the reaction on the French Canadians in Quebec Province," he said. "I am told now that not only is Quebec Province leading Ontario in voluntary recruiting for the services, but that the French Canadians in Quebec are leading the recruiting in that province."

SAYS NAZI FORCES HAVE PROBABLY RECAPTURED POST OF SALUM

London, May 28 (CP)—An authoritative source conceded today that Nazi forces probably have recaptured the Egyptian frontier post of Salum which, he said, "has passed from hand to hand so often that it is getting slightly worn out."

He described the situation on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, however, as "not frightfully serious."

In Iraq the British position is "undoubtedly better," this source declared.

39 Survivors Of S. S. Marconi Are Rescued

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—The United States Coast Guard and Navy reported today that 39 survivors of the British steamship Marconi had been rescued by the Coast Guard Cutter General Greene about 270 miles southeast of Greenland.

The Navy reported that about 40 more crew members—the Coast Guard said 60 — of the Marconi were believed drifting in two lifeboats in heavy fog in the same vicinity. The Coast Guard Cutter was searching for them.

The Navy's information did not state the manner of the Marconi's sinking, but the coast guard radio report declared she was torpedoed yesterday.

First of the survivors, a chief officer and 19 men, were found at 4.45 a.m. E.D.T., and at that time the navy was notified "three other boats believed in general vicinity with 60 men."

About four hours later, the Cutter radioed the finding of a second lifeboat carrying 19 seamen.

There was no indication that any passengers were aboard the Marconi, a freight and passenger vessel. The ship's port of registry was Liverpool.

The Marconi is listed in Lloyd's register of shipping as a 7,402-ton vessel.

MAY BOOST DEFENCE OUTLAY BEYOND $31,000,000,000

Washington, May 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt's request to the United States Congress for an additional $3,319,000,000 for Army and Navy planes may boost cash defence expenditures beyond $31,000,000,000 in this and the next fiscal year, informed members of the Legislature said today.

SAYS KINGSTON NEEDS $50,000 WORTH OF NEW FIRE EQUIPMENT

A recommendation for the expenditure of approximately $50,000 by Kingston City Council to bring Kingston Fire Department up to 100 per cent efficiency, has been made by Fire Chief James Armstrong. The recommended expenditure included the purchase of a new aerial ladder truck, a new 800 gallon pumper, a new fire station for the west end of the city where industrial expansion has made greater fire protection necessary, alterations to present fire stations and the purchase of approximately 1,500 feet of hose.

$12,000 CONTRACT FOR ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS

Additional buildings are to be erected at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School. A contract for these, at about $12,000 was let to the Ontario Construction Company last week. On May 1st., a contract was let to the same company for additional buildings costing $90,000.

MILK PRODUCTION REACHES MAXIMUM

The amount of cheese manufactured in the Bay of Quinte district during the present week will in all likelihood be the maximum for the season, according to district cheesemakers, who state that already the flow of milk has been reached. It is very seldom indeed that the flow of milk is reached so early in the season, they state. Several factories in the district have already attained their regular maximum daily output with a few having surpassed old records.

Unless more than the ordinary amount of rainfall for this time of year is forthcoming, to keep pastures fresh, the flow of milk from now on will gradually decrease according to cheesemakers.

POLICE BLOTTER

Sneak thieves entered a cottage at Rossmore over the past week-end and ransacked the premises, Provincial Police were told Tuesday. The cottage is the property of Miss McCreary. Nothing of value was reported stolen, however.

Belleville police were today notified that 16-year-old James Hodgkisson had escaped from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School. The lad was committed to the institution from a local juvenile court some time ago.

Two inebriates and three transients shared the cell block at the police station last night.

A plate glass window which was found broken at Mason's grocery store early Tuesday, was discovered by the owner, who reported the incident to P. C. Evans. It is believed a stone was flicked through the window from the tire of a passing motor vehicle and was purely accidental.

Young Orators Address Members Of Kiwanis Club

Four Students of St. Michael's Academy Discuss Live Topics of the Day

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Trained in public speaking by Sisters of St. Michael's Academy, four students of that school addressed the members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel, and the appreciation of the club was most ably presented by Gordon Barclay. The young orators were introduced by Dr. Reg. Anderson, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee and through the class of entertainment this member is providing the club, it is little wonder that attendance for the club is the highest in the district.

The addresses have been given in their entirety, when the same students spoke to the Rotary Club some weeks ago. Bobby Fleury, Joe Whalen, Tommy Mascaro and Dave Callaghan certainly earned the plaudits of the members with their timely messages. Bobby Fleury spoke on "A Tribute to Their Majesties," Joe Whalen on "Distribution of Canadian Army Mail," Tommy Mascaro on "Winston Churchill, the Man," and Dave Callaghan on "Nylon." Each spoke in clear, firm voice, the enunciation was perfect and the points clearly assembled and concisely put. There was no trace of nervousness in any of the speakers and Belleville will be well represented by after-dinner speakers, who will follow a gifted list of speakers from this city. The audience paid rapt attention to each orator and this fact was commented on by Gordon Barclay in his appreciation remarks. It was a splendid gesture by the Entertainment Chairman to have these boys present and a return engagement will not be amiss.

Jack McVeigh, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who was in charge as General Chairman of the Tag Day held on Saturday, thanked each and everyone for the part he or she played in the fine performance of the club. Especial thanks was paid to Mrs. Jim Barclay, wife of the President and Chairlady for the Kiwanis Queens and her helpers for the splendid assistance given in making the Tag Day an unqualified success. Mr. Fred Deacon was also thanked for the receipted bill for $12 given the club, and which will be applied to the funds before being sent to Toronto. Jack said the results of the efforts showed that Kiwanians can be counted on to take an active part in any worthwhile objective and the money obtained will help the sun shine for some in Britain.

President Jim Barclay presided, Mr. Mars was sergeant-at-arms and Harold Carruthers song leader. Leo B. Riggs accompanied in his most capable manner.

Parallel Parking By-law Given Second Reading In Council

Carried by Majority of One After Yeas and Nays Taken

OTHER BUSINESS

If the Department of Highways at Queen's Park accepts the by-law given its second reading at the regular meeting of the City Council on Monday evening, parallel parking will prevail on the west side of Front Street and angle parking from Bridge Street to McCarthy Theatre and on the north side of Victoria Avenue from Front Street to Pinnacle Street. The by-law was carried by a majority of one and after the Yeas and Nays had been asked for on the measure the following vote was recorded by the City Clerk, Yeas: Mayor Thompson, Aldermen Allin, Butler, Clapp, Follwell Jeffery and Pringle; Nays: Aldermen Armstrong, Clarke, Kennedy Rollins, Wotten and Marshall.

Ald. Harry Rollins who was chairman in the Committee of the Whole and Chairman of the Committee on By-laws requested before he took his seat as Chairman of the Committee on By-laws if he would be allowed to speak to the Parking By-law when it was introduced and was ruled out of order by the Mayor until after the by-law was read. Ald Rollins refused to accept the chairmanship under these conditions and retired to his seat in the Chamber and Ald. Wotten assumed the duties of Chairman to read the by-law. Before the by-law was read Ald. Rollins, who vigorously opposed the changing of parking on Front Street stated that he was sorry the Mayor had assumed such an attitude on such an important question. "I am still opposed to the change", said Ald. Rollins and I think the members who are in favor will regret their stand in the not too distant future".

Personally Endorses Scheme

"Personally", continued the Alderman, "I like parallel parking but I am here to serve the majority of the citizens and those whom I have talked to are definitely opposed to parallel parking You are just making a death trap and a speedway out of Front Street if you agree to the change in the by-law. I would favor parallel parking if the project along the River was completed. Women do the most of the shopping in this district and they nearly all drive cars and they are adverse to parallel parking and I am sure the farmers of the district are of the same mind." Mayor Thompson in answer said. Rollins stated he took exception to the remarks about being out of order. "I try to run this council to the best of my ability said the Mayor and I ruled he could not address the council until the by-law was read and I think I am right in that contention".

Relinquishes Chair

Ald. Rollins: "I look to the chair for guidance and accepted his ruling in good faith and relinquished the chair so I could speak on this by-law. Ald. Clapp: "This matter has been before the council on many occasions and I am prepared to contradict the statements made by Ald. Rollins. I think we have as good drivers both lady and men as there are in Toronto and they have parallel parking in that city. I believe the new system will make more room on Front Street and will be for better driving conditions in this city".

The business of the Council generally was rather slim and the meeting was of short duration. Louis Rump was appointed to the Belleville Fire Department and Chairman of Fire was given authority to hire any help needed when members of the brigade are on vacation. The offer of E. L. Ruddy was accepted but the signs to be erected are to be placed according to the instigation of the City Engineer and the Chairman of Public Works. A light will be placed on Highland Avenue between Burton and Charlotte Streets. A "stop sign" will also be erected on Lingham Street, where it enters Victoria Avenue. A grant of $50 was given to defray expenses of promoting the Victory Loan Drive and the City Hall was ordered decorated for the occasion.

Granted Permission

Rev. E. N. O. Kulbeck was granted permission to use the City Hall auditorium on certain nights if available for a series of meetings but the proceeds were ordered to be paid to war victims. The members concurred in a resolution requesting a 25 per cent fare for soldiers on leave. By-laws confirming sale of land to Charles Hughes, Charles Kidd, George Way, Adrian Cruiji and Dr. A. C. Locke were confirmed as also the agreement with Ernie Bunnett for the collection of garbage in the city for the coming year at a price of $5,000. Under the heading of motions Ald. Allin introduced a motion to have signs placed on each side of the overhead bridge on North Front Street with the wording "Slow, Narrow Bridge".

Report Given

A report of the special committee to investigate the conditions on land used as a garbage dump was given and herewith follows:—

Special Committee

Belleville, May 27, 1941.

The Special Committee formed for the purpose of viewing the City Garbage Dump and Water Front property adjacent thereto begs to report as follows:

The members of your Committee consisting of the Comptroller, Aldermen Butler and Armstrong and Acting City Engineer Matthews, the other members of the Committee being absent, met on the afternoon of May 22nd and viewed the property in question.

At the location where the garbage is presently being dumped the system as continued there will render the property ultimately becoming a valuable piece of land so far as the property is concerned.

To the east of the present dump, due to carelessness in dumping garbage and other refuse the unclaimed land has become in a very disorderly condition, hummocks and piles of garbage and other refuse making the contour very irregular, and one considerable portion is littered with tin cans and old steel and iron, etc.

The Committee feels that if the following suggestions are carried out they will enure to the benefit of the property and the City of Belleville generally, and will also have a beneficial result from a sanitary point of view.

(1) The Committee recommends that all the hummocks or uneven portions of the ground to the east of the site where the garbage is presently dumped be levelled as much as possible by the use of labour and that all old steel and tin cans be gathered up as far as possible and deposited in the water at the southern extremity of the present location of the garbage dump, and that after this work has been completed, the City light road-roller be used to level as much as possible the property, and that suitable signs be erected under the direction of the City Engineer to warn the public and others as to where garbage is in the future to be dumped.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

E. O. Butler,
Chairman,
H. J. Armstrong,
H. J. Allin.

Canadian Jewish Congress Gives Recreational Furniture, Equipment To Military Camps and Barracks

A typical mess furnished by the Canadian Jewish War Efforts Committee.

Ottawa, May 28 —The Department of National Defense has accepted with thanks the offer of the War Efforts Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress to assume major responsibility for supplying recreational furniture and equipment to military camps and barracks of the Canadian Active Army throughout Canada, it was announced today.

This ambitious program, long under consideration by the War Efforts Committee, entails the furnishing of more than 500 rooms in the military districts of the Dominion. Cost of furnishing the rooms will be borne by the Congress and the funds will come from Jewish citizens who are contributors to the Canadian Jewish Congress War Efforts Fund, a registered body under the War Charities Act.

In Ontario the Women's Committee will take charge of the work of purchasing and allocating all furnishings for Ontario camps. This committee acts as the co-ordinating link between Congress and all other Jewish women's organizations engaged in war work.

Maintenance of Morale

Authorities of the Defense Department expressed appreciation of the offer made by Congress and in announcing its acceptance, pointed out that proper recreation for soldiers during off-duty hours is "most important in the maintenance of morale."

"The department makes provision insofar as is possible for recreation quarters for the men, n.c.o.'s and officers of each unit in the camp," it was stated. "However, due to the fact that no unit knows how long it will be stationed in any centre, the men and officers have not been in a position to provide proper furnishing for themselves in these quarters."

Progress Made

Already more than 150 huts have been furnished by the War Efforts Committee in Ontario. Extension of the program to cover the entire Dominion means a considerable stepping-up of the work of the Congress. Several months ago the Congress, which has been doing all types of auxiliary services work since the outbreak of war, began to consider the possibility of undertaking a nation-wide program.

A survey was made of the needs of all camps throughout Canada and this resulted in the offer by Congress to the defense authorities.

Typical Room

A typical room furnished by the Canadian Jewish Congress contains upholstered and wooden arm chairs, chesterfield sofas, writing tables, lamps, ping-pong tables, games, ash trays, radio and piano. All the equipment supplied, with the exception of pianos and radios, is new.

The work is entirely separate from the canteens maintained by such organizations as the Knights of Columbus, Canadian Legion, Y.M.C.A. and the Salvation Army which are open to men of all units. The unit quarters belong entirely to the members of the individual unit and serve as a place where the men may find quiet and relaxation when off duty.

Social and Religious Welfare Work

The War Efforts Committee of Congress is the central body which has been co-ordinating the war work of Jewish organizations throughout Canada. Its program of war work includes social and religious welfare work among the Jewish troops. Contact is maintained insofar as possible with all Jewish enlisted men and their families. Comforts are sent monthly to men overseas and next-of-kin leagues have been formed. Religious services have been organized in various centres for Jewish men on active service and with the appointment of Rabbi S. Gershon Levi as Jewish Chaplain, this work now comes under his jurisdiction.

The activities of Congress are not limited to Jewish soldiers. Aside from participation in all patriotic efforts it also plays an active role in all general auxiliary services work. With the recognition of Congress as the agency officially responsible for furnishing camps, this phase of its military auxiliary service program now assumes a major role.

Local Branch Supplies Furniture

The Belleville, Trenton and Picton Branch of the Canadian Jewish Congress has supplied the furniture to the N.C.O's mess, R.A.F. station Picton, and 6RD N.C.O.'s mess, Trenton.

The War Efforts Committee of the Belleville, Trenton, and Picton Branch of the Congress is composed of Honorary Chairmen: J. Diamond, A. Safe, Alex Lipson, Ben Springer Chairman, J. J. Berger, Co-Chairman, J. Yanover, Vice-Chairmen, A. Diamond and Percy Gitelman.

HIPEL BECOMES LANDS MINISTER, HEENAN LABOR

Hon. F. Oliver, Public Works Minister, Adds Welfare Post to His Duties

CHANGES ANTICIPATED

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Three portfolios in Premier Hepburn's Ontario cabinet changed hands today as Hon: Norman Hipel, Labor Minister, took over the Lands and Forests portfolio held by Hon. Peter Heenan and Mr. Heenan became Labor Minister. The Public Welfare portfolio, also held by Mr. Hipel, was added to that already held by Hon. Farquhar Oliver, Public Works Minister.

The new cabinet alignment was announced yesterday by Mr. Hepburn who said that Mr. Heenan had been anxious for some time to retire from the Lands and Forests post.

"The administration of Lands and Forests has become increasingly contentious and beset with difficulties such as the proration problems," the Premier said. "We are placing in the post a man of wide experience in the lumbering and construction industries and one who is familiar with the new problems which are being presented in the utilization of wood products."

Col. Drew's Comment

Comment of Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Conservative leader in the legislature, was that "the change was long overdue."

"It is at least a step in the right direction," Col. Drew said. "No matter what admirable personal qualities Mr. Heenan may possess, he has shown no ability to administer this vitally important department, and it is doubtful if more unbusinesslike methods could have been found in any public office than were disclosed at the recent timber inquiry."

He said the administration of Lands and Forests, under successive governments, has been under constant attack. The nature of the forest assets and the multitude of uses for them which science has disclosed "make it necessary to place our forest resources under a businesslike administration and under clearly defined long-term policies, which can best be brought about by creating an Ontario Forest Resources Commission."

Heenan's Experience in Labor Failed

Mr. Hepburn referred to Mr. Heenan's wide experience in the labor field, first as a trade Unionist while driving a locomotive and then as Federal Labor Minister in the Mackenzie King government from 1926 to 1930. Mr. Heenan was appointed to the Lands and Forests post in the Hepburn government in 1934 when he resigned from the House of Commons.

The Premier emphasized that the war-training program fathered by Mr. Hipel since the outbreak of war will remain under his direction. He will continue to direct the aircraft and industrial training projects at Galt and will retain his active association with the technical and agricultural training projects which are under joint direction of the labor, agriculture and educational departments.

Mr. Hipel, a former speaker in the Ontario House, was raised to the labor portfolio in 1938. Mr. Hepburn said the burden upon the new Labor Minister has been lightened further by placing the Public Welfare Department with Mr. Oliver. The latter, first elected as a United Farmers of Ontario member, was raised to the cabinet early this year.

The senate will give third reading to bills arising from the budget.

YESTERDAY:

The House in committee passed the amendments to the Pensions Act and gave third reading to bills regulating the interprovincial export of game and amending the Indian Act; heard John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, describe Canada's pension provisions as "a callous betrayal" and "nauseating disappointment for Canadians from coast to coast", and criticism from some other members of certain aspects of the treatment accorded disabled soldiers and their dependents; heard Prime Minister Mackenzie King say: "I don't think there is any reason to be concerned about the situation at the (French) islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon".

The Senate referred the bill amending the Excess Profits Tax Act to its banking and commerce committee and gave second reading to other budget bills.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Roosevelt's Pledge Is Not Affected By Canada's Status

By F. J. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 28 (CP)—President Roosevelt's pledge to "actively resist, wherever necessary, and with all our resources every attempt by Hitler to extend his Nazi domination to the Western Hemisphere, or to threaten it" is not affected by Canada's belligerent status, informed sources said here last night.

In its essence, Mr. Roosevelt's pledge springs from the Monroe doctrine, enunciated as long ago as 1823 by President Monroe. The doctrine originally was intended to embrace Central and South America but through the years, at least by implication, it was extended to Canada.

President Roosevelt, himself, embraced Canada within the Monroe doctrine at Kingston, Ont., in his memorable speech in which he said the United States would not stand idly by if Canada was attacked.

The doctrine was carried into practical effect by the establishment of the Canada-United Permanent Joint Defence Board.

But Canada's right to go to war was not touched by the extension of the Monroe doctrine or the policy of collaborating with the United States in continental defence.

Similarly, Canada's status of belligerency at the present time does not affect Mr. Roosevelt's pledge to resist Nazi domination in the Western Hemisphere.

His pledge merely emphasized and underscored the Monroe doctrine. The fact that Canada is the only American nation at war means his pledge has peculiar significance for Canada because the Dominion, at least theoretically, stands in the most most danger of German attack or attempted domination.

Bulk Of Britain's Naval Losses Suffered In Rescuing Survivors

London, May 27 (CP).—An officer aboard a British warship of the Mediterranean fleet disclosed today that the bulk of Britain's naval losses around Crete were suffered when vessels returned to pick up survivors from other stricken ships.

The officer, in an interview with a Reuters News Agency correspondent quoted by the British Broadcasting Corporation, described how German aircraft "darted among our ships like flies" whenever a British ship attempted to rescue survivors.

"When H.M.S. Greyhound was sunk by concentrated dive bombing," the officer related, "two destroyers were sent back to pick up survivors, while two cruisers, Gloucester and Fiji, lent aircraft support.

"Gloucester received direct hits and sank.

"Shortly afterwards, Fiji, heroically battling to stave off unhampered air attacks, also sank."

The officer's account said the destroyers Kashmir and Kelly were dive-bombed and sunk after they had attacked Malemi airdrome and tried to pick up survivors from the sunken Fiji.

He said the destroyer Kimberley did "heroic work" and managed to save 250 seamen. The Kimberley reached port safely after a "tremendous attack" from the air.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, May 29

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of enterprise and initiative may be indicated by the lunar and mutual aspects, with matters moving into high grooves of accomplishment not only by strenuous attack, creative ability and high-presure measures, but by push, industry and well-made plans and invincible and practical objectives. Executive ability will also play major part, with new ventures as well as static situations responding to constructive and sustained effort. Clever balances of opposing forces and conflicting circumstances operate effectively. Personal activities should also be stimulated and give happiness. Confer with elders.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which their own individual and well-directed energies, forces and faculties should push both old and new affairs into high spots of achievement and satisfaction, initiative, aggressive methods, executive ability as well as sturdy attack and industry play conspicuous part in attaining major objectives. A need for equilibrating opposing forces or diverse interests and objectives may be imperative, and influence the ultimate results. Social, domestic and affectional matters also should promise much activity and gratification. Elders are friendly and cooperative.

A child born on this day should have much initiative, energy and creative ability, supported by industry, application and sound sense. It will not be lacking in pleasant social qualities.

THEATRES HARD HIT

New York, May 28 (AP). — The drama of President Roosevelt's speech proved a greater attraction to many théatre goers than the Broadway plays, which drew sharply reduced crowds last night.

"It's brutal," said one theatrical personage at curtain time. "Everybody's home at the radio."

Several houses reported demands for refunds or exchange of tickets for another night.

Wells investigated the accident and a charge of careless driving and also driving while intoxicated, will be laid against the driver who was placed under arrest and lodged in the County Jail in Belleville.

Sponsor Play

The Young People of St. John's Anglican Church sponsored a play entitled "The Phantom Belle" in the Community Hall, Bancroft, Wednesday evening and the cast played to capacity attendance. Rev. G. A. Gordier, in charge of the play, can be proud of the way in which his players carried out their parts. The net proceeds of the play amounted to fifty-three dollars. The War Workers of the village raffled off two quilts made by their branch of workers. Mr. Frank Askey of Bancroft was high bidder for one and Ross Viscoff the other winner. Mr. Askey was highly commended on his part, having won one quilt he turned it back over to the War Workers for re-auction and this time the quilt was won by a Mr. Scott of Toronto. The local branch realized twenty dollars from the auction. After the completion of the play, the young people round danced for awhile, Mr. Jack Gordon supplying the music.

Saturday, Sunday and in some instances Monday being a long holiday for the twenty-fourth saw a steady influx of cars in and out of Bancroft and all along the roads and lakes these eager holidayers were matching their skill against the ever-lurking fish.

Three cars of Gypsies were in town this week, making camp about five miles north of the village just off highway 62. Several reports turned into the Provincial Police necessitated in his visit to their temporary camp, giving them curt orders to move out of this section of the country and cause no molestations to passers-by.

COLOGNE, COASTAL BASES BOMBED

Attack on Boulogne and Calais Continues From Midnight to Dawn

London, May 28 (CP).—Planes of the Royal Air Force raided the Rhineland industrial city of Cologne and the Nazi occupied French coast early today while light Nazi air forces scattered bombs over southern England last night.

Observers on the Kent coast said Boulogne and Calais apparently were main targets of the attack on Nazi invasion bases, which began shortly after midnight and continued to almost dawn.

(The Nazis admitted that British raiders attacked western German districts, causing some casualties.)

The ministries of air and home security over Britain was on a small scale and that little damage and few casualties resulted. Bombs were dropped on East Anglia and at various points on the south coast from Kent to Cornwall.

This morning a formation of enemy planes attacked a balloon barrage at Dover and downed one balloon before being driven off by British fighters.

Start Several Fires

An authoritative source said the British raiders attacking Cologne during the night scored bomb hits on "important objectives" and started several large fires.

The Air Ministry said seven Nazi fighters were destroyed on the ground when units of the bomber command attacked a German airdrome at Lannion in Brittany. A number of other planes were damaged and one hangar demolished.

During daylight attacks on Nazi shipping yesterday the Ministry said, two coastal vessels were hit and probably sunk, one off The Netherlands coast and the other in the Bay of Biscay.

One plane of the bomber command is missing.

U. S. Ambassador To See President

John Winant to Personally Report on His Observations Made in Britain

London, May 28 (CP)—John Winant, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, left today for Washington to see President Roosevelt. He expects to return here within two weeks.

Mr. Winant was accompanied by Benjamin Cohen, Economic Adviser at the United States Embassy.

Mrs. Winant did not accompany her husband.

Before leaving London early this morning Mr. Winant said it had been generally expected that he would return to the United States and report to the President, and added: "This is the trip."

It was reported authoritatively that Mr. Winant decided definitely to return and make his report when he heard the news of the sinking of the battle cruiser Hood last Saturday.

VALUE OF SEA-POWER

The avenging of the loss of the British battleship Hood by the sinking of the German battleship Bismarck should be proof to the Germans that when Britain sets out to complete a task she does it well. The British pursued the Nazi battleship and as a result Hitler's 1939 model battleship went down.

The remarkable story of the chase and the part the British ships and the air arm took in the destruction of the German warship prove the efficiency of Britain on the sea. The coordination of vessels, the air craft carrier and the naval planes was effective.

Today that navy is doing the greatest task it was ever called upon to do and is performing it with all the time-honored traditions of this seafaring race. Wisely did Britain place a great deal of reliance on British naval strength to cope with any trouble. The fleet is an absolute necessity to an island nation, an empire which is spread in so many parts of the earth, and to a trading nation.

Once again the navy has shown its power. People in the Western Hemisphere may well thank Britain for her foresight and vision in policing the seas with the mighty power of the British fleet. Canada and the United States and South and Central America realize what the Royal Navy has meant to them. It stands a bulwark against Nazi sea aggression. The Bismarck was between Iceland and Greenland, the latter of which has been so much in the news of late. Thanks to the British Navy there is no more Bismarck.

DETAILS OF VICTORY LOAN

Now Canadians know the details of the Victory War Loan. There are to be two maturities, ten years and five and a half years, choice being optional and they will be dated and bear interest from June 15th, 1941. The longer term bonds will carry a three per cent coupon and will be issued at 100. As they are payable at 101 maturity, and will be callable during 1950 and after, the yield will be 3.09 per cent. The shorter term bonds mature December 15th., 1946 and bear a two per cent coupon will be sold at 99 to yield 2.18 per cent and will be redeemed at maturity at 100. They are non-callable.

The bonds may be bought for cash or by instalments plus accrued interests.

Canadians now have the facts before them and they will be able to make their decision how large a share of the loan they will be able to take individually. While the loan is set at six hundred million dollars nominally, the Department of Finance and the Victory Loan Committee entertain highest hopes that the amount will be exceeded by the actual cash subscriptions offered.

By buying these bonds Canadians are making it possible to put in the hands of the Canadian Government the sinews of war which will fashion the tools which the British Prime Minister said are needed in order to finish the task to which the Motherland and Empire are pledged—to smash Nazi and Fascist aggression and to free the world from the curse of violence and tyranny.

Canadians will go strong on their purchases of Victory bondds. It should be a matter of pride to every Canadian to buy the very greatest amount of loan possible.

The Ark Royal, often reported sunk by the Germans and Italians, proved that it was above water early yesterday morning when from its platform there were launched attacks again and again against Hitler's prize battleship, the Bismarck. The Ark Royal's planes did deadly work in co-operation with the British ships and the loss of the Nazi battleship was the result.

Bismarck has been a name of sweetest sound in German ears since before 1870, when Germany made war on France. Now that the champion warcraft of the Huns, named after the Iron Chancellor, has been sunk, the Nazis may well see in this a bad omen for the Germans. Bismarck himself led Germany far in the way of aggression. Britain is confident that Nazi Germany will follow the fate of the Bismarck.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

SAVE

Fall in everyone, there's a war to be won
And to win it will not be all honey
We are sending our sons, we are sending our guns
But the thing can't be done without money
If we wish to retain in this far flung domain
The freedom our forefathers gave
We must answer the call that has come to us all
Be British, be careful and save.

Our boys over there are doing their share
Our airmen are guarding the skies
Our army on land is taking its stand
To guard England's shores from surprise
Our navy boys too, are sailing the blue
No men were ever more brave
So it's up to us now to show the world how
We too can do our bit and save.

The Government's need is urgent indeed
The war must be won at all cost
The enemys strong and the war may be long
But through errors it must not be lost
Our freedom we prize and we must realize
To retain it we all must be brave
Though we are not at the front, we must all bear the brunt
By doing our utmost to save.

It's a pleasure to spend, but it's duty to lend
Whatever our means can afford
There are good honest chaps through misfortune perhaps
Have exhausted what little they'd stored
Then again there are those, who the Lord only knows
Wouldn't miss it if thousands they gave
We don't ask them to spend, but only to lend
And by lending it means that they save.

So we send out the call to the palace and hall
To the city, the town and the farm
The land we love best is now put to test
We must save to protect her from harm
Our unscrupulous foe Herr Hitler shall know
We're British, we won't be his slaves
While we've ample resources
Brave men of the forces
And women and men who will save.
—W. J. Savage, Murney Street.

STRICTLY BUSINESS

"Daddy," asked the small son of a business man, "what is this 'business morality' I hear people talk about?"

"Well, my boy," was the reply, "if a man comes into your shop and pays a ten dollar bill, and as he is leaving you find that he has given you by mistake two ten dollar bills, the question is should you tell your partner?"

WORSE AND WORSE

Considerable damage has been done to the baker's shop by an incendiary bomb and the proprietor was worn out and worried.

As his wife was getting supper ready, in another part of the town, a neighbor rushed in with the sad news.

"If I were you," she wound up, "I wouldn't put much bread on the table. The sight of it might upset your husband after his trying time."

"I hadn't thought of that," confessed the baker's wife. Then she went on brightly: "I know what I'll do. I'll make him some nice toast."

—AND FAILED?

"I say, Jones, if I were you, I wouldn't let your wife go round saying she's made a man of you. You don't hear my wife saying that."

"No," Jones agreed, "but I've heard your wife telling my wife that she'd done her best."

QUITE BORED

"I'm going to kiss you before I go," said the young man who had outstayed his welcome.

"Do it now while I'm still young," replied the girl wearily.

Chicago had the first automotive taxicab. It appeared on the streets in 1915.

New York Is Not America

New York, May 28—By and large anything to attract nationwide attention in this country has to originate in Washington, New York, or possibly in Chicago or Los Angeles, and have nationally known names attached to it. Washington and New York, and especially New York, are headquarters for all the various committees set up for the purpose of influencing American public opinion along one line or another—for instance, for or against the foreign policy of the Administration. The centres of the national news services are here. Most of the weekly and monthly publications of the country are edited here.

From either place one gets a considerably distorted picture of American public opinion, and this distortion is then nationally publicized. The two centres do not reflect the sentiment of the broad masses of people of the country, and much of the sentiment emanating from them is promoted or organized for the purpose of obtaining nationwide publicity.

This brings about confusion regarding the relative importance of certain personalities and movements over public opinion.

For instance, in New York—judging from New York mass meetings, the New York press and open forums—one can easily get the impression that there is sharp cleavage in the country on the matter of the Administration's foreign policy. Some of the forums have given exhibitions of verbal knock-down and drag-out fights, conducted in a high state of nervous tension.

A meeting like the mass meetings in Manhattan Centre and Madison Square Garden at which Mr. Lindbergh was the chief speaker is recorded to the extent of columns in the New York press, and one or two papers carried the full text of Mr. Lindbergh's addresses. The report is carried also by the news services and spread throughout the country. And the same will hold true of a sufficiently well-organized mass meeting addressed by speakers supporting the Administration or urging it to be stronger.

Actually these meetings, statements, and forums are not the forces that are really making public opinion.

The solid public opinion of America is made by the natural leaders in thousands of local communities: The local school teachers and college presidents and professors; the local chambers of commerce; the thousands of clergymen who have a quiet diffusive influence among their own flocks; the local editors who are read with far more confidence than the national pundits; the discussions in local granges and in trade union meetings.

Furthermore, on the lecture platforms are journalists editors, writers and public speakers whose addresses are never broadcast in any nation-wide manner. Accounts of them are given in the local press and nowhere else.

If Mr. Lindbergh addresses 10,000 to 20,000 people inside and outside a hall in New York—or if Mayor La Guardia or Mr. Ickes address a similar body of people—it is national news. But actually an attendance of 10,000 to 20,000 people in a city of 7,000,000 is not, relatively, a big meeting. Mr. Herbert S. Agar, the editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and a most eloquent and moving speaker, addresses an audience of 3,000 in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. Proportionately, that is the equivalent of an audience of over a million in the city of New York, and no speaker has ever had such an audience in this town.

Edward Tomlinson in five small cities personally addressed 5.9 per cent of the total populations. H. R. Knickerbocker, a Texas man, for years the crack roving correspondent of the Hearst newspapers in Europe, who knows more about the machinations of the Nazis than most of us do—having written a book about the Nazis which created a sensation in Germany itself—has spoken this season to approximately 150,000 people; Vincent Sheean has addressed close to 100,000; Pierre van Paassen has spoken to another 100,000; Wallace Duell of the Chicago Daily News to 50,000 or 60,000.

And most people pay to hear these men, and come because the speakers do a piece of reporting on a subject that they know about. They speak in small cities for the most part, remote from the centres of news dissemination. They and scores of others have a much more diffused influence over public opinion than the big names.

During the past season—and for my own education—I have accepted invitations to speak in New England, in Virginia, Alabama, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois Los Angeles and San Francisco.

I have also used the opportunity to question all sorts of people, to listen to the local radio commentators, talk with the local community leaders, visit army camps and above all to read the local papers and their editorials, not only the local papers of the place where I have spoken but the papers that one buys from railroad stations as one passes between cities.

Now, my first impression is that the idea that there are sections of this county with radically differing views of the international situation and the attitude we should take toward it is an illusion. There is far less difference between the viewpoints of people in Boston and Tulsa, Richmond and St. Louis, Los Angeles and Kansas City, Hartford and San Francisco than I dreamed. And by and large the sentiment of this country is behind the Administration, in all classes and in all sections.

There is apprehension that we are not doing enough. But there is very little conviction that America can isolate herself and be uninfluenced by whatever happens elsewhere in the world.

And so the President was right when he said that he would trust to the opinion formed by cracker-barrel conversations. The cracker-barrel is a symbol. The cracker-barrel is the local press and the thousands of clubs and organizations through which people meet each other and exchange views. The opinion is made not by a few big names but by the sum total of innumerable influences.

I got a great deal of education out of my barnstorming trips. They were worth the strain and discomfort of travelling, speaking and writing at the same time—if only to learn again that America doesn't end or begin at the Hudson River, and that only an average proportion of its intelligeyce is concentrated in the midtown section of New York.

Trying to Prevent Hay Fever

The fact that hay fever, asthma, and eczema are closely related and "run" in some families has been well established; the grandfather may have hay fever, the son or daughter, asthma, and the grandchild, eczema. Or perhaps it may be the other way around. While this does not mean that every member of the family will be afflicted with one of these ailments, it does mean that they are "likely to be afflicted if they come in contact with certain substances—pollen from plants and trees, house dust, various odors, and certain foods. Sometimes a defect of nose and throat will set up symptoms, whether or not these ailments run in the family.

While most cases of true hay fever occur in the Autumn, due to the pollen of ragweed, "there is the spring type due to tree pollen such as the oak, birch, maple, elm, hickory and cottonwood and the summer type almost always due to pollen of grasses timothy, June grass, orchard grass, and red top".

When the symptoms—sneezing, itching of eyes and nose, "running" of eyes and nose, stuffiness of ears, and fear of light—occur at "any" time during the Spring, Summer and Fall seasons, they are usually due to furs, feathers, and foods. The first thought in the treatment is to try to locate the cause by using skin and other tests of the substances that usually cause the symptoms.

In the "real" hay fever, as the ragweed type is usually called, destroying the ragweed in the neighborhood or going to a pollen-free climate for the weeks during which the pollen is in the air, will prevent symptoms.

The usual method of prevention is injecting ragweed pollen extract under the skin about six weeks before the usual onset of the pollen season. However, hay fever specialists are now advising that these injections should be started three or four months before the seasons starts. The injections are given every 5 or 7 days, beginning with a weak solution and gradually increasing the strength to a point just short of a reaction.

Sprays of ephedrine and epinephrine (adrenalin) or remedies containing either of these drugs or used as "drops" are usually effective in relieving the symptoms.

DIME UNDER FIRE

The women's division of the Committee of Americans recently told Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., that the federal government should "stop minting the emblem of fascism on American dimes."

For many years the treasury department as well as newspapers throughout the United States have been receiving letters indicating that many people have a hazy notion that the Fascists of Italy are attempting to spread propaganda in America by means of the symbols on the United States ten-cent piece.

Of course, the charge is absurd. The designs on the present dime were adopted while Benito Mussolini was fighting in the Italian army on the side of the Allies and long before he conceived the Fascist movement in Italy.

It was back in 1916 that the American dime bearing the head of Mercury on one side and the fasces on the other was substituted for the former Liberty-head ten-cent piece.

This coin was designed by Adolph Alexander Weinman, a native of Germany and a member of the U.S. commission of fine arts.

The emblems on this ten-cent piece are such as are customarily placed on coins and works of art.

Mercury, in Roman mythology, was the god of commerce and the messenger and herald of the other gods, and he corresponded to Hermes in Greek mythology.

He is generally pictured with a winged cap on his head.

The fasces were the rods made into a bundle to inclose a protruding ax and were borne by the ancient Roman lictors before the magistrates as a symbol of office and authority.

In 1919, three years after the United States ten-cent piece bearing the fasces were issued, Benito Mussolini and his black-shirted followers met at Milan and adopted the fasces as the emblem of their organization, the object of which, according to the constitution of the society, was "respect for the Italian flag and suppression of revolutionary movements."

In Latin "fascia" signifies a bandage or something that binds together, and members of the Italian organization called themselves Fascisti, which is pronounced "fa-shees-tee," with the second syllable accented.

Weinman, the designer of the current dime, also designed the current fifty-cent piece or half dollar, which was first issued in the same year.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech on Emergency

Washington, May 28 (AP)—The text of President Roosevelt's radio address on Tuesday night follows:

I am speaking tonight from the White House in the presence of the governing board of the Pan American Union, the Canadian Minister and their families. The members of this board are the Ambassadors and Ministers of the American republics in Washington. It is appropriate that I do this. Now, as never before, the unity of the American republics is of supreme importance to each and everyone of us and to the cause of freedom throughout the world. Our future independence is bound up with the future independence of all of our sister republics.

The pressing problems that confront us are military problems. We cannot afford to approach them from the point of view of wishful thinkers or sentimentalists. What we face is cold, hard fact.

The first and fundamental fact is that what started as a European war has developed, as the Nazis always intended it should develop, into a world war for world domination.

Adolf Hitler never considered the domination of Europe as an end in itself. European conquest was but a step toward ultimate goals in all the other continents. It is unmistakably apparent to all of us that, unless the advance of Hitlerism is forcibly checked now, the Western Hemisphere will be in range of the Nazi weapons of destruction.

Measures Taken

For our own defense we have, accordingly, undertaken certain obviously necessary measures:

First, we joined in concluding a series of agreements with all the other American republics. This further solidified our hemisphere against the common danger.

And then, a year ago, we launched, and are successfully carrying out, the largest armament production program we have ever undertaken.

We have added substantially to our splendid navy, and we have mustered our manpower to build up a new army which is already worthy of the highest traditions of our military service.

We instituted a policy of aid for the democracies—the nations which have fought for the continuation of human liberties.

This policy had its origin in the first month of the war, when I urged upon the Congress repeal of the arms embargo provisions in the neutrality law. In that message of September, 1939, I said: "I should like to be able to offer the hope that the shadow over the world might swiftly pass. I cannot. The facts compel my stating, with candor, that darker periods may lie ahead."

In the subsequent months, the shadows deepened and lengthened, and the night spread over Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and France.

In June, 1940, Britain stood alone, faced by the same machine of terror which had overwhelmed her allies. Our government rushed arms to meet her desperate needs.

In September, 1940, an agreement was completed with Great Britain for the trade of fifty destroyers for eight important off-shore bases.

Lend-Lease Bill

In March, 1941, the Congress passed the Lend-Lease Bill and an appropriation of $7,000,000,000 to implement it. This law realistically provided for material aid "for the Government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States."

Our whole program of aid for the democracies has been based on hard-headed concern for our own security and for the kind of safe and civilized world in which we wish to live. Every dollar of material we send helps to keep the dictators away from our own hemisphere. Every day that they are held off gives us time to build more guns and tanks and planes and ships.

We have made no pretense about our own self-interest in this aid. Great Britain understands it —and so does Nazi Germany.

And now—after a year—Britain still fights gallantly, on a "far-flung battle line." We have doubled and redoubled our vast production, increasing, month by month, our material supply of tools of war for ourselves and Britain and China—and eventually for all the democracies.

The supply of these tools will not fail—it will increase.

With greatly augmented strength the United States and the other American Republics now chart their course in the situation of today.

Your Government knows what terms Hitler if victorious, would impose. They are, indeed, the only terms on which he would accept a so-called "negotiated" peace.

Under those terms, Germany would literally parcel out the world —hoisting the swastika itself over vast territories and populations, and setting up puppet Governments of its own choosing, wholly subect to the will and the policy of a conqueror.

Hitler's "Honeyed Words"

To the people of the Americas, a triumphant Hitler would say, as he said after the seizure of Austria, and after Munich, and after the seizure of Czecho-Slovakia: "I am now completely satisfied. This is the last territorial readjustment I will seek." And he would, of course, add: "All we want is peace, friendship and profitable trade relations with you in the New World."

And were any of us in the Americas so incredibly simple and forgetful as to accept those honeyed words, what would then happen?

Those in the New World who were seeking profits would be urging that all that the dictatorships desired was "peace." They would oppose toll and taxes for more American armament. Meanwhile, the dictatorships would be forcing the enslaved peoples of their Old World conquests into a system they are even now organizing—to build a naval and air force intended to gain and hold and be master of the Atlantic and the Pacific as well.

They would fasten an economic strangelhold upon our several nations. Quislings would be found to subvert the Governments in our Republics; and the Nazis would back their fifth columns with invasion, if necessary.

Not Mere Speculation

I am not speculating about all this. I merely repeat what is already in the Nazi book of world conquest. They plan to treat the Latin-American nations as they are now treating the Balkans. They plan to strangle the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada.

The American laborer would have to compete with slave labor in the rest of the world. Minimum wages, maximum hours? Nonsense! Wages and hours would be fixed by Hitler. The dignity and power and standard of living of the American worker and farmer would be gone. Trade unions would become historical relics, and collective bargaining a joke.

Farm income? What happens to all farm surpluses without any foreign trades? The American farmer would get for his products exactly what Hitler wanted to give. He would face obvious disaster and complete regimentation.

Tariff walls—Chinese walls of isolation—would be futile. Freedom to trade is essential to our economic life. We do not eat all the food we can produce; we do not burn all the oil we can pump; we do not use all the goods we can manufacture. It would not be an American wall to keep Nazi goods out; it would be a Nazi wall to keep us in.

The whole fabric of working life as we know it—business, manufacturing, mining, agriculture — all would be mangled and crippled under such a system. Yet to maintain even that crippled independence would require permanent conscription of our manpower; it would curtail the funds we could spend on education, on housing, on public works, on flood control, on health. Instead, we should be permanently pouring our resources into armaments; and, year in and year out, standing day and night watch against the destruction of our cities.

Ruthless as Communists

Even our right of worship would be threatened. The Nazi world does not recognize any God except Hitler, for the Nazis are as ruthless as the Communists in the denial of God. What place has religion which preaches the dignity of the human being, of the majesty of the human soul, in a world where moral standards are measured by treachery and bribery and fifth columnists? Will our children, too, wander off, goose-stepping in search of new gods?

We do not accept, and will not permit, this Nazi "shape of things to come". It will never be forced upon us, if we act in this present crisis with the wisdom and the courage which have distinguished our country in all the crises of the past.

The Nazis have taken military possession of the greater part of Europe. In Africa they have occupied Tripoli and Libya, and they are threatening Egypt, the Suez Canal and the Near East. But their plans do not stop there, for the Indian Ocean is the gateway to the East.

They also have the armed power at any moment to occupy Spain and Portugal; and that threat extends not only to French North Africa and the western end of the Mediterranean, but also to the Atlantic fortress of Dakar, and to the islands outposts of the New World—the Azores and Cape Verde Islands.

The Cape Verde Islands are only seven hours' distance from Brazil by bomber or troop-carrying planes. They dominate shipping routes to and from the South Atlantic.

The war is approaching the brink of the Western Hemisphere itself. It is coming very close to home.

Control or occupation by Nazi forces of any of the islands of the Atlantic would jeopardize the immediate safety of portions of North and South America, and of the island possessions of the United States, and of the ultimate safety of the continental United States itself.

Lands British Resistance.

Hitler's plan of world domination would be near its accomplishment today, were it not for two factors: One is the epic resistance of Britain, her colonies, and the great dominions, fighting not only to maintain the existence of the island of Britain, but also to hold the Near East and Africa. The other is the magnificent defense of China, which will, I have reason to believe, increase in strength. All of these, together, prevent the Axis from winning control of the seas by ships and aircraft.

The Axis powers can never achieve their objective of world domination unless they first obtain control of the seas. This is their supreme purpose today; and to achieve it they must capture Great Britain.

They could then have the power to dictate to the Western Hemisphere. No spurious argument, no appeal to sentiment, and no false pledges like those given by Hitler at Munich, can deceive the American people into believing that he and his Axis partners would not, with Britain defeated, close in relentlessly on this hemisphere.

But if the Axis powers fail to gain control of the seas, they are certainly defeated. Their dreams of world domination will then go by the board; and the criminal leaders who started this war will suffer inevitable disaster.

Both they and their people know this—and they are afraid. That is why they are risking everything they have, conducting desperate attempts to break through to the command of the ocean.

Once they are limited to a continuing land war, their cruel forces of occupation will be unable to keep their heel on the necks of the millions of innocent, oppressed peoples on the Continent of Europe; and in the end their whole structure will break into little pieces. And the wider the Nazi land effort, the greater the danger.

We do not forget the silenced peoples. The masters of Germany —those, at least, who have not been assassinated or escaped to free soil—have marked these peoples and their children's children for slavery. But those people—spiritually unconquered: Austrians, Czechs, Poles, Norwegians, Dutch, Belgians, Frenchmen, Greeks, Southern Slavs—yes, even those Italians and Germans who themselves have been enslaved —will prove to be a powerful force in disrupting the Nazi system.

Yes, all freedom—meaning freedom to live, and not freedom to conquer and subjugate other peoples —depends on freedom of the seas. All of American history—North, Central and South American history —has been inevitably tied up with those words, "freedom of the seas."

Since 1799, when our infant navy made the West Indies and the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico safe for American ships; since 1804 and 1805 when we made all peaceful commerce safe from the depredations of the Barbary pirates; since the War of 1812, which was fought for the preservation of sailors' rights; since 1867, when our sea power made it possible for the Mexicans to expel the French army of Louis Napoleon, we have striven and fought in defense of freedom of the seas—for our own shipping, for the commerce of our sister republics, for the right of all nations to use the highways of world trade —and for our own safety.

Battle of Atlantic

During the first World War we were able to escort merchant ships by the use of small cruisers, gunboats and destroyers; and this type of convoy was effective against submarines. In this second World War, however, the problem is greater, because the attack on the freedom of the seas is now fourfold: First, the improved submarine; second, the much greater use of the heavily armed raiding cruiser or hit-and-run battleship; third, the bombing airplane, which is capable of destroying merchant ships 700 or 800 miles from its nearest base; and fourth, the destruction of merchant ships in those ports of the world which are accessible to the bombing attack.

The Battle of the Atlantic now extends from the icy waters of the North Pole to the frozen continent of the Antarctic. Throughout this huge area, there have been sinkings of merchant ships in alarming and increasing numbers by Nazi raiders or submarines. There have been sinkings even of ships carrying neutral flags. There have been sinkings in the South Atlantic, off West Africa and the Cape Verde Islands; between the Azores and the islands off the American coast; and between Greenland and Iceland. Great numbers of these sinkings have been actually within the waters of the Western Hemisphere.

The blunt truth is this—and I reveal this with the full knowledge of the British Government: The present rate of Nazi sinkings of merchant ships is more than three times as high as the capacity of British shipyards to replace them; it is more than twice the combined British and American output of merchant ships today.

We can answer this peril by two simultaneous measures: First, by speeding up and increasing our great shipbuilding program; and, second, by helping to cut down the losses on the high seas.

Danger Coming Near

Attacks on shipping off the very shores of the land which we are determined to protect present an actual military danger to the Americas. And that danger has recently been heavily underlined by the presence in Western Hemisphere waters of Nazi battleships of great striking power.

Most of the supplies for Britain go by a northerly route, which comes close to Greenland and the nearby island of Iceland. Germany's heaviest attack is on that route. Nazi occupation of Iceland or bases in Greenland would bring the war close to our continental shores, because they are stepping-stones to Labrador, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and the Northern United States, including the great industrial centres of the north, east and middle west.

Equally, the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands, if occupied or controlled by Germany, would directly endanger the freedom of the Atlantic and our own physical safety. Under German domination they would become bases for submarines, warships and airplanes raiding the waters which lie immediately off our own coasts and attacking the shipping in the South Atlantic. They would provide a springboard for actual attack against the integrity and independence of Brazil and her neighboring republics.

I have said on many occasions that the United States is mustering its men and its resources only for purpose of defense—only to repel attack. I repeat that statement now. But we must be realistic when we use the word "attack"; we have to relate it to the lightning speed of modern warfare.

Some people seem to think that we are not attacked until bombs actually drop on New York or San Francisco or New Orleans or Chicago. But they are simply shutting their eyes to the lesson we must learn from the fate of every nation that the Nazis have conquered.

The attack on Czecho-Slovakia began with the conquest of Austria. The attack on Norway began with the occupation of Denmark. The attack on Greece began with occupation of Albania and Bulgaria. The attack on the Suez Canal began with the invasion of the Balkans and North Africa. The attack on the United States can begin with the domination of any base which menaces our security—north or south.

Suicide to Wait

Nobody can foretell tonight just when the acts of the dictators will ripen into attack on this hemisphere and us, but we know enough by now to realize that it would be suicide to wait until they are in our front yard.

When your enemy comes at you in a tank or a bombing plane, if you hold your fire until you see the whites of his eyes, you will never know what hit you. Our Bunker Hill of tomorrow may be several thousand miles from Boston.

Any one with an atlas and a reasonable knowledge of the sudden striking force of modern war knows that it is stupid to wait until a probable enemy has gained a foothold from which to attack. Old-fashioned common sense calls for the use of strategy which will prevent such an enemy from gaining a foothold in the first place.

We have, accordingly, extended our patrol in North and South Atlantic waters. We are steadily adding more and more ships and planes to that patrol. It is well known that the strength of the Atlantic fleet has been greatly increased during the past year, and is constantly being built up.

These ships and planes warn of the presence of attacking raiders, above the sea. The danger from these raiders is greatly lessened if their location is definitely known. We are thus being forewarned; and we shall be on our guard against efforts to establish Nazi bases closer to our hemisphere.

The deadly facts of war compel nations, for simply self-preservation, to make stern choices. It does not make sense, for instance, to say, "I believe in the defense of all the Western Hemisphere," and in the next breath to say, "I will not fight for that defense until the enemy has landed on our shores." And if we believe in the independence and integrity of the Americas, we must be willing to fight to defend them just as much as we would to fight for the safety of our own homes.

It is time for us to realize that the safety of American homes, even in the centre of our country, has a definite relationship to the continued safety of homes in Nova Scotia or Trinidad or Brazil.

Our national policy today, therefore, is this:

First, we shall actively resist wherever necessary, and with all our resources, every attempt by Hitler to extend his Nazi domination to the Western Hemisphere or to threaten it. We shall actively resist his every attempt to gain control of the seas. We insist upon the vital importance of keeping Hitlerism away from any point in the world which could be used and would be used as a base of attack against the Americas.

Patrols Helping Now

Second, from the point of view of strict naval and military necessity, we shall give every possible assistance to Britain and to all who, with Britain, are resisting Hitlerism or its equivalent with force of arms. Our patrols are helping now to ensure delivery of the needed supplies to Britain. All additional measures necessary to deliver the goods will be taken. Any and all further methods or combination of methods which can or should be utilized are being devised by our military and naval technicians, who, with me, will work out and put into effect such new and additional safeguards as may be needed.

The delivery of needed supplies to Britain is imperative. This can be done; it must be done; it will be done.

To the other American nations—twenty republics and the Dominion of Canada—I say this: The United States does not merely propose these purposes, but is actively engaged today in carrying them out.

I say to them further: You may disregard those few citizens of the United States who contend that we are disunited and cannot act.

There are some timid ones among us who say that we must preserve peace at any price—lest we lose our liberties forever. To them I say: Never in the history of the world has a nation lost its democracy by a successful struggle to defend its democracy. We must not be defeated by the fear of the very danger which we are preparing to resist. Our freedom has shown its ability to survive war, but it would never survive surrender. "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself".

There is, of course, a small group of sincere, patriotic men and women whose real passion for peace has shut their eyes to the ugly realities of international banditry and to the need to resist it at all costs. I am sure they are embarrassed by the sinister support they are receiving from the enemies of democracy in our midst—the Bundists, and Fascists, and Communists, and every group devoted to bigotry and racial and religious intolerance.

No Mere Coincidence.

It is no mere coincidence that all the arguments put forward by these enemies of democracy—all their attempts to confuse and divide our people and to destroy public confidence in our Government — all their defeatist forebodings that Britain and democracy are already beaten—all their selfish promises that we can "do business" with Hitler—all of these are but echoes of the words that have been poured out from the Axis bureaus of propaganda. Those same words have been used before in other countries—to scare them, to divide them, to soften them up. Invariably, those same words have formed the advance guard of physical attack.

Your Government has the right to expect of all citizens that they take loyal part in the common work of our common defence — take loyal part from this moment forward.

I have recently set up the machinery for civilian defence. It will rapidly organize, locality by locality. It will depend on the organized effort of men and women everywhere. All will have responsibilities to fulfill.

Defence today means more than merely fighting. It means morale, civilian as well as military; it means using every available resource; it means enlarging every useful plant. It means the use of a greater American common sense in discarding rumor and distorted statement. It means recognizing, for what they are, racketeers and fifth columnists, who are the incendiary bombs of the moment.

All of us know that we have made very great social progress in recent years. We propose to maintain that progress and strengthen it. When the nation is threatened from without, however, as it is today, the actual production and transportation of the machinery of defence must not be interrupted by disputes between capital and capital, labor and labor, or capital and labor. The future of all free enterprise —of capital and labor alike—is at stake.

This is no time for capital to make, or be allowed to retain, excess profits. Articles of defence must have undisputed right of way in every industrial plant in the country.

A nation-wide machinery for conciliation and mediation of industrial disputes has been set up. That machinery must be used promptly—and without stoppage of work. Collective bargaining will be retained, but the American people expect that impartial recommendations of our Government services will be followed both by capital and by labor.

The overwhelming majority of our citizens expect their Government to see that the tools of defense are built; and for the very purpose of preserving the democratic safeguards of both labor and managment, this Government is determined to use all of its power to express the will of its people and to prevent interference with the production of materials essential to our nation's security.

Today the whole world is divided between human slavery and human freedom—between pagan brutality and the Christian ideal.

We choose human freedom — which is the Christian ideal.

No one of us can waver for a moment in his courage or his faith.

We will not accept a Hitler-dominated world. And we will not accept a world, like the post-war world of the 1920's, in which the seeds of Hitlerism can again be planted and allowed to grow.

We will accept only a world consecrated to freedom of speech and expressions—freedom of every person to worship God in his own way —freedom from want — and freedom from terrorism.

Is such a world impossible of attainment?

Magna Carta, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, the Emancipation Proclamation and every other milestone in human progress —all were ideals which seemed impossible of attainment — yet they were attained.

As a military force, we were weak when we established our independence, but we successfully stood off tyrants, powerful in their day, who are now lost in the dust of history.

Odds meant nothing to us then. Shall we now, with all our potential strength, hesitate to take every single measure necessary to maintain our American liberties?

Our people and our Government will not hesitate to meet that challenge.

As the President of a united and determined people, I say solemnly:

We reassert the ancient American doctrine of freedom of the seas.

We reassert the solidarity of the twenty-one American republics and the Dominion of Canada in the preservation of the independence of the hemisphere.

We have pledged material support to the other democracies of the world—and we will fulfill that pledge.

We in the Americas will decide for ourselves whether, and when, and where, our American interests are attacked or our security threatened.

Will Not Hesitate

We are placing our armed forces in strategic military position.

We will not hesitate to use our armed forces to repel attack.

We reassert our abiding faith in the vitality of our constitutional Republic as a perpetual home of freedom, of tolerance, and of devotion to the word of God.

Therefore, with profound consciousness of my responsibilities to my countrymen and to my country's cause, I have tonight issued a proclamation that an unlimited national emergency exists and requires the strengthening of our defense to the extreme limit of our national power and authority.

The nation will expect all individuals and all groups to play their full parts, without stint, and without selfishness, and without doubt that our democracy will triumphantly survive.

I repeat the words of the signers of the Declaration of Independence —that little band of patriots, fighting long ago against overwhelming odds, but certain, as are we, of ultimate victory:

"With a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor".

Cotton last year became Brazil's second cash export crop, accounting for about 17 per cent of the country's income from overseas sales, 224,265 tons being exported.

Text of Proclamation Issued by Roosevelt

Washington, May 28 (AP). — Following is the text of a Presidential proclamation of an unlimited national emergency:

Whereas, on Sept. 8, 1939, because of the outbreak of war in Europe, a proclamation was issued declaring a limited national emergency and directing measures "for the purpose of strengthening our national defense within the limits of peacetime authorizations";

Whereas, a succession of events makes plain that the objectives of the Axis belligerents in such war are not confined to those avowed at its commencement, but include overthrow throughout the world of existing democratic order, and a world-wide domination of peoples and economies through the destruction of all resistance on land and sea and in the air; and

Whereas indifference on the part of the United States to the increasing menace would be perilous, and common prudence requires that for the security of this nation and of this hemisphere we should pass from peacetime authorizations of military strength to such a basis as will enable us to cope instantly and decisively with any attempt at hostile encirclement of this hemisphere; or the establishment of any base for aggression against it, as well as to repel the threat of predatory incursion by foreign agents onto our territory and society.

Now, therefore, I Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do proclaim that an unlimited national emergency confronts this country, which requires that its military, naval, air and civilian defenses be put on the basis of readiness to repel any and all acts or threats of aggression directed toward any part of the Western Hemisphere.

I call upon all the loyal citizens engaged in production for defense to give precedence to the needs of the nation to the end that a system of government that makes private enterprise possible may survive.

I call upon our loyal workmen as well as employers to merge their lesser differences in the larger effort to ensure the survival of the only kind of government which recognizes the rights of labor or of capital.

I call upon loyal State and local leaders and officials to co-operate with the civilian defense agencies of the United States to assure our internal security against foreign-directed subversion and to put every community in order for maximum productive effort and minimum of waste and unnecessary frictions.

I call upon all loyal citizens to place the nation's needs first in mind and in action, to the end that we may mobilize and have ready for instant defensive use all of the physical powers, all of the moral strength and all of the material resources of this nation.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this twenty-seventh day of May, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-one, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-fifth.

Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Alexandria, Egypt, May 27 (AP) —British warships in the waters around Crete wrote a new chapter of courage under one of the heaviest air attacks in history, naval sources here said today, when, amid incessant battle against hundreds of Nazi dive bombers, they prevented the landing by sea of a single German soldier on that island.

Constantly attacked by Nazi fliers dropping 1,000-pound bombs as the ships of the Royal Navy broke up Axis convoys attempting to reinforce air-borne divisions already on the island, the guns of the British warships turned red-hot firing thousands of shells into the swarms of sky raiders.

Officers said British battleships, cruisers and destroyers smashing one convoy and scattering a large expeditionary force of 30 vessels flung six-inch and four-inch anti-aircraft shells at swooping dive bombers continuously from dawn to dusk on May 22.

It was a day, they said, which will go down in history as marking one of the biggest aerial assaults ever made upon warships.

Scores of German dive bombers were shot down by the ships' anti-aircraft batteries while the other guns of the fleet were sinking one Italian destroyer and two transports and blasting swarms of caiques (wishing boats) carrying between 5,000 and 8,000 Nazis—practically all of whom drowned.

Axis Convoy Broken Up

One squadron of cruisers and destroyers, they said, broke up an Axis convoy of at least 30 vessels with gunfire, forcing its remnants to flee northward toward Greece.

Returning to this Egyptian base aboard a battleship before the big air-sea battle around Crete began, I learned later from officers of other naval units how the British seamen—even after their fighter aircraft protection had been withdrawn from Crete—gave the Nazis some of the hottest barrages yet seen in this war.

For five days after leaving their base most units of the fleet were constantly in action stations, with Nazi bombers swooping overhead in great masses.

An officer on one of the battleships participating in the fight around Crete told me the air attack of May 22 was "one of the heaviest I have ever seen, probably the biggest in history."

"Throughout the day there were never more than a few minutes free from the constant droning and diving of Nazi planes dropping 1000-pound bombs, swooping upon every ship in sight. They kept it up until nightfall."

"The biggest attack came at 1.30 p.m.," he said, "and from then on until 6 p.m. there were literally hundreds of German planes over us. They seemed to spring out of the clouds like mushrooms, diving and dropping scores of bombs and heavily shaking this battleship, which was hit twice aft but with only superficial damage and slight casualties."

Nazis Try New Trick

"The Germans tried a new trick: level bombing and dive bombing at the same time. While we were busy firing everything we had to beat off the dive bombers, the high-level planes dropped their loads from high up. The Germans seemed to be using every conceivable type of plane".

This officer said many near misses rocked his battleship, one of them lifting her bow out of the water.

"I saw two of our cruisers hit", he added, "and in broad daylight our battleships pushed into Kithera Channel (West of Crete) to give them all the support we could. Bombs struck one of our destroyers with a tremendous explosion that blew her wide open, while other bombs sent another destroyer to the bottom.

"I saw a stick of bombs fall on one cruiser, hit her magazine and set her afire from stern to bow, sinking her. Another cruiser put off boats to pick up survivors, but they were constantly bombed and machine-gunned.

"As the cruiser put out boats, the Nazis swooped down for a kill. She must have been hit four or five times directly. I saw a terrific explosion and the cruiser turned turtle and plunged."

Despite these air attacks British warships kept manoeuvring about the western end of Crete, constantly on the lookout for further attempts at a sea-borne invasion of the island.

One British cruiser in a rapid-fire action was reported to have shot down three out of five Junker-87 dive-bombers dropping loads from a height of 300 feet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Week-End Tipping

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When one is spending a week-end at a friend's home, is it necessary to tip the maid? If so, how much, at what time, and with what remarks?

2. If a gift is being taken, should it be a gift for the whole family, or one more particularly for the girl?

3. Should the thank-you note be sent to the girl or to her mother?

Male Reader

1. Yes, the guest gives a tip to the maid, as he is leaving or just before he is leaving, so that it will be given at a time when the hostess is not about. A dollar or two is the usual fee to the maid after a week-end visit, more if she has done some special service for you, such as pressing or other "valeting" service. As you hand the fee to the maid, say, "Thank you so much", or just, "Thank you" or "Thank you for your kindness."

2. The gift that you take should be of a general nature, to be enjoyed by the family; a box of candy or fruit; one or two current books; a group of the latest magazines. Of course, if you wish, you may take two gifts, one for the family, such as I have suggested, and one especially for the girl.

3. Your important letter of thank-you for the hospitality should be to the girl's mother, who has been your hostess. Then you would naturally, too, write the girl a note of appreciation.

Married Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in November, and I want very much to invite a married couple I know very well to be best man and bridesmaid. Is it correct to have married people as attendants?

E.

Yes, if your fiance wishes to have this man as his best man (it is he who chooses the best man), and you wish to have his wife as your attendant, this is thoroughly proper. Wedding attendants may be either married or unmarried.

Table Courtesy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a gentleman is sitting down to a dinner table between two ladies, which one should he help with her chair?

Q.

First he should help the woman on his right, and then, as quickly as he can, the woman on his left. If, however, it happens that the woman on his left is an appreciably older woman, or a woman of such distinction that she naturally rates the first attention, then he should first assist her to take her place.

Departing Guests

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. What should I do and say when women callers, when departing, leave their cards on the table?

2. Should I always serve tea, or just when I invite callers. I have not been serving tea to those just calling. Is this right or wrong?

Y.

1. It isn't necessary to do or say anything, although it is appropriate to say, "Thank you" if you wish.

2. If the visitors come about tea time, it is charming and gracious to serve tea. Nothing is so delightful, both for guests and hostess. The home that is famous for the beauty of the tea-time hospitality is fortunate. With a minimum of planning, a hostess can dispense the maximum of hospitality.

Have Good Manicuring Tools

Gertrude Warner applies the first coat lightly.

By HELEN FOLLETT

NO WORKMAN should be handicapped by poor tools. Nor should the home manicurist be beset with difficulties because she has not proper instruments. Buy good ones; they will last a lifetime.

The first need is a long flexible file of high grade steel and of fine grooves so the work can be done quickly. Buy a cheap file and you'll just go on sawing, and get no place. Only the best, most expensive manicure scissors will fill the bill. Once a year they should be sharpened; this work is done at hardware and sporting goods stores. Unless they are sharp you won't be able to nip off hangnails neatly.

Necessary Implements

Orange wood sticks are necessary, also a jar of cuticle cream, beveling files of emery board, polish, and polish remover. This is not a long list. There are always times when one must have a quick clean up. A big date comes all of a sudden and it is not convenient to rush to a pulchritude bazaar for professional treatment.

Don't wash the hands before filing; if you do the nails will be soft and they will bend. File from sides to center, not too far down at the sides. Run the orange wood stick under the nail eaves to bring out little shags that are there, fluff them away with the emery board. Scour the hands well with hot soap suds, rinse and dry thoroughly.

Cuticle Cream

Apply cuticle cream or olive oil, loosen the cuticle with the orange wood stick, being careful not to press down into the nail base.

Be gentle with the stick, lifting the flesh with a rotary notion. When cutting away hangnails have the point of the scissors directed toward the nail eave, which should be clearly defined by running the stick beneath it. Some women find it convenient to use a nail white pencil for the purpose.

Every bit of oil must be washed away, or the polish will not adhere. Apply a light film, let it dry, put on a second coat. It's a good idea to massage the nails now and then so as to stimulate the underlying tissues that provide human talons with rosy coloring.

LEM OF HOW TO WRITE INFORMAL INVITATIONS FOR AN INFORMAL WEDDING

Informal invitations to informal weddings are usually notes written either by the bride's mother or by the bride. If only a few people are to be invited — perhaps the immediate families and a few close friends — the invitations may be given by word of mouth or by telephone. The members of the families may be invited verbally, and notes written to friends.

Notes of invitation to an informal wedding should, if possible, be written by the bride's mother, or whoever is the hostess of the wedding and reception. The bride may write these notes in her mother's name. Sometimes the bride's mother writes the notes of invitation to the groom's family and friends and to her own close friends, and the bride writes the invitations to her intimate friends.

Two-sheeted notepaper or letterpaper should be used, preferably white.

The invitation written by the bride's mother, to a relative or close friend, might read:

Dear Anne,

Mary and Bob are to be married in the chapel of The United Church on Tuesday, June tenth, at four o'clock. Do tell us that you and Jack will come to the ceremony, and afterward to our house to a small party and a toast to their happiness.

Affectionately,
Jane

To a relative or friend of the groom's family, the bride's mother might write:

Dear Mrs. Jackson:

Mary and Bob Allen are to be married at home on Tuesday, June tenth, at twelve o'clock. We hope very much that you and your husband will come to the wedding and to a very informal breakfast afterward.

Sincerely,
Jane Brown Robinson

The invitations written by the bride might read:

Dear Sallie,

Bob and I are to be married in Grace Church on Tuesday, June tenth, at twelve o'clock. Mother and I hope very much that you and Bill will come to the ceremony and afterward to the small breakfast we are having at our house for our families and a few friends.

Affectionately,
Mary

For a small home wedding, the bride might write the following invitation to her close friends (her mother writing the invitations to the older friends of the family).

Dear Polly,

Bob and I have chosen the day! We are to be married at home on Tuesday, June tenth, at four o'clock, and Mother and I hope that you and Jim can surely come. Do tell us that you will be with us!

Devotedly,
Mary

The complimentary close of these notes and the form of signature would, of course, be adapted to the closeness of relationship or friendship of the person being invited. That is, the bride's mother, writing to a young friend of the bride's, would sign her name Jane Brown Robinson; writing to one of her own close friends she would naturally sign only her first name. The bride, writing to "Dear Sallie", would sign only her first name, but writing to "Dear Mrs. Allen" would sign "Mary Robinson."

Informal wedding invitations are sent out about two weeks or ten days before the wedding date.

The guest receiving a note of invitation to a wedding should write a note in reply, accepting or regretting.

Ninth Annual Convention Held By W. A.'s and Ladies' Aid Societies Of Prince Edward And Hastings

The ninth annual convention of Women's Associations and Ladies' Aid Societies of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties was held in Grace United Church on Thursday, May 22nd, 1941 with the President Mrs. W. A. Bateman of Springbrook in charge.

When the meeting opened at 9 a.m. some two hundred delegates and visitors were registered. The registration being in charge of Mrs. S. Humphrey and Mrs. F. Sager.

After the National Anthem and Theme Song, community singing was led by Mrs. S. P. Hagerman with Mrs. E. M. Hubbs as pianist.

The opening devotional period was conducted by Centenary W. A. having "Faith" as their key word. All joined in singing hymn 399 followed by prayer. The Scripture lesson was taken from 1 Cor. 13, where we are told that 'Faith without works is dead.' A solo "O my Redeemer what a friend Thou art to me" was fittingly given. This was followed by a discourse on Hebrew 11:1 where Paul gives us a definition of 'faith.'

Need of Faith

Faith is a spiritual power or property of man which increases the more we exercise it. There is no such thing as blind faith and it is the greatest and grandest of all forces. How may we increase our faith? By continually thinking of faith, by daily affirming the gospel, apply faith in all our business.

Faith is the invisible blessing of that which we desire as exemplified by the woman having faith as she could but touch the hem of His garment. Faith is evidence —found in experience of great trouble —a reaction comes from within. We feel brighter and stronger. Inner expression is evidence of things not seen: Faith is God's free gift to us: let us use it continually. It will broaden and improve all members in our branches. Faith unifies us with our neighbors and helps us to become strong. Our faith is for the uplift of mankind and establishment of God's Kingdom on earth. But first we must each one of us search our own souls, blot out all sin and avarice, and with a clean heart approach God and ask Him to then increase our faith.

This impressive devotional period was closed by all uniting in singing two verses of the hymn "O for a faith that will not shrink."

A business committee of four ladies was named by the president to report later.

Welcomes Delegates

Mrs. J. R. Brown of Grace Church in her kindly capable manner graciously welcomed all delegates and visitors. In her address she said that this is perhaps the most critical period in the history of the church and in the lives of our people.

"We are now making a common effort to save personal happiness and every body's democracy by tanks, airplanes and diplomatic service, but in the end happiness and democracy could not be saved if we left religion and kindly deeds out of our calculations," she said.

"The church perhaps more than any other institution is concerned over the continuance of free, happy and Christian lives. We meet here therefore to plan how every activity of ours and every relation must be subject to the will of God. And we have come together here less for our own security than for fulfilling the Lord's commission for serving mankind in the spirit of self sacrificing love.

"Our war is against hunger, pain, want, discomfort and need; for hunger and want and need make up the soil in which the seeds of unbelief may sprout.

"Because we are aware of this, we shall plan through co-operation and joint consultation how the Women's Associations may best function and provide in the year ahead of us. Our function as leaders of church aid and of community aid is to practice what the church teaches. Our function is to minister to need. This is a duty that cannot be swept aside even now, because God himself does not pass and those who believe in Him will never doubt its prime importance. Let this be the core of our purpose and program in the present dark hour and we shall come through as a nation at war, as human beings and as Christians. Let me repeat then I welcome you all to a convention which in human and Christian value may well surpass all other conventions we have ever held before."

In replying to address of welcome Mrs. J. E. Beckel of Bethel W. A. said it was a great pleasure to do so because all had been so graciously welcomed.

"We couldn't help but feel at home after such kindly words so full of hospitality. To many of us this is a great day. It is a pleasure to mingle with a large gathering of Christian women. It is a pleasure to meet in such a large, spacious, well equipped church as this one. It is a pleasure to get new ideas from others for sometimes we run out of ideas. It is a joy to realize how other societies care for parsonage and manse, help the sick, the lonely and poor and how they assist the Official Board to balance their budget, how they become in a special way the ministers' assistants. We are glad to be here today for we feel we are going to obtain further inspiration to carry on our work for God and His Kingdom so on behalf of this large gathering of Christian women I want to say "Thanks" for the words of welcome and I hope our sojourn together may be mutually helpful.

President's Address

The President's address on "The Business of Living" contained much food for thought.

In it she said that the church today seems to be laboring behind closed doors. The forces of godlessness are on the march every where. It seems as if the light is being extinguished in country after country. Men's hearts are failing them because of fear. The world bruised and bleeding, lies helpless at our doors, waiting for the guiding hand of Jesus.

Become Steadfast

"We must become steadfast and strong, and to place our trust in God, and remember that in life, it is neither the wind nor the boat, but it is the man in the boat that counts.

"Is Christ with us? and are we with Christ? He is the power house of the universe, the controlling centre of all life.

"It is the storms that bind us together through adversity and disappointment we realize that we are members, one of another, that we are in this world to live with other people, and that we are to work together, and share the blessings God has entrusted to us.

Life would teach us nothing but selfishness, if we were to sail always under fair winds.

The contrary wind makes us feel the need of keeping in time with each other and helping while each pulls with his might.

Opportunity For Service

Life has brought us a wonderful opportunity for service and for promoting a spirit of good will and Christian fellowship, and this is one of the purposes of our women's organizations.

I do believe that with the sovereign authority of Christ, we will pass into smooth waters. Remember His promise. "When thou passest thro the waters, I will be with thee: and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee."

We need a faith even greater than that of the disciples, a faith that will survive, not one night, but through many nights and days, a faith that will bring us, through God's grace, and our efforts, permitting Him to work through us as His human channels into the harbour of peace.

In her ever usual clear and capable manner the secretary, Mrs. Clarence Holmes presented her report of the eighth annual convention held in Victoria Church last May which was duly adopted and signed.

The treasurer's report showed cash on hand at beginning of year to be $37.55 while expenses for year were $11.40 leaving a balance in bank now of $26.15.

The different societies in reporting stated their monies had been raised by collections, fees, banquets, bazaars, fowl suppers, pie socials, pan cake suppers, donations, pot luck dinners, rummage sales also nickle and dime cards and had been mostly used for same purposes as upkeep of parsonages, minister's salary, church treasury, M. and M. Fund, war saving certificates, etc.

The address to have been given by Mrs. J. F. Reycraft of Picton, but who owing to illness could not be present, was ably given by Mrs. E. Ward also of Picton.

Women in The Church

Her subject today was the place of women in the church.

"Let us then," she said, "start at the top—the ministry—you will all remember that according to newspaper reports, a great deal of the time of two or three sessions of our General Council was taken in discussion as to whether women should be ordained. The chief argument for—was a young woman who had taken all the theological studies and was serving the church in an isolated charge in Saskatchewan. Ordination for her would help in her work enabling her to administer the rites of the church such as administering the sacrament, baptism and marriage. Finally the yeas had it and she was ordained. She is now holding the position of secretary to our Deaconess home in Toronto, a position never before held by an ordained minister. One other woman has since been ordained and is serving a charge somewhere in the Toronto Conference and I believe another is coming up for ordination this year. There has been no crowding for the privilege. It does not seem that this was the woman's place. One cannot but think that a woman, to take her place in the ministry must forego the ordinary natural destiny of woman-kind that of a homemaker.

An Official Board

"The next is the Official Board—Some women are automatically members of the Board. How many attend? The advice and counsel of some women might be very well made use of by this august body. But it does seem as though we mostly let the men do it. After all men do not seem to relish having women taking over, what for long years has been their province. And cannot we, as in the political field use our influence and make our suggestions wisely and tactfully, and still let the men do it.

Many Tasks Call

"But we have lots of scope — All the tasks that normally belong in the women's realm are still theirs. All the social functions of the church, and what is more necessary? Planning to meet the strangers and make them welcome. Having gatherings where we may get together as families and learn to know each other. Raising funds in various methods to furnish the parsonage; to help out the church finances; buy extras for the sanctuary that the ordinary budget does not allow for. They may help in young people's work; the boys and girls are very near the heart of every mother. Then there is the Sunday School, always badly in need of teachers, and who can guide the young minds better than the women, whose God-given privilege to has been to bear them.

"Let us make the church a place where young people will like to come. In this present age there is scope enough for all and more in trying to keep and guide our present-day young people in the way of purity and right. We have just as fine young folks as have been in any generations but so many pitfalls open for them.

"So let us not look for greener fields. Let us remember that even in war time our church claims our services. For if we do not fulfill our obligations to our Heavenly Father, the head of all churches, how can we ask Him to give us victory."

Miss Audrey Brickman then very efficiently delighted all present with a solo "Have you been in the garden with Jesus."

The following committees were named to meet during lunch hour:

Nominating Committee: Mrs. Morris Stickle, Mrs. E. Walt and Mrs. W. J. Pack.

Resolutions and Courtesy Committee: Mrs. Lorne Brickman and Mrs. R. Bell.

The quiet half hour in charge of Marmora W. A. very fittingly brought to a close this forenoon session of an impressive convention.

Quiet music and prayer by Mrs. Fletcher was followed by all joining in singing "Jesus calls us o'er the tumult." The Scripture reading chosen was 1 Kings 19:9-12 also Psalm 85 and verse 8. The speaker said God speaks to the hearts of listening people. There is never silence between the infinite and His people. Abraham and Samuel heard the still small voice and followed God; likewise Isaiah, Jeremiah (prophets) and Hosea the farmer prophet heard and followed God. People are not always listening—very seldom is it forced on us. When God comes into our hearts in the form of "the still small voice" we must and will listen—though some times not very attentively.

God speaks through our conscience, or the reading of a book, often through the medium of a little child or in the silence. What the world needs today is a people who will listen to God's voice and do His bidding and until we do listen there is no hope for this troubled world. May we shut out all voices but Thine and listen and be willing to follow.

Attentive to God's Voice

May we be attentive to Thy voice and go forth in Thy strength and will to meet the tasks of the day that await us.

A duet "I heard the voice of Jesus say" by Mrs. Wells and Miss Brown of Marmora brought to a close this quiet half hour.

The ladies of Grace Church proved themselves admirable hostesses in serving a bountiful dinner to nearly 300 delegates and visitors.

The afternoon session opened with the National Anthem, the Theme song and a short round of community singing.

Devotional Period

A devotional period by Rednersville W. A. was carried out by all singing "Breathe on me breath of God" followed by reading of first Psalm and prayer.

A poem "Begin and end the day with God" was read by one of the members, also the "Diary of a Bible". Let us hope none of us use our Bibles that way. The singing of hymn 500 "Take time to be holy" closed this devotional period.

The Societies reports of the morning were carried on and completed, some 53 societies in all reporting.

All joined in singing "Take my life and let it be". The offering was taken and dedicated by the President.

A very pleasing solo "The Stranger of Galilee" was capably rendered by Mrs. E. S. Doggett of Thomasburg.

Officers Elected

The nominating committee reported the following slate of officers.

District Organizer, Mrs. Lott, Frankford No. 2.

Honorary Pres., Mrs. G. F. Lent, Belleville.

President, Mrs. Florence Bateman, Springbrook.

1st Vice President, Mrs. O. Van-Luven, Consecon.

2nd Vice President, Mrs. E. Ward, Picton.

3rd Vice President, Mrs. Harold Elliott, Harold.

Secretary, Mrs. H. Murphy, Shannonville.

Treasurer, Mrs. G. A. Shorey, Foxboro.

Executive: Mrs. Clarence Holmes, Belleville; Miss Audra Brickman, Victoria; Mrs. Frank Sager, Trenton; Mrs. Ross Burr, Mountain View; Mrs. Morris Stickle, Johnstown; Mrs. J. Waddell, Foxboro.

The Courtesy and Resolutions Committee resolved that the thanks of the convention be extended the Board of Grace Church for use of church for convention, the ladies for the bountiful dinner and all those who had in any way helped to make the convention the success it certainly had been.

Mrs. Macklin of Stirling very efficiently presided over a round table conference and dealt with the various problems.

Inspiring Words

Two verses of "Will your anchor hold" were sung by the congregation after which Rev. Jas. Semple of Belleville gave the inspirational address of the convention.

He said we are challenged today as never before and our conception should be that we as W. A. members and adherents must spread good will as well as looking after finances, etc.

We must have co-operation—the great word in the business world today to be used not only occasionally but for all time. It is a great principle.

We must stress conquest because where conquest ceases mutiny begins. How to stress it:

1. By regular church attendance.
2. By Evangelism .
3. By constancy—Stick by your job through thick and thin no matter what comes. It is one of the greatest notes to be sung. A great day for work of God.
4. Consecration—A life hid with Christ in God—without Christ our work is going to miss the mark.

In closing he urged and left for our consideration the Greek proverb "that we build like giants and finish like jewellers."

After the introduction and installation of the new officers by Mrs. J. A. Lott and Mrs. C. E. Macklin the Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. G. D. Campbell and thus another and very successful Ladies' Aid convention was fittingly closed for another year.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his appetite and we sat down in the square for a change, and I said, G, pop, did you ever see such a cranky looking man?

Meaning some man sitting on a bench on the other side of the walk, looking as if he never smiled in his life and wouldn't even try on account of being afraid of cracking his face, and pop said, He has all the outward caracteristics of a sourpuss, I must say. Judging from first impressions I should call him a man in whom the milk of human kindness is scanty in quantity and curdled in quality. I would class him among the human fiends who tie tin cans to butterflies tails and shut doors on babies fingers to give them something to yell for. I'd say it breaks his heart to throw anything away, even old dishwater, wich he uses to water his wife's rose bushes, and he carries a pocketfull of broken buttons and bottle caps to drop into blind man's tin cups. And yet I might be quite wrong, because first impressions are apt to be faulty and appearances are notoriously deceeving, he said.

Well why, pop, do you mean he might be an all right of a guy even with that face? I said, and pop said, Precisely. He might be a man who takes stray dogs into his home to teach them to be kind to stray cats. Perhaps there is nothing he loves more than flowers, of which he gives great buntches to children, whom he loves almost equally well, pop said.

Well jimminy, pop, how can we find out wich way he really is? I said and pop said, I dont know, have you any suggestions?

Well we might both walk passed him and stamp on his feet and see whether he just smiles as if he thought we couldn't help it or whether he just smiles as if he thought we couldn't help it or whether he looks mad as if he didn't give a darn if we could help it or not, I said.

Wich we didn't on account of pop claiming the idea appealed to him, only not quit enough to try it.

British Bomber Plane Downed In Syria Say Vichy Dispatches

Vichy, France, May 28 (AP)—Vichy dispatches from Beirut today said that British and French air squadrons had clashed over Syria.

The three-man crew of one British plane, a Glenn Martin bomber, was killed, the dispatches claimed.

French planes were said to have gone up to give battle when British aircraft bombed the airdrome at Neirab, near Aleppo, which has been used by the Germans.

TORCH DEDICATED BEFORE 10,000

Is Carried Through Edmonton Downtown Streets During Day

Edmonton, May 28 (CP)—Canada's symbolic torch of victory was dedicated at an impressive ceremony before a crowd estimated at more than 10,000 persons in Edmonton area last night.

Hundreds were turned away from the huge stadium in which Mayor David H. Elton of Lethbridge addressed the crowd after they had listened to a broadcast speecch by the President of the United States.

The bronze beacon, designed to attract attention to Canada's $600,000,000 Victory Loan Campaign which begins June 2, was dedicated with full military honors at Victoria Saturday. It is being borne across Canada and later will be flown across the Atlantic and handed to Prime Minister Churchill as an emblem of Canada's support of the loan drive.

Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen, Mayor John Fry, Premier Aberhart and other dignitaries welcomed the torch to Edmonton.

The torch decorated with flags and pennants was carried through Edmonton downtown streets during the day.

50 M. P.'s Visit Petawawa Camp

Petawawa Camp, Ont., May 28 (CP)—Fifty Members of Parliament, led by the Defence Minister, Hon. J. L. Ralston, saw this sprawling camp of 10,000 troops in full wartime activity Monday during a seven-hour inspection visit.

They clambered gaily in and out of big army lorries transporting them about the camp and some shouted "sissy!" at colleagues and staff officers riding behind in comfortable passenger cars.

Defence Minister Ralston and Donald MacKenzie (Lib. Neepawa) rode in a bouncing bantam reconnaissance car in rough sandpit.

When the "baby blitz-buggy" whizzed by grinning spectators, Mr. Ralston rose in his seat and yelled "Ride 'er Cowboy" at the top of his voice.

The tiny car, of a type widely used in the United States army and the only one of its kind in the Dominion, won most attention in a large-scale demonstration of 30 types of military vehicle.

NEWARK BEARS DROP TO SECOND SPOT IN LOOP

Seventh-Place Orioles Win 3-1, While Montreal Beats Leafs 3-2

JERSEY GIANTS WIN

(By The Associated Press)

A lot of folks have been saying right along that the Baltimore Orioles couldn't be as bad as they've looked and Newark fans probably agree today.

The seventh-place Orioles, who beat the Bruins twice over the week-end, whipped the Bears again last night 3-1 to knock them from the International Baseball League lead.

Montreal Royals took over first place by a half game with a 3-2 decision over the last-place Toronto Leafs. In the only other game played last night Jersey City defeated Syracuse 7-3 in 10 innings.

Clyde Smoll, who started Baltimore on its comeback last Thursday by winning his first game of the season to end a five-game Oriole losing streak, racked up his second straight against the Bears with a seven hitter.

Montreal came from behind with a pair of unearned runs in the sixth inning on four singles and an error to give Wes Flowers his third victory. Flowers allowed six hits and the Leafs bunched two of them with a hit batsman for both their runs in the fourth. Vallie Eves went the distance for Toronto yielding 12 safeties.

American Shipyards Adopt Mass Production

Mass production assembly line technique is applied to shipbuilding at the Consolidated Shipyard at Long Beach, Calif. Here is a general view, showing how it is done. In foreground, at RIGHT, is the half hull of a ship under construction. Behind it is a complete hull nearly ready for launching. When the complete hull is launched the half hull will be finished and another half started. Thus is the assembly line kept on the go, turning out vessels to help both America and Britain.

BUY ME A VICTORY BOND

We did it BEFORE...
We will do it AGAIN

In 1918-1919, when Canada asked its citizens to loan their money to the limit, they did it—enthusiastically. It was sufficient for them to know that Canada needed the money.

They poured out their money to buy Victory Bonds in $50's, $100's, $500's and $1,000's . . . yes, tens and hundreds of thousands. The loyalty and eagerness with which they loaned the money astounded the world.

And Canada paid every cent of principal and interest.

We did it before. We will do it again.

From our now greater population there will be another outpouring of dollars for Victory because the threat to our freedom is graver now than it was then.

Canadians have never failed to back up their fighting sons with fighting dollars. "Come, then, let us to the task."

Canadian Boy Hurls 3-Hitter For A's to Beat Boston Red Sox For First Time this Season 11-1

Phil Marchildon of Penetang Always in Command of the Contest

HUBBELL SHOWS WAY

By HUGH S. FULLERTON
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Among the many things Carl Hubbell must have learned in his dozen years of Major League baseball pitching is that the best way to win a ball game is to do it yourself.

Hubbell took personal charge last night of the Giants' first home game under the floodlights, conquering Boston Braves 2-1 in a National League tilt, although his team could get only seven hits.

Hal Schumacher and Manuel Salvo fought it out for the first seven innings with the only scores coming on a pair of home runs by Joe Orengo and Eddie Miller. Then after an hour's recess while the crowd of 17,000 listened to President Roosevelt's speech, Hubbell and Dick Errickson resumed the duel. The Braves promptly loaded the bases on two hits and an error but a double-play saved Hubbell and he repaid that kindness in the ninth by singling home Bill Jurges with the winning run.

Another night encounter also wound up in the last half of the ninth, with the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals pulling out a 3-2 decision over Chicago Cubs. Johnny Mize, pinch-hitting with the bases full rapped a single off Jake Mooty to decide the game.

Victory kept the Cards 2 1-2 games ahead of Brooklyn Dodgers, who earned a 6-0 decision over Philadelphia in the National League's only afternoon contest.

A's Are a Hot Team

Philadelphia Athletics, currently the "hottest" American League team, had to share some of the day's honors in that circuit with Detroit, which knocked off the league-leading Cleveland Indians 9-6. The A's took a 5-2 trimming from the Boston Red Sox in the first game of a doubleheader but came back behind the three-hit hurling of Phil Marchildon, a lad from Penetanguishene, Ont., to win the second 11-1.

The Athletics, seeking their first victory over Boston this season, slammed three Sox hurlers for a dozen hits to win the second game including Bob Johnson's eighth homer of the season and Sam Chapman's seventh.

Bruce Campbell, former Indian who had beaten his old mates Monday, did the same trick again for Detroit, clouting two home runs to drive in four tallies.

Chicago's second-place White Sox remained four games behind the Tribe when Bob Muncrief's six-hit pitching and Joe Grace's hitting carried St. Louis Browns to a 5-2 triumph.

New York Yankees took a 10-8 victory from the Senators. Joe DiMaggio's homer and three singles topped the Yanks' attack.

Between Innings
GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Here are a few "did you know" facts taken from baseball's new Red Book, published by Al Munro Elias, one of the diamond game's chief statisticians:

There were numerous left-handed throwing shortstops, third basemen and catchers in the majors before the turn of the century. . . Willie Keeler, a left-handed thrower, played third for the Giants in 1892-93. . . There were half a dozen left-handed throwing catchers between 1883 and 1902. . . The last of the breed was Joe Wall, who caught for Brooklyn in 1902.

Al Simmons, who still is on the active player list with the Athletics, needs something like 100 hits to join the select circle of players who made 3,000 major league basehits, but Al seems destined to join that small group that just missed. . . Sam Rice finished with 2,987, Willie Keeler with 2,955 and Rogers Hornsby with 2,930. . . The only six players ever to make 3,000 hits were Ty Cobb, 4,191, Tris Speaker, 3,615 Hans Wagner, 3,430, Eddie Collins 3,313, Nap Lajoie, 3,242 and Pap Andon, 3,081. . . Paul Waner had a chance, starting the season with 2,868 hits.

Back in 1884 Hoss Radbourne, pitching for Providence, won 74 games in one season. . . Playing a 143-game schedule that would mean he was pitching every other day, relieving in between because he must have lost every once in a while. . . But when you're considering pitcher's records, it's pretty hard to overlook Cy Young's 22-year record of 511 victories and 215 defeats. . . The nearest anyone ever came to Young's mark was Walter Johnson, who wound up 21 years with 414 victories and 275 defeats. . . He topped Christy Mathewson by one victory. . . They say that when Alexander got the last victory he couldn't get anybody out after that.

The Giants with 13 and the Yanks with 11 have won more pennants in their respective leagues than any other clubs. . . The Browns are the only club never to win a pennant and the Tigers are the only club to finish in the cellar. . . The Phillies hold the last place crown with a record of 13 years at the bottom. . . The American League has topped the National League in homers every year since 1930, when the senior loop clouted 392 for a major league record. . . The American League mark is 883, set last season. . . The Yanks have been home run champs of the majors for the last five straight years.

Babe Ruth, the acknowledged home run king, never hit four homers in any game but Chuck Klein, Lou Gehrig, Ed Delhanty and Bobby Lowe did. . . Ruth only hit three homers in a game twice while Johnny Mize already has accomplished that feat four times. . . The season of 1887 was the year of the biggest hitting splurge in baseball history with 14 men batting over .400. . . J. F. O'Neill, St. Louis Browns, was high with .492 but T. P. Burns of Baltimore rated only fourteenth with his .401.

Only 25 men have ever made six hits in six consecutive times at bat between 1901-1940 but Sunny Jim Bottomley and Doc Cramer, now playing with Washington, each did it twice. . . Only two outfielders have ever made two unassisted double plays in one season, Tris Speaker performing that feat in 1918 and Adam Somorosky doing it in 1931. . . There's been six perfect games (no-hit, no-run, no-man-reach first) with John Richmond and John Ward each pitching one in 1880, Cy Young getting one in 1904, Eddie Joss in 1908, Ernie Shore in 1917 and Charlie Robertson in 1923.

The standing of the City Softball loop reads today:

	W.	L.	Pts.
Corby A. C.	2	0	4
Reliance	2	1	4
Juniors	1	1	2
Pt. Anne	1	2	2

Here's how Peterboro's Fred Craig views our softball situation:

"Belleville Reliance have invaded Kingston and smuggled out of that burg one Ray Smith, well remembered as right winger for the champion Kingston Combines last winter. The ostensible purpose of persuading Smith to take a position in Belleville was to use his ability as a softball pitcher but we have a hunch that the Belleville gang will use their powers of persuasion on the new recruit to keep him in the Quinte town next winter. The Reliance team could use a winger of his proven skill. In the meanwhile however Smith isn't doing too badly as a softball heaver. In his first start for the Reliance Club he pitched two-hit ball in a senior city league game against the Belleville SACO. He retired the first 20 batters to face him in order before the losers finally got a pair of safe blows in the seventh frame. Johnny Hamilton, hockey defence man, played first for the Reliance and contributed a double.

Knocking the maples for a cool three-string score of 3396 the Belleville Golf trundlers won the major "A" bowling championship for the third consecutive year. Down 180 in the score the Golfers rallied in their final game at the Recreation Alleys last night to beat their closest rivals, Corbys A.C. by 258 pins and return champs. The repeat winners won the regular league schedule and then went on to cop the play-off series to boot. In the playdowns the Belleville Golf won, Corbys were second Deacons third and Mead Johnson fourth.

Two Canadian pitchers were rival moundsmen in Boston yesterday when Phil Marchildon, former Penetang pitcher hurled a three-hitter for Philadelphia and won 11 to 1 over the Red Sox. Oscar "Lefty" Judd, former Ingersoll pitcher, was on the Boston hilltop.

Quebec Hockey Association Approves Plans for New Eastern Playoffs

RADICAL CHANGE

Montreal, May 27 (CP)—A rift between the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association and its parent body, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, appeared developing today after the Q.A.H.A. approved plans that might lead to the formation of a new Eastern Association consisting of C.A.H.A. branches in Quebec, Ottawa and the Maritimes.

The new set-up was proposed at a special Q.A.H.A. meeting last night by George Slater, President of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, and was given approval by Q.A.H.A. delegates. Plans were made to discuss the proposal with Ottawa and Maritime groups.

(There was no immediate comment for Maritime officials, but Secretary Cecil Duncan of the Ottawa and District Association said the proposal would receive "unqualified approval in Ottawa.)

Slater's proposal was that the three Eastern Associations stage their own playoffs, the proceeds remaining within the Associations, with Eastern Junior and Senior winners advancing in Allan and Memorial Cup play, under C.A.H.A. jurisdiction from then on. Such a system is already in use between the Ontario Hockey Association and the Northern Ontario Hockey Association to declare Ontario winners.

Officials of the Q.A.H.A. said a radical move was necessary to "let the world know that we are not satisfied with C.A.H.A. playoff conditions."

President Norman Dawe of the Quebec body said the proposal might seem like "mutiny" and that suspension might follow, but the time had come for Eastern Associations to make known their feelings.

ROYALS START A ROAD TRIP IN FIRST PLACE

Montreal Fans Envision a Pennant, the First One Since 1935

TEAM CLICKING

(By Harold Freeman)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 28.—(CP)—Ignoring the fact it's still early in the season, Montreal baseball fans saw their International League Royals embark on a long road-trip in first place today, and immediately began talking of the possibility of Montreal's first championship since 1935.

Optimism of the pennant-hungry fans springs not so much from the fact that the Royals moved into a slim half-game lead over Newark Bears last night, as from the showing of the team to date at bat and on the defensive. The Royals are leading the league in both hitting and fielding at present.

The way the faithful figure it now, Royals might come through with a title if they can keep the present team intact, or maybe strengthen it a bit in the outfield. But their fingers are crossed; Royals have been up near the top early in the season in other years only to drop into the second division later when keyplayers have moved up to the majors in mid-season.

The Royals have lost two stars already—Charlie Gilbert and Johnny Hudson—without breaking their stride. They've been able to do it because Sammy Bell has taken over Hudson's chores at second base and is playing the best ball of his five-year Montreal career, and because an outfield consisting of one regular fielder, a converted first-baseman and a converted second baseman so far has been able to stand up afield.

At the plate, the Royals are an everlasting source of joy to the fans. Excluding pitchers, every man on the regular lineup except Paul Campbell is hitting .300 or better, and Campbell's .280 average includes a nice assortment of extra-base blows when they are most needed.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Johnny Mize, Cardinals—Hit pinch single with bases full in ninth inning to drive in run that beat Cubs.

Phil Marchildon and Bob Johnson, Athletics—Marchildon held Red Sox to three hits and Johnson homered with two aboard in nightcap to give A's split in twin bill.

Top-Grade Egg Prices Strengthen

Toronto, May 28. — A definitely stronger Toronto open produce market was featured yesterday by another increase in eggs, prices to shipper on grades A-large and A-medium firming 1 to 1½ cents a dozen on top of the previous day's 1-cent improvement. Butter was in good demand and quotations strengthened in late trading, while new-make white cheese also gained ground.

Ready absorption of the prevailing light receipts pushed prices on all but C grades 1 to 1½ cents higher on the egg market. The current small arrivals of fresh supplies are attributed to declinig production and large exports to the United Kingdom.

Great Britain last week increased its order for Canadian eggs for shipment in the fall from 180,000 cases to 230,000 cases, or 6,900,000 dozen. The acceptance of this quantity by exporting firms is nearly completed and the Dominion Department of Agriculture states that, as a result of this, a stabilized market for Canadian egg producers throughout the balance of the present season is fairly well assured. In order to insure that exporters will be able to secure stocks to meet their fall commitments, the department says a continuation of the present restrictions on storing, except under special permits, will have to be continued.

Although lately there has been a noticeable decline in production, particularly in Ontario, more early and less late hatched chicks sold this year gives promise of a heavier than usual egg output during late summer and early fall.

The butter market turned slightly higher when early buying had taken up offerings of the first-grade Ontario creamery product at 30½ cents a pound. Closing sales were reported at 30¾ cents a pound.

OFFER VICTORY

Hope Objective Will be Exceeded

"While the amount of the loan, nominally, is $600,000,000 the Department of Finance and the Victory Loan committee entertain highest hopes that this amount will be exceeded by the actual cash subscriptions offered," Mr. Ilsley's statement said.

He said cash subscriptions may be paid in full at the time of application without accrued interest or the bonds may be purchased by instalments—10 per cent on application, 15 per cent July 15 and Aug. 15, 20 per cent Sept. 15 and Oct. 15, and 20.71 per cent on the three-per cent bonds or 19.52 per cent on the two-per cent bonds Nov. 15—the last payment including accrued interest.

May Exchange Service Bonds

Holders of Dominion of Canada National Service Bonds maturing Nov. 15 this year have the opportunity to exchange them for bonds of the Victory Loan 1941 "at an attractive price." Surrender value of the National Service Loan five-per cent bonds, with final coupon attached will be 102.15 per cent of par value. The difference between the turn-in value of the old bonds and the subscription price of the new bonds will be paid in cash.

Mr. Ilsley said a prospectus and an official application form would be delivered by mail to every householder before opening of the loan June 2. During the loan campaign canvassers would try to call upon every citizen.

"As Minister of Finance, I earnestly ask Canadians to regard every Victory Loan canvasser as a wartime worker On His Majesty's Service," Mr. Ilsley said.

"I urge the support of every citizen for this Victory Loan. It is to help enable us to buy the tools of victory for it is only by victory that our freedom, our democratic system itself, can survive.

"Money buys machines. Machines save us the loss of Canadian lives. They give us mechanized strength to outmatch a well-equipped and ruthless foe.

"We shall win, because we must. And to win, we must have money—the money that Victory Loan 1941 will, in part provide."

British Navy's Air Arm Proves Superior to Huns'

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 28 (AP).—With the destruction of the German battleship Bismarck in the most lurid sea drama of this war, Britain's Royal Navy did more than avenge the lost battle-cruiser Hood and her people. It altered in Britain's favor the odds in the Battle of the Atlantic, upon the outcome of which rests the fate of the British Empire.

At a single stroke a most menacing threat to British commerce in the Atlantic, the life-blood of her war effort, had been removed. With the Bismarck gone and the less effective Nazi battle-cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau immobilized at Brest for weeks ,there remain only three German capital ships at most that could again jeopardize British convoys in mid-Atlantic.

Moreover, the grieving relatives of the Hood's dead and the Royal Navy may find comfort in the fact that it was the Hood which in her own death agony dealt the Bismarck the blow that ultimately sent her to join her victim on the wreck-strewn floor of the Atlantic. It was, according to German official accounts, a shell wound on her prow, landed by the Hood in a dawn-lighted five minutes of tragedy, that slowed the Bismarck down and prevented her escape in the end.

Tirpitz Next Problem.

Available to the Germans to renew the attempt at capital shipraiding remains certainly the Bismarck's sister battleship, the Tirpitz; and presumably two even more powerful and swift craft, the Friedrich der Grosse and the Hindenburg. Both were under construction when the war started and probably are now either ready for sea or close to it. Both also are believed to be 40,000-toners as compared to the 35,000-ton Bismarck and Tirpitz, the 26,000-ton Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the two remaining 10,000-ton "pocket battleships", the Admiral Scheer and the Lutzow.

Presumably the 40,000-tonners are faster and more heavily armored and of equal armor thickness at least with the Bismarck class. Neither has yet figured in the war, unless British bombers have hit them during raids on German navy and ship yards.

For the moment, however, it is only the Tirpitz against which the whole battleship strength of the British Fleet in the Atlantic need stand guard. The two remaining Nazi pocket battleships are too vulnerable to cruiser or even merchant auxiliary gunfire to be a deadly menace. And a ship, the Bismarck, that would have been of prime value to the Germans in an attempted invasion of England, has been wiped out.

Air Arm Superior.

That Britain's position in the Atlantic has been imponderably improved by the eye-for-an-eye exchange of the Hood for the Bismarck is beyond question. British superiority in capital ships over her foe has been stepped up even further than the absolute figures would indicate, and the problem of keeping Atlantic sea lanes open simplified to that extent.

The greatest sea clash of the war has proved two other things of vital consequence to the British. It has demonstrated clearly that the British Navy's Air Arm is superior in the art of otack by air-borne torpedo. It has also indicated clearly the effectiveneas of the far-flung British naval and air dispositions in the Atlantic.

Visibility at sea was a major factor in enabling the British cruisers and aircraft to keep contact with the wounded Nazi battleship and hound her ultimately to her death after a chase of more than 1,700 miles. And visibility in those seas will continue to improve as the hours of darkness shorten and those of daylight lengthen.

In the report of the inquest looking into the death of the late Mrs. Louise Wilson of Bonarlaw published on Friday last in this paper, the names of Bernard Stewart and Harold Peters were inadvertently interchanged.

The accident occurred on April 9th last while the late Mrs. Wilson was purchasing some bread from Mr. Harold Peters, the woman being struck by a motor vehicle driven by Bernard Stewart, not Mr. Peters as first published. The jury returned an "open verdict."

Mr. Peters is a business man conducting a bread route and the inconvenience caused him in the unfortunate changing of names is regretted.

R. A. F. Pilot Says Bismarck's Gun Fire Hottest He Ever Saw

By ROBERT BUNNELLE

London, May 28 (CP)—"It was the hottest fire I've ever been under," said the Royal Air Force pilot of one of the Catalina long-range flying boats which shadowed the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck to her fatal rendezvous with the British Fleet today.

The pilot looked thoughtfully tonight at several holes in the hull of his boat—holes put there by the terrific salvos from the Bismarck during the brief interval that the plane slipped from one cloud to another.

Even so, the plane continued her dogged pursuit for ten hours after an overall flight of twenty-four hours, the Air Ministry's news service said.

The United States-built Catalina planes relieved British Sunderland flying boats in the chase, which originated when other American-built planes, Hudsons, spotted the mighty Bismarck in a Norwegian fjord.

"There was lots of cloudy weather and a misty haze," related the Catalina's pilot. "We had ducked into a cloud and were trying to edge around the Bismarck.

"Suddenly we came to the end of our cloud and found ourselves bank over the ship, which was only 400 yards away.

"I thought they had us. The Bismarck put up the worst barrage I've ever seen. She seemed one big flash from bow to stern and must have been turning loose on us everything she had.

"The Bismarck apparently thought we were going to bomb her, because she turned a full 90 degrees off course when we ran out of the clouds and opened fire as she turned.

"I don't know how we managed to dodge all the stuff she threw up.

"It was a ticklish moment, and we were lucky to get back into a cloud, but the Catalina went on flying despite the holes the Bismarck put in her hull.

"I had several members of the crew stopping holes so we would not sink when we landed at our water base".

The pilot of another Catalina described the Bismarck's anti-aircraft fire as "very unhealthy".

"We tried to approach as close as possible to the Bismarck", he said, "but whenever we came in she opened up with a shattering barrage. We were too close to those shells for comfort.

"Despite the haze, the Bismarck was an impressive sight, doing more than 20 knots in a heavy sea which often had the bow running under water".

The Air Ministry's news service gave this description of the role enacted by Catalina planes in the trapping of the Bismarck:

"Dodging anti-aircraft fire every time they showed themselves out of a cloud, American-built Catalina flying boats of the R.A.F. Coastal Command, together with Sunderlands, shadowed the German battleship Bismarck day and night until she was sunk by ships of the Royal Navy.

"The Catalinas quartered the sea, so there was the scantest possibility of the Bismarck avoiding detection for any length of time. Cloud cover was used with the greatest effect so that shadowing and reporting could be done without the aircraft themselves being detected . . .

"But the Catalinas had a break in the clouds now and then. Their crews paid high testimony to the anti-aircraft armament and skill of the German gunners. A flying boat might leave a cloud for only a few seconds, but that would be sufficient for the enemy guns to come into action and surround the aircraft with bursting shells.

First Attacked by Hudsons

"The story begins when the Bismarck was discovered in Norwegian fjords and was attacked in a storm by American-built Hudsons.

"Later on, when sighted again by ships of the Royal Navy in the North Atlantic, shadowing was taken up by a Sunderland flying boat, which subsequently witnessed the first engagement between the British and German forces.

"This Sunderland was relieved by a Catalina, which continued to shadow the Bismarck as she fled southward.

"From this time onward Catalina flying boats of the Coastal Command co-operated with His Majesty's ships in keeping watch on the Bismarck's every movement and every device to evade close action.

"Toward the end of the Bismarck's run she repeatedly launched her own aircraft in attempts to drive off the shadowing Catalinas, but each time the Catalinas disappeared into clouds, only to return a few moments later to resume their unrelenting watch".

hemispheric defence.

He said that Nazi occupation of bases in Greenland "would bring the war close to our continental shores; because they are stepping stones to Labrador, Newfoundland, Navo Scotia and the northern United States.

Mr. Roosevelt included Canada in his proclamation that an unlimited national emergency confronts the United States when he asked that the military strength of the U.S. "be put on the basis of readiness to repel any and all acts or threats of aggression directed toward any part of the western hemisphere."

Among guests in the east room of the White House from where the President broadcast to the world were Hon. Leighton McCarthy, Canadian Minister to the United States; his wife, a son John, and Mrs. Ernest Howard, a daughter.

Carried to World

This was the fireside chat for which the nation and most of the world had awaited eagerly for days. The radio carried it to the four corners of the globe by direct transmission, and by relays in the languages of many peoples—Spanish, Portuguese, French, Italian, German, Arabic, Netherlands, Czech, Slovak, Greek, Serb-Croat, Norwegian, Rumanian and Bulgarian.

Even before the President faced the cluster of microphones the complete text of his address was already being sent to Berlin and to Tokyo by Axis newsmen.

In Washington Congressional opinion divided into two main schools. Supporters of the administration's foreign policy applauded the speech as "superb . . . excellent . . . courageous . . . a ringing call".

Opposition Voiced

Opposition legislators called it a speech to promote war hysteria. . . a typical Rooseveltian speech that took 45 minutes to say nothing that we already did not know. . . disturbing . . . .an executive declaration of a war policy."

Senator Gerald Nye (Rep.-North Dakota), for example, remarked: "The Roosevelt war progresses. Although he says the only thing we need to fear is fear itself, he proceeds to put fear in the American breast in abundance".

On the other hand, Senator Theodore Green (Dem-Rhode Island) of the Foreign Relations Committee said: "I think the President was called on to assert leadership . . . I think the country as a whole will follow it and Congress will follow the lead of the people". He accordingly suggested immediate repeal of the Neutrality Act to "maintain American rights on the seas".

Given Extraordinary Powers

The President's proclamation of an unlimited emergency it was generally conceded, clothed him with extraordinary powers that may be exercised as events warrant. By issuing additional proclamations, it was pointed out, he can close or commandeer radio stations, take over power houses needed for munitions production, demand preference for troops and war materials on all transportation systems, or suspend trading on securities exchanges—to name only a few possible uses of power.

Throughout the address, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated his conviction that hemisphere security is in jeopardy because of the Nazi plans for world domination.

"Adolf Hitler," he said at the very outset "never considered the domination of Europe as an end in itself. European conquest was but a step toward ultimate goals in all the other continents. It is unmistakably apparent to all of us that, unless the advance of Hitlerism is forcibly checked now, the Western Hemisphere will be within range of the Nazi weapons of destruction."

He offered his audience a blueprint of what he looked for, should Germany triumph abroad.

Sardonic Tone in Voice

First would come the familiar assurances from Hitler. There was a sardonic tone in Mr. Roosevelt's voice as he recited them: "I am now completely satisfied. This is the last territorial readjustment I will seek. All we want is peace, friendship and profitable trade with you in the new world."

"They (the Nazis) plan to treat the Latin-American nations as they are now treating the Balkans. They plan to strangle the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada."

It was not until the end of his speech that the President with measured gravity announced: "We reassert the ancient American doctrine of freedom of the seas."

"If the Axis powers fail to gain control of the seas, they are certainly defeated. Their dreams of world domination will then go by the board; and the criminal leaders who started this war will suffer inevitable disaster."

Resist With All Forces

The President formulated the national policy of the United States today in these words:—

"First, we shall actively resist wherever necessary and with all our resources, every attempt by Hitler to extend his Nazi domination to the western hemisphere, or to threaten it.

"We shall actively resist his every attempt to gain control of the seas.

"Second, from the point of view of strict naval and military necessity, we shall give every possible assistance to Britain and all who, with Britain, are resisting Hitlerism or its equivalent with forces of arms.

"Our patrols are helping now to insure delivery of the needed supplies to Britain . . .

"I say, the delivery of needed supplies to Britain is imperative. I say this can be done; it must be done; it will be done."

This was looked on as Mr. Roosevelt's reply to Germany's Grand Admiral Raeder who a few days ago called American patrols "aggressive" and said Nazi sea captains would be justified in using force to curb their "hostile action." Raeder also warned against convoys as an "open war act" to which Nazi ships would reply, if necessary.

BRITISH WARSHIPS

The cruiser dropped from sight by Monday morning when a Catalina flying boat picked up the fleeing Bismarck 550 miles west of Land's End, England.

Low-flying airplanes quickly took up a patrol off the Norwegian fjords to spot the Prinz Eugen if she had turned back there.

Aided By Planes.

Released from the cordon that caught the Bismarck, warships turned to the new hunt, aided by planes from the decks of the aircraft carriers Ark Royal and Victorious, which played an important part in harrying and crippling the Bismarck.

Observers said at least 140 planes from these two carriers alone would be available for the search. Thus the Ark Royal continued her role as a vengeful ghost for the Germans, who often have reported wrecking or sinking the 22,000-ton carrier. Reports that the new 23,000-ton Victorious was in action were the first accounts that she had been placed in active service.

British sources expressed belief the German ships left Bergen on a specific hunt for convoys carrying war supplies across the North Atlantic.

The Daily Telegraph commented meanwhile that with the Bismarck's sinking Germany was "left dependent on her sister ship Tirpitz, if that vessel is in service, for a battleship which could challenge our own."

The Daily Express said that "the Hood loss to us was grave but to the smaller Hun navy, loss of their biggest battleship is irreparable."

The Board of the Admiralty congratulated the fleet today on the sinking of the Bismarck and said that "had it not been for the gallantry, skill and devotion" of the Fleet Air Arm "our object might not have been achieved".

Mourn Loss of Ship.

Berlin, May 28 (AP).—The German people, mourning loss of the battleship Bismarck, were told today it was better to dare the risks of sea warfare in a fight to win than to wait in port.

Admiral Guenther Luetjens and the Bismarck's officers and crew all apparently died — so far as was known here.

The press took the line that the Bismarck was sunk by numerically-superior forces, and the Deutsche Allegmeine Zeitung declared:

"But even such superior forces would have been unable to defeat the Bismarck had it not been for the accidental effect of an aerial torpedo, damaging the ship's propeller and steering mechanism."

BRITISH AND GREEK

British troops are suffering "appalling exhaustion, both physically and mentally" as a result of continuous bombing, this informant declared, but he added that "no troops in the world could have stood up better than ours." He also paid tribute to the way the Greeks fighting beside the British forces had behaved under bombing.

So far as known, informed quarters said, the British command has not attempted to use parachutists to reinforce Crete's defenders.

Land Mostly At Malemi.

Considerable concern was expressed in these circles over failure of repeated allied counter-attacks to regain control of Malemi airport—where the Nazis have been landing most of their sky troops and which therefore is regarded as a key point in the battle for possession of the strategically-important Greek island.

Artillery bombardments and air attacks have done considerable damage to the airport, the British sources said, but it continues functioning and more Nazi troops are pouring in daily.

It is unlikely, it was said, that even the British reinforcements which Prime Minister Churchill announced yesterday had been landed in Crete are sufficient to offset the numerical advantage which the Nazis are believed to have obtained.

(Military sources in Berlin claimed last night that Nazi mountain troops were being rushed to Crete in transport planes to aid parachutists and that the battle for possession of the island was proceeding "according to plans".

(The Nazi propaganda and News Agency claimed Nazi bombers had scored six hits on a 12,000-ton British troop transport south of Crete and that two British cruisers and another warship had been damaged by bombs near the island.

No British Comment.

(There was no British comment on this latest claim. Previous Nazi claims against the Royal Navy have been greatly exaggerated.

(The Italian radio claimed in a broadcast heard in New York that Fascist warships had safely escorted two convoys carrying 70 shiploads of Axis men and supplies to Crete.

(British sources said yesterday the Royal Navy has blocked Axis attempts to land reinforcements and supplies by sea, although it was admitted that a few small enemy boats might reach the island.)

AT THE BELLE

"The Philadelphia Story"

If you want to laugh long, loud and often, take a tip and don't fail to see Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn and James Stewart in "The Philadelphia Story", the comedy of the year, which opened last night at the Belle theatre. It presents a dazzling new Hepburn as a comedienne of the first water, with versatile Grant and Stewart as her gay companions in a picture that is fresher, wittier and brighter than any of recent memory.

From the moment Grant pushes Miss Hepburn in the face and walks out to become her ex-husband, the film moves with fast paced, breezy action, punctuated at intervals with surprise laughs, because this is a picture that follows none of the familiar formulas.

The setting is a Philadelphia home of the socially elite, and Miss Hepburn plays a girl of high ideals who has no tolerance for human frailties, particularly in a husband. That's why she gets rid of Grant. He has few faults. When Miss Hepburn picks second husband, she chooses a stalwart man of the people, played to the hilt by John Howard. Grant, realizing that she is making a mistake, causes a sensation by returning for the wedding. He brings with him Stewart a reporter for a keyhole magazine, and Ruth Hussey, Stewart's girl friend. They proceed to make Miss Hepburn's life miserable, but she fights back until her own foot slips and she sees the light. It would be giving away a novel and clever plot to reveal which boy gets the girl.

There is no one top performance. The stars are perfectly cast and uniformally excellent, as are the fatured players. Roland Young gives his usual fine performance as Miss Hepburn's slightly daffy uncle, John Halliday and Mary Nash are fine as her parents and little Virginia Weidler shares the laughs as the younger sister, who hears, sees and says everything she shouldn't.

Adapted from Philip Barry's New York stage hit in which Miss Hepburn starred for fifty-two weeks on Broadway, the picture was brilliantly directed by George Cukor, who has a rare touch for comedy tempo.

"The Flight of Nazi Hess" — the war's greatest mystery and other world events will be shown in the Belle news of the day to be exhibited tonight only.

Robert Taylor who is co-starred with lovely Vivien Leigh in "Waterloo Bridge," the finest romantic-drama since "Smilin Thru," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre with the added laugh hit, "Who Killed Aunt Maggie?"

CHAPTER XXXIV

"Hello, you two," Tal greeted them gayly when he'd zig-zagged a trail toward them through the crowd. "Fancy catching you red-handed like this, Dale." He shook his head, mocking anger.

Flushing with a guilt more real than Tal knew, Devona and Dale both ducked behind laughter as Tal, turning to the pretty blonde girl hanging to his arm, said, brother is dating my best girl. "Can't turn my back when my own brother is dating my best girl. What do you do with guys like that?"

The pretty blonde, all big, blue eyes and ripe, red mouth, laughed charmingly. "Dance with them," she said, and calmly held out her arms to Dale.

"Right. Here, you lucky guy." Tal laid the girl's hand in Dale's. "This is Miss Gay Dorset—star of our show. And this——" turning he took Devona into his arms, "is my fiancee, Miss Devona Raebourne."

The two girls exchanged smiles as the music caught them into its swirling tide. She was really lovely looking, Devona thought as they moved apart. Nice smile, nice features, nice voice.

Then, anxious to make sure that it was a real gaiety in Tal's voice, she smiled up at him, teasing, "So this is the way you have conferences with your star! Just how much of that am I supposed to believe!"

Tal laughed, hugged her closer. "Every word. She's a honey, isn't she? She'll put the show over. She likes my dialogue, too."

"Why shouldn't she?" Devona demanded stoutly. "It's good dialogue."

"Yes—" more seriously, "I think it is. But she's tops, you know. In this musical show stuff. So she ought to know. She says I've got something, all right."

Nothing feigned about that enthusiasm, Devona noted silently. "I'm so glad, Tal. You deserve the best breaks."

"Tinks so?" He brushed a surreptitious kiss across the bridge of her nose. "Think I deserve a break like having you to love me, too?"

She Again Visits Vara

"Maybe that wasn't so much of a break, Tal," she said, more gravely than she'd intended.

"Suppose you leave that decision to me." He smiled. "I guess I know a sweetheart when I see one."

She tried to reflect some of the tenderness in that smile. It would be so easy to learn to love a man like Talbot Brasher. If only she hadn't had—the other kind of love.

But forgetting that other love wasn't simplified by her interview with Vara the next afternoon. Devona, making her daily visit, found Dale waiting outside Vara's door. Dale and the white-capped supervisor of the floor.

"Your mother has something on her mind, as we've told you," the busy nurse said, briskly. "We feel that she'll make more rapid recovery if she can get it said. I sent for Mr. Brasher because she mentions him so often. I think this has something to do with the two of you. You will be patient with her, won't you? She's not physically as ill as she is mentally. You understand?"

For an instant, Dale and Devona exchanged glances. "Yes," they murmured in unison.

"Good. You may go in, now."

Devona led the way into her mother's room.

"Devona, darling." Vara smiled at her from her heap of white pillows. And then, with a ghost of her old dramatic fire—"Dale." Both lines said as if to the twelfth row center.

"Yes, Mother?" Devona took the chair beside the bed. "How do you feel now?"

A Confession

Vara closed her eyes slowly, lay for a moment without answering. When she did, her voice was deep-toned, measured. "I'm a very sick old woman." Opening her eyes again, she looked at first one, then the other. "But before I die, I want to make a confession."

"You're not going to die," Devona began. But Vara gestured for silence.

"Please, listen. I've done you two a very great wrong." Again her eyes traveled slowly from one to the other. Obviously enjoying the drama, she was playing it in the grand manner.

Devona moved uncomfortably. Always the actress, Vara would act—even on her deathbed.

"I'm afraid I am too late to mend matters." Vara uncannily picked up the thread of Devona's thoughts. "But I did want you both to know that it was all my fault. I realize it only too well now that life has me down, punishing me for everything I've done."

"Please, Vara," Devona begged frantically. "It's no use talking like this. It's done and in the past——"

"But I want your forgiveness." darling. "I want to know that you understand and——"

"I understand," she said grimly, "and of course—I forgive. Now please, let's not talk about it any more."

"God bless you, darling. Now I can die—in peace."

The door behind them shut with a swish and a tall figure crossed toward the bed. "You're not going to die, Vara Vadne, and you know it."

George Barnard, older, a little grayer, a little grimmer than when she'd seen him last but the same abrupt, thin-lipped Barnard.

"George. Hello, darling." Vara murmured weakly, extended her hand to him.

Dale nodded. "Hello, Barnard."

News for Vara

Barnard grinned as they shook hands. Then, to Vara. I've got news that will make you glad to give up this deathbed stuff, Vara, my dear. A nice, fat contract for you to sign. Interested?"

Again, as if a curtain had lowered releasing her from a role, Vara came to life. "A contract!"

"That repertory company I told you about. You'll play all leads. Good money, too."

"You're sure?"

Barnard tapped his breast pocket. "Have it right here."

Not really surprised, Devona watched Vara's transformation. Snapping out of her Camille-like role of dying heartbreak Vara was herself again—ready to walk off this set, into another dressing room onto another stage. This play was over. Long live the play!

Barnard laid the long envelope into her hands. "Now do you believe it?"

"Yes. Of course," she reached for the bell cord. "Call a nurse. My street clothes, please. I have so much to do. Shopping and—Devona darling, be a sweet child and run along now. You and Dale. I'll talk to you again before we leave. And when do we leave, George?"

"A week, if you're able."

"Of course, I'm able." Her eyes blazed with their old fire. "Run along, dears. I'm busy."

"Yes. Goodbye and good luck, Vara," Devona said quietly.

Bit of the Actress

They escaped into the cold, impersonal safety of the corridor. Be a better mother! Not Vara. Devona smothered a little laugh that was a half sob. Vara would never be anything but an ambitious actress, sacrificing anything, everything, ruthlessly to the demands of her career. Frightened moments of regret, of self-pity—she'd have moods like that always. But only brief moods when the road ahead became obscure.

Slowly, Devona moved to the elevator, conscious that Dale beside her walked wrapped deep in his own thoughts. That Vara had lied to each of them, deliberately tossed aside their love merely because she wanted to and then—calmly—had expected their forgiveness! What irony. Her pretty confession, absolution for her own guilty conscience, and almost immediately, exciting new distraction, new worlds for her to conquer.

Vara—off again to new heights—had forgotten her remorse almost before she'd finished speaking of it! And Dale and Devona were left to face the havoc wrought by her selfishness. It wasn't fair. It wasn't just. Life had no right to——

"Well, at least that explains the crime—and the motive," Dale interrupted her thoughts grimly. "But it doesn't help much at that, does it?"

Devona shook her head. "No. It only makes—everything—more unbearable."

Dale nodded, pushed the button for the automatic lift.

Out in the bright April sunshine again, they found Tal waiting in Dale's car.

"Hello!" he called as they walked toward him. "Thought I'd catch you if I waited here. How's Vara?"

"Much better. In fact," Devona smiled ruefully, "on her way this minute to play repertory somewhere."

"Really? Barnard get her another contract?"

Dale nodded. "And snapped her out of this sick-bed lady stuff in a jiffy."

Tal grinned. "I thought that would probably do it. Gay Dorset put me wise to that repertory company. I'm glad Barnard landed the job for her. Everything's going to work out just right."

Tal Wants Quick Marriage

Dale slipped under the wheel while Tal put Devona into the front seat and crawled in beside her.

"I've got sailing orders for Friday next," Tal went on enthusiastically. "That gives us just the rest of this week. What about getting married about Friday morning? We can file intentions and have a real wedding now. You know—one of those little chapels somewhere and some music and a bunch of lilies-of-the-valley for you. You'd like that better than a Justice of the Peace in Reno, wouldn't you, Devona?"

Smiling, she nodded. "Yes—of course."

"And you, Dale, old man, you'll stand up with us, won't you?"

Oh, not that! Devona wanted to cry out! Not Dale, beside her at the altar, and yet not——

"Oh——" But she caught back her objection just in time. Of course, Dale would be best man. Why not!

Her heart stood still as she heard Dale say, his voice strangely husky. "Why sure—I'd be—glad to."

Little Benny's Note Book

There was a leek down our cellar, and the pumber came while we were eating breakfist, pop saying, I think I'll go down there and see what he's up to.

Now Willyum you better leave him to his own devices, you know a watched pot never boils, ma said, and pop said, If he's not boiling I wont stay down.

And he went down the cellar and so did I, and the plummer was melting some sodder in his sodder melter pop saying, This must be fassinating work, that's a way it's always appealed to me. If I'd been left to myself when I was a boy I think I'd be a plummer now, he said.

Well, you might of done worse, but I guess you did better, the plummer said. It's a funny thing about life, I mean that's a way it is, a fellow always has a idea he ought to be doing what the other fellow's doing. Now take me. I always thought I'd never be happy unless I was earning my living playing a harmonica, and I still think so. Mouth organs is what most people call them, but they're really harmonicas. I believe I've got one with me right now, he said.

Wich he had, in his overhalls pocket, and he took it out and sat down on the floor against the coal bin and started to play a tune, sounding great, and pop said, Well maybe you've missed your vocation at that.

I'll play you another one, the plumber said.

Wich he did, and pop said, still, I understand the plumming game isn't so bad. How much do you make an hour? he said, and the plummer said, Well in this town we only get a doller and 19 cents an hour.

Are you getting a doller and 19 cents an hour right now? pop said, and the plummer said, Every minute.

Yee gods, well dont let men interrupt you, pop said.

And he hurry up went up again, making me go with him.

TORCH STARTS ITS JOURNEY TO CHURCHILL

Dedicated on its send-off amid full military honors, Canada's Victory Torch, symbolic of the nation's war effort, is shown here as Premier Patullo, of British Columbia, handed the Torch to its honor guard following an impressive ceremony at Victoria, British Columbia, on Empire Day. The Torch, engraved on its base with the words: "Part of the tools—Canada's Victory Loan, 1941," will be flown across the Dominion in a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber and thence overseas to Great Britain where it will be presented to Prime Minister Churchill. Enroute it will stop at many Canadian cities to highlight local Victory Loan campaigns.

Picton and District

Picton, May 28 —(Special)— When the Victory Loan campaign opens on Monday next, Prince Edward's excellent organization, supported by leading citizens will swing into action, and they hope to have this county one of the first to reach its objective.

The organization was completed on Tuesday and the details of the many features are now being planned. The Belleville Boy's Band is to visit Picton Saturday evening and during their concert there is to be a ceremony in connection with the raising of the honor flag and the thermometer, which will record the sales of bonds.

During next week, meetings are to be held throughout the county with sound pictures and talks by members of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Two big rallies are planned in Picton with outstanding speakers.

During the campaign there will be several parades, contests with prizes for essays, decoration and best results by salesmen, dances and band concerts. On June 11, the R.C.A.F. band of Trenton is to head a parade of airmen from Mountain View and Picton. On Sunday, June 8, all churches will hold Victory Loan and Day of Prayer services, while that afternoon there will be a parade with an open air ceremony at Memorial Park.

The officials of the organization are as follows:—Honorary Chairman, Judge E. H. McLean, Picton; Chairman, Dr. S. H. Roblin, Picton; Vice-Chairman, J. M. Hartwick, Wellington; Secretary, R. B. Small.

Members of Executive Committee:—James Hepburn, M.L.A.; S. P. Dodds,; Prof. Iva Martin; Arthur Davis; W. H. Benson; Howard Leavens; Amos MacDonald; Howard Weese; Warden D. O. Reynolds; P. H. Wills; Group Captain C. H. Keith, R.A.F.; Group Captain F. G. Wait, R.C.A.F.; Ross Robblin; Herbert Wattam; Thomas Ackerman.

Trenton and District

Trenton, May 28 —The Grey and Simcoe Foresters, nearly 1,000 strong marched into Trenton yesterday afternoon, after their eight day hike from Exhibition Park at Toronto, to this town. The battalion cobered approximately 115 milees from To- approximately 115 miles from Today.

Still smiling and appearing cheerful the soldiers march smartly through the town after being refreshed by tea and drinks given to the soldiers by the "Iron Duke," which met the regiment one mile west of here.

The battalion was to rest at Hanna Park, where ladies' organizations had set up tables to distribute pies, doughnuts and soft drinks to the soldiers but the lack of time necessitated that the soldiers march straight to the station, where they embarked for another centre.

The pies and other refreshments were rushed to the station and distributed among the soldiers. Hundreds of pies, baked by the women of Trenton were distributed during the late afternoon, under the supervision of Capt. F. B. Hewitt of the Salvation Army.

Following a short rest the troops embarked on two special trains, for their new training centre.

Breeders Submit Proposal to End Racing Boycott

Toronto May 28 — (CP) — The Thoroughbred Breeders' Association, whose boycott of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association forced cancellation of the spring meet at Thorncliffe Park this week, has submitted a proposal to end the dispute between the two bodies, it was announced today after a meeting of the two associations with government officials at Queen's Park.

Details of the proposal were not announced but it was said that it meets with the approval of the Ontario Government and it is up to the I.C.R.A. whether they will accept and end the dispute.

Fred S. Orpen, representing the Orpen interests which run Dufferin and Long Branch race tracks, conferred with Premier Hepburn apart from the general conference this morning. Details of proposals Orpen was said to have submitted to Mr. Hepburn were not announced. Neither Orpen nor the Premier attended the general conference.

The I.C.R.A.'s refusal to recognize Ryland New of Oakville, Ont., as a T.B.A. representative on the I.C.R.A. led to a boycott of I.C.R.A. tracks by the breeders and the cancellation of the Thorncliffe racing meet this week.

The Government was represented by Attorney General Gordon Conant and Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon at this morning's meeting with George Hardy, R. W. Cowie and J. W. Risewood and T. J. Agar representing the breeders and A. E. Dyment, President, James Heffering and F. W. Fisher, the I.C.R.A.

Unconfirmed Claim From Vichy Says Town of Sfax Bombed

Vichy, France, May 28 (AP)—Vichy authorities claimed tonight a British air unit bombed the town of Sfax, Tunisia, this morning. (British comment was not immediately available.)

The port town is on the Mediterranean coast about 715 miles south of Tunis and is on a railway running from Tunis toward the frontier of Italian Libya. It has a population of 40,000.

Urges War Effort Be Intensified

Rev. Henry Cotton, Retiring President, Addresses Hamilton Conference

Hamilton, May 28.—(CP)—A greater war effort on the part of Canadians was urged at this morning's session of the 17th annual meeting of the Hamilton Conference of the United Church of Canada by the retiring president of the Conference, Rev. Henry Cotton, who is at present serving as chaplain with the Royal Canadian Air Force. He said some people in Canada did not realise a war was underway.

The speaker, who was a prisoner of war in Germany during the last war told of the terrible cruelty which the Germans meted out to the women of occupied countries whom he said "were herded like slaves into the fields of Germany to till the soil".

"We all realise or should realise", he said, "that Hitler is cut to enslave the rest of the world. I have no illusions whatever about German ruthlessness. There are too many who say that a German victory will mean nothing to the people of this continent. Those people must wake up. Canada must wake up."

The Rev. E. W. Brearley, Simcoe, former minister of Pilgrim United Church in Hamilton was elected president of the Hamilton Conference for the coming year and took over the chairmanship of the meeting immediately.

The reports showed money raised for all purposes in the conference last year totalled $1,231,755, a decrease of $3,152 over the year previous. There are 41,022 families in the conference now, with a total membership of 54,462 in the 376 Sunday Schools. The value of church buildings is $8,510,710. Liabilities on congregations has decreased during the past year.

Nazis Go Down Like 'Wheat in Wind' Before The Marines

London, May 28.—(CP)—A group of German soldiers "went down like wheat in the wind" before a hand-to-hand attack made by Royal Marines during the fighting in Crete, a war correspondent's account, broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation, said today. "It was evident that the Germans had never before encountered such tough fighting", the correspondent's account said.

The Marines wiped out the Germans at the point of the bayonet, with Anzac machine gunners in support. . ...

Axis Permits Vichy To Build Up Airforce For Empire Defence

Vichy, France, May 28 (AP) — The Petain government said today Germany and Italy have relaxed armistice regulations to allow Vichy to build up a continental air force for "defence of its Empire."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Romance of the Rio Grande"

That lovable rogue, O. Henry's Cisco Kid, is back again in another of his exciting adventures—and this time there's twice the intrigue as Cisco meets his "double." It happens in "Romance of the Rio Grande," the 20th Century-Fox picture which opens next at the Capitol Theatre with Cesar Romero again seen as the romantic Cisco.

"Romance of the Rio Grande" is loaded with action. Dashing, colorful and capable Cisco and his ever-present side-kick Gordito, again portrayed by Chris-Pin Martin, interrupt a stage-coach hold-up, only to find one of the victims is an exact double for Cisco.

Deciding to take the place of his injured counterpart, Cisco appropriates his clothes and rides to meet his "relatives" at one of the richest ranchos north of the Rio. There he finds that a cousin, with the assistance of a gang of vaqueros, plans to do him out of his acquired inheritance. How Cisco outwits these schemers makes for exciting screen entertainment.

Feminine pulchritude is ably represented in "Romance of the Rio Grande" by lovely Patricia Morison and luscious Lynne Roberts.

"Knockout"

"Knockout," an exciting film of the prize ring with a novel twist starts next at the Capitol along with "Romance of the Rio Grande." The Warner Bros. picture stars Arthur Kennedy, as a pug who could handle himself admirably in the ring but not out of it. Charming Olympe Bradna has the leading feminine role as Kennedy's devoted wife.

The same program includes the Latest News, the seventh chapter of Zane Grey's "King of the Royal Mounted" and an exciting and different short subject, 'Men of Lightship 61."

THE WAR TODAY

(Don Gilbert)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

President Roosevelt's declaration on foreign policy means the United States will go to war if necessary to get the goods to Britain.

That was the essential implication of the President's promise that control of the seas will be kept out of totalitarian control. On Maritime freedom, he said, depends the security of the United States and the entire western hemisphere.

At the same time Mr. Roosevelt let it be known that he belongs to the school of thought backing sea power as the key to victory. Without it, he said, the Germans cannot win, and added: "We shall actively resist his (Hitler's) every attempt to gain control of the seas".

The reaction from Berlin and Rome was about as expected, but Tokyo dispatches reflected the hope of the Japanese business world that Japanese trade will not be ruined by involvement on the side of the Axis. Prices on the Tokyo stock exchange went up briskly on the strength of Mr. Roosevelt's lack of emphasis on Japan.

The President's approach to the question of war or peace differed strikingly from that of President Wilson 25 years ago, when the emphasis was on the crusade to "make the world safe for democracy". Last night it was the danger of Nazism to the United States itself that was repeatedly stressed; in helping Britain the United States was merely acting for its own preservation.

More light on the problem of sea power in its relation to air power, meanwhile, came from the great naval peration which resulted in the destruction of the German battleship Bismarck. This new dreadnought was designed to give it a maximum of protection from air attack, but it was a development of British naval aviation that was instrumental in bringing it to account.

The fleet air arm in crippling the Bismarck proved itself the leading exponent of the aerial torpedo and showed the effectiveness of this weapon against a first class battleship in action.

Editorial Comment on Speech Delivered By The President

New York, May 28—(AP)—Following is representative editorial comment in United States newspapers on President Roosevelt's address last night:

NEW YORK TIMES, (IND.-DEM.) — "President Roosevelt struck a mighty blow last night for freedom. In his address that will take its place among the great state papers of this country he summoned the American people to resolve their doubts and dedicate themselves to action. . . . The declaration of a state of unlimited national emergency will cut a short way through problems which have seemed insoluble."

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER, (IND.-DEM.): "This newspaper is content to take the President at his word and to believe he means precisely what he says when he tells the nation American materials will be delivered to Britain in increasing quantities and that our armed forces will be used when and if they are necessary to insure that results."

NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE, (IND.-REP.): "The President's address last night was a masterly statement of the actual case now actually before the American people. . . . It is the call to all citizens to make the sacrifices which action demands. . . To this the American people can give its unequivocal assent. . . The President has laid down the broad and solid foundations on which action may and should be taken. The action now must follow."

BOSTON HERALD (R)—"That the message will tend to make active American participation in the war more probable is obvious, even if there is no formal declaration from Washington or Berlin. Should the specified provocation be given, the U.S. will act promptly and vigorously."

BOSTON POST (IND.)—"It is safe to say that Mr. Roosevelt succeeding in doing what most people considered the impossible—he declared the national emergency without declaring war . . . The strongest speech that an American president could make short of a declaration of war."

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE (IND.-R)—"Mr. President; You have said it all. You have said it very well. You have said it with deep conviction . . . we can add nothing to what you have said. Your meaning is plain and we would not modify one bit of it.'

NASHVILLE, TENN., TENNESSEAN (IND. DEM)—"It is inspiring to hear a democratic leader tell Adolf Hitler that action has been taken before it is too late; that there is no thought of defeatism; that the Nazis are judged by their deeds instead of by their perjured words."

TULSA WORLD (IND. DEM)—"It is no use now to talk about the sentiment of the country being for or against war . . . He spoke for the nation, and the answer is war, whenever and wherever Hitler wants it."

DALLAS MORNING NEWS (IND. DEM)—"Stripped of other verbiage, Mr. Roosevelt declared war."

BRITISH CHEERED BY FDR'S SPEECH

London Press Says the President Warns Nazis the U.S. Will Go to War if Necessary to Maintain Freedom of Seas

London, May 28 (CP)—The Evening Standard said today President Roosevelt's speech last night "amounted to an iron pact between Allies."

Authoritative circles said that for the moment there would be no official comment on the address and it was hinted that Prime Minister Churchill himself might be the spokesman when official comment is made, possibly later today.

Groups which gathered in London hotels early today to hear the broadcast cheered the President's statement that the United States would take whatever steps were necessary to ensure safe delivery of war supplies to Britain.

They cheered again when he said that the United States "will not hesitate to use armed force to repel attack."

"He's with us all the way—it means we're going to lick Hitler even sooner than we expected," said one listener.

The address was reported in late editions of London morning papers, but because of the hour at which the President spoke—4:40 a.m. London time—the majority carried only short excerpts, and editorial comment was lacking.

All London's evening newspapers splashed accounts of the President's speech across their front pages under black headlines such as "Dictator Powers for F.D.R.", "Call to the U.S. People" and "Final Warning."

The Evening Standard editorial declared Mr. Roosevelt had answered the German warning against the use of convoys by proclaming the freedom of the seas "in full face of the Nazi assault,' and asserted: "The President's defiance is absolute."

The Evening News said the burden of the President's words to the Nazis were: "We will buttress the bastion of democracy, which is Britain, by war if necessary."

Quints Celebrate Seventh Birthday Without Dr. Dafoe

Callander, Ont., May 28 (CP)—The Dionne quintuplets bounded out of bed today, eager to begin the celebration of their seventh birthday, but the day started with a deeper note for the five little girls as they attended Pontifical high mass.

Bishop Leo Nelligan of Pembroke celebrated the mass. The children attend Corbeil parish church which is in the Pembroke diocese.

The only regret the five little girls had on their big day was that Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe was not able to be present at the celebration for the first time. The grey-haired doctor who brought them into the world in a little farm house near here seven years ago is still convalescing in Toronto after a recent operation.

Next to the cutting of their huge birthday cake with its seven candles the big thrill for the quints was the donning of their brownie uniforms for the first time.

The birthday party itself was strictly a family affair, attended only by their parents, Oliva and Elzire Dionne, their brothers and sisters, and their grandfathers.

Before the quints go to bed tonight they will broadcast over the air.

ABLE SEAMAN READS OWN DEATH NOTICE

Brisbane, May 28 (AP)—Able seaman Hugh Charles Sweeney of H.M.A.S. Hobart read his own death notices today on returning home from the Middle East battle front.

Three months ago he and two companions were reported killed in action in valiant defence of a gun position against the Italians in Berbera, British Somaliland. Ab. Sweeney's mother was informed of her son's death and received condolences from the King and from the officers and men of the Hobart. The seaman was rescued later during a British advance in the same area.

"AMBERGRIS" JUST BLUBBER

Jersey City, N.J., May 28—(AP)—A possible fortune in ambergris turned into a mass of blubber when perfumers said today representative samples of 14 barrels fished up by the American export liner Siboney did not contain the $20-an-ounce whale secretion used in perfume manufacture.

LAY FOUNDATIONS OF NEW ORDER

Canada and U.S. Build on 'Mutual Aid, Friendship and Good Will,' Says Trade Commissioner

New York, May 28 —(CP)— Canada and the United States are laying the "enduring" foundations of a new order in the New World based on "mutual aid, friendship and good will," Douglas S. Cole, Canadian Trade Commissioner in New York, said today.

In an address prepared for delivery before a Canadian session of the Central New York Kiwanis Club, Mr. Cole reviewed the Hyde Park agreement of April 21 between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister MacKenzie King and noted that Canada will be able to contribute to the United States defence program through supplying certain ammunition, aluminum, mechanical transport and other materials.

In a review of Canada's war effort, Mr. Cole said there already are three Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons in Britain, and that under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada 86 schools are being provided with an output of 25,000 air and ground men a year.

"I am very proud to tell you that there are more than 1,100 United States citizens enlisted in the R.C.A.F. and at one school there were so many Californians that the boys jokingly refer to the ' Royal Californian Air Force'."

Of the Canadian navy, Mr. Cole said "it is a proud record to have already convoyed safely 3,700 vessels to Great Britain with a tonnage of more than 22,000,000 plus the patrolling of more than 1,000 miles of coastline on collaboration with United States personnel".

Ottawa Leaders Praise Address Of The President

Ottawa, May 28 (CP)—President Roosevelt's broadcast address to the world echoed on Parliament Hill today as members of the House of Commons and Senate discussed the speech which they had heard on radio sets in their offices or homes.

Within a few hours of the time Mr. Roosevelt had proclaimed the existence of an "unlimited national emergency," and declared the United States would assure safe delivery of supplies in Britain and "actively resist" any effort by Hitler to gain control of the seas, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and leaders of all Opposition Parties had issued statements praising the speech and interpreting it from the Canadian viewpoints.

Brief Excerpts

Here are brief excerpts from the statements:—

Mr. King: "The President proposes to see that the freedom of the seas is maintained by the delivery of munitions and foodstuffs to Britain and by all necessary measures which will ensure delivery. The life-line now strteches from America to Britain."

Conservative House Leader Hanson: "Having declared a state of national emergency the United States, under its great champion of freedom, will bring to the cause of Britain increased aid and resolution to victory."

Mr. King, in his 350-word statement, said Mr. Roosevelt's speech made it perfectly plain that the United States Government "regards the issue of the present war as none other than world conquest and world domination by Hitlerism."

A Clear Declaration

"While it cannot be said that the President's statement was a declaration of war by the United States," he said, "the statement was a clear declaration by the President of the citizens of the United States that war has approached the brink of the Western Hemisphere free from the stranglehold of Hitler the declaration of a national emergency by the United States has become necessary.

"The speech moreover was a clear declaration by the President that the United States has not only desided to reassert but is determined to maintain the freedom of the seas......"

Mr. Hanson said President Roosevelt's "historic speech" would bring great comfort to all British peoples.

"In some respects he was not as specific as I had hoped," the Conservative House Leader said, "but the President has taken a long step in the right direction."

CRETE DEFENDERS SLOWLY GIVING GROUND

Nazis Hold Canea And Suda Bay Says Cairo Command

British Empire Forces Rushed to Points East of Suda Bay

BITTER FIGHTING

Cairo, Egypt, May 29.— (AP)—German air-borne troops in Crete, heavily reinforced, have pushed the defenders back from Canea, occupying the Island's wrecked capital as well as Suda Bay and most of the shore around it, it was conceded in British military quarters here today.

The British Empire forces, mostly New Zealanders, had been pushed to points east of Suda Bay.

Desperate hand-to-hand fighting is continuing with heavy casualties on both sides, it was said.

(The Germans claimed their forces had captured Suda Bay, driven to Almyro Bay, on which Retimo is situated, to the east and had occupied Heraclean (Candia), some 55 miles still farther east from Suda Bay.)

The Middle East Command said the Germans were continuing dive-bombing attacks on an extensive scale.

Despite the Axis advance, the British authorities said the actual territory in German hands is but a small fraction of the Island area, consisting mainly of a strip along the coast from Malemi Airdrome southwest of Canea, to a new line east of Suda Bay.

For the most part, the Germans were reported being held in the coastal plain. Although Alpine troops were said to be among the advancing forces they were declared to have made little headway into the steep hills which offer good defensive positions.

London, May 29 (CP)—The defenders of the Island of Crete, battered continuously by Nazi dive bombers, gave ground slowly today before constantly-reinforced German troops attacking on a 10-mile front in a drive aimed at strategic Suda Bay.

Concern was heightened here by lack of official information this morning on the exact status of the situation around Suda Bay, which authoritatives sources blamed on poor communications.

(A communications failure might be explained by German press claims that Nazi troops now are in possession of Suda Bay.)

Nazi reports that the attackers already had captured the island capital of Canea were without official confirmation here, but informed sources acknowledged the claim might be true.

There has been a "serious deterioration" in the situation during the past 24 hours, these sources said, and the position of the defenders is becoming increasingly grave.

Capture of Suda Bay—the best harbor on the island—would give the Nazis a bridgehead for landing sea-borne reinforcements which probably would be the deciding factor in the battle which raged today in its tenth day.

Landed by Air

Most of the German troops thus far engaged in the battle have been landed by air, and more were said to be dropping from the skies daily in big transport planes operating from bases on the Greek mainland.

VICHY TO PROTEST BRITISH BOMBING OF FRENCH PORT

Protest Will be Lodged With U.S. for Transmission to British Gov't.

SFAK ATTACKED

Vichy, May 29—(AP)—The Vichy government announced today it will protest the bombing of the French North African port of Sfax yesterday by British aircraft.

(Dispatches yesterday indicated the British bombers went after an Italian convoy, bound for Libya, which took refuge in Sfax when sighted by British forces.)

The protest will be lodged with the United States Department of State for transmission to the British government, the announcement said.

EXTENSIVE RAIDS OVER BRITAIN

Considerable Damage Reported at Southeast Coast Town — Liverpool Also Hit

London, May 29 (CP)—Weather vagaries aided the Germans and handicapped the Royal Air Force in aerial offensives last night and the British Isles were strafed by the Germans with a severity unequalled since May 17.

Nazi bombers favored by improved flying conditions struck at towns of the northwest, east and southeast England and the southeast coast of Northern Ireland while a small force of the British Bomber Command raided objectives of northwest Germany in spite of what the Air Ministry called "bad weather."

A communique announced the loss of four British planes in all operations yesterday; said one raider was shot down over England. Other sources reported destruction of one German fighter over the French coast.

In coastal operations yesterday, the Air Ministry said, a small Axis supply ship was damaged by bombers.

A southeast England coast town suffered extensive damage and a number of casualties in the night raids. Five bodies, including those of the mayor and his wife, were recovered from wrecked buildings.

The Liverpool area, recently a principal target for the Nazis when it was apparently on a one-port-a-night schedule, was bombed. Few casualties were reported.

It was the first time since May 17, when an estimated 100 raiders bombed the industrial midlands heavily, that the Germans flew in force against the Isles.

At least two Nazi planes were shot down, one bomber over England and a fighter over the French coast.

FDR CLOSE-LIPPED ON FUTURE PLANS TO HELP BRITAIN

President Disclaims Any Intention of Changing Or Repealing Neutrality Act

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 29 (CP)—The President of the United States adopted a close-mouthed strategy today on future plans for delivering goods and munitions to Britain. His method of delivery, however, does not include the use of American merchant ships.

President Roosevelt did nothing to stamp out conjecture on delivery means at his special press conferstated previously that technicians of the United States army and navy are devising new safeguards.

However, Chairman Robert R. Reynolds of the Senate military committee told newsmen that after digesting Mr. Roosevelt's fireside speech of Tuesday night he looked for "full convoys of some description."

No Change in Neutrality Act

At the press meeting, the President disclaimed any intention of seeking change or repeal of the Neutrality Act at the present time. He contended it in no way infringed on the principle of freedom of the seas, which he formally reasserted for the United States in his world-wide broadcast.

By ruling out action on the Neutrality Law, the President eliminated the possibility of American merchant ships being used to carry cargoes through the present combat zones. However, this caused one official to recall Mr. Roosevelt's statements in the past that the combat zone quarantine did not apply to U.S. naval vessels, which were free to go wherever their missions took them.

No Executive Orders

Mr. Roosevelt, touching on another subject of considerable speculation, also told reporters yesterday he contemplated no executive orders at present to invoke any of the numerous broad powers conferred on him by the proclamation of an unlimited national emergency. This tended to confirm authoritative reports that the President's purpose was to unify the country.

Nevertheless, proclamation of a full emergency gave rise to belief in army circles today that an indefinite extension of active service was inevitable for 291,000 National Guardsmen now in training.

Couple Escape Drowning

Kingston, Ont., May 29 —(CP)—FO. A. R. Povey of the R.A.F. stationed at Norman Rogers Airdrome, and Mrs. Povey, had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday afternoon when their rowboat filled with water while fishing on a lake north of the village of Verona, about 30 miles north of here.

Great anxiety was felt for the safety of the young couple when they did not return to the city last evening, due to the fact that there was a great storm on the lakes. Provincial and city police were notified shortly after midnight last night that the young couple had been absent for over 12 hours.

Nazi Air Raiders Machine-Gun Crete Civilians Including Children

London, May 29.— (CP)—Prime Minister Emmanuel Tsouderos of Greece, now somewhere in the Middle East, informed his legation in London today that German bombers had so hammered the Crete cities of Canea, Heraclean (Candia) and Retimo that there was "not one stone left standing".

Tsouderos said the German raiders "ruthlessly machine-gunned" the civilian population, including children.

Raging fires, he declared, completed the work of destruction started by high explosives.

The Greek leader's message, issued at the Ministry of Information, said:—

"German air raids have been carried out with unparalleled ferocity. The principal towns—Canea, Heraclean and Retimo—were literally plowed up by bombing, which was carried out with mathematical precision laterally and diagonally, so that eventually there was not one stone left standing.

"People trying to get out of their primitive shelters, particularly children, were ruthlessly machine-gunned. Raging fires completed the work of destruction. Hospitals, wounded, et cetera, were of course, not excluded in the general catastrophe".

United States to Train 8,000 Royal Air Force Flyers for Great Britain

Washington, May 29 (AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson disclosed today that a far-reaching undertaking to train 8,000 Royal Air Force flyers in the United States would start June 7.

The first class of 550 students, all from the British Isles, is to begin instruction on that date, followed by new groups at five-week intervals.

Stimson told reporters the program might be enlarged later. He asserted "it can be done without interfering at all" with the Army Air Corps' own undertaking to accelerate the training of American pilots to 30,000 a year.

He explained that pilot training in this country was far ahead of the deliveries of new military planes.

Both Air Corps and civilian schools will be used to train the R.A.F. pilots from Britain and the empire. The War Department explained that 4,000 would be trained annually as fighter and bomber pilots in seven civilian and six army schools.

A second group of 3,000 will be trained annually under a British course of instruction at schools yet to be selected. A third group of approximately 1,000 will be trained annually as aerial navigators.

HANSON URGES CARE IN TAXATION POLICY OF CANADA

Express Belief Capitalism Purged of Many "Evils" Will Prevail

OPPOSES MOTION

By FRANK FLAHERTY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 29—(CP)—Conservative House Leader Hanson, expressing belief that Canada after the war will adhere to the capitalistic system purged of many of its present "evils," pleaded with the Government in the House of Commons last night not to impose a taxation system which would reduce capital wealth and discourage individual initiative.

Mr. Hanson spoke just before the new Federal Succession Duties Bill received second reading. He was opposed to it and in his stand was supported by King Hazen (Con. Saint John-Albert) and John Blackmore, New Democracy leader.

Mr. Hanson's discourse on capitalism followed one of the liveliest incidents of the session when Maj. Alan Cockeram (Con. York South) raised the question of the right of a member of parliament who is also a soldier to discuss public issues pertaining to the army.

Wearing the uniform of the Irish Regiment of Canada which he commanded in peacetime and in which he now serves as second in command, Maj. Cockeram protested against a letter he had received from Defence Minister Ralston, commenting on a speech Maj. Cockeram made at a meeting in York South constituency. He said it amounted to an ultimatum to "resign my commission or keep quiet."

"As a member of parliament responsible to the people of the country and my riding I believed it was my right and duty to comment on the situation as I appreciated it," he told the House.

Churchill And King To Broadcast Sunday

Ottawa, May 29.—(CP)—Arrangements have been completed whereby Prime Minister Churchill, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Justice Minister Lapointe will participate in a thirty-minute program to be broadcast next Sunday starting at 10 p.m. (E.D.T.) over English and French networks of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Campaign headquarters for the $600,000,000 Victory Loan, 1941, opening next Monday, said the broadcast will begin with an address by Mr King, speaking on behalf of the people of Canada to the people of Britain and to Mr. Churchill. He will emphasize in his talk that the Canadian people are solidly behind Britain in her heroic struggle for democracy.

Mr. Churchill will reply, in both English and French, on behalf of the British people.

Mr. Lapointe also will speak in both languages.

HEPBURN RESISTS NEW FEDERAL TAX ON BOND INTEREST

Premier Says Cabinet Wants to Maintain Provincial Credit and Goodwill in U. S.

SENDS TELEGRAM

Toronto, May 29—(CP) — Premier Mitchell Hepburn wired Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night that the Ontario Government considers the Federal budget proposal of a 15 per cent tax on interest paid non-resident holders of provincial bonds payable in Canadian funds "is without legal authority and it will be resisted by every lawful means available to the Province of Ontario."

Premier Hepburn's 2,200 word telegram, released following a special cabinet conference at Queen's Park here, declared the Ontario Government would "consult and co-operate with American and other bondholders affected on measures to be taken and machinery to be set up to ensure payment in full to them of interest in fulfilment of the Province's contractual obligations.

"We intend to do everything possible to prevent this unjust discrimination and to maintain provincial credit and good will south of the border."

To reporters the Premier said after the cabinet session: "We will not give up our fiscal independence. If we give up our legal sources of taxation for a will-o'-the wisp, ultimately the services carried by the province will be placed back against real property. Even though there is some temporary adjustments which I know will not last, we are heading for the day when all costs of services will have to be borne by real property."

Power Emergency Foreseen in U. S.

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Foreseeing a United States power emergency—"perhaps the most serious in history," T. R. Tate of the Federal Power Commission revealed today that a study is being made of means for diverting electricity from civilian to industrial purposes, to assure uninterrupted production of defence weapons.

Under the "unlimited emergency" proclaimed Tuesday night, President Roosevelt has absolute sway over the nation's power facilities.

Tate, director of the National Defence power staff in the Power commission, predicted that "if we are going to double airplane production, quadruple tank production, treble powder, small arms ammunition and rifle production, and multiply output of machine guns and other minerals, then by the end of 1941 the power situation will be critical indeed."

End of 1941 Will See Night Bombing Defeated

Canberra, Australia, May 29 (CP)—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies today predicted the end of 1941 would see night bombing defeated and the battle of the Atlantic won.

DESTROYER SUNK AFTER RESCUING 100 OFF BISMARCK

British Report Loss Of 1,850-ton Vessel By Nazi Aircraft

46 BRITONS MISSING

London, May 29—(CP) — More than 100 officers and men of the German battleship Bismarck were picked up after she was sunk Tuesday morning, and a subsequent attack by German aircraft then sank the British destroyer Mashona, the Admiralty announced today.

One officer and 45 men are missing from the Mashona, the admiralty said.

The Mashona was a 1,850-ton vessel of the tribal class and carried a normal complement of 240

The admiralty disclosed that on the night before the 35,000-ton Bismarck was sunk her steering gear was put out of operation and her speed greatly reduced by torpedo attacks by naval aircraft and destroyer action.

Both her main and secondary armament remained effective, however and the commander-in-chief of the home fleet, Admiral Sir John Tovey, intended to close in on the Bismarck at dawn and sink her by gunfire from the battleships King George V. and Rodney.

Bad visibility prevented this, however, and it was not until 9 a.m. that the battleships opened fire and silenced the Bismarck's guns. The cruiser Dorsetshire then was ordered to sink the enemy vessel with torpedoes.

MAX SCHMELING REPORTED KILLED

New Zealand Driver Says Former Heavyweight Champion Shot

Cairo, Egypt, May 29 (AP)—Max Schmeling, former world champion heavyweight boxer, has been killed while trying to escape from British Imperial Forces which captured him in the German invasion of Crete, a New Zealand ambulance driver witness declared today.

Returning to Egypt, the ambulance driver said:

"Early in the battle of Crete, a husky German soldier was captured, slightly wounded.

"Speaking English with a strong American accent, he said he was Schmeling and his papers bore that name. He was truculent and surly.

"After talking with him at length, our officers were convinced he was Schmeling.

"Later in the day he was being taken to a field hospital by our ambulance corps when more German parachutists descended on top of us and a dog fight opened.

"Schmeling grabbed a rifle from one of our soldiers who had been wounded and went into action like a wild bull.

"Before he did any damage, however, someone let him have it, and that was the end of Max."

The ambulance driver said he did not know whether Schmeling arrived in Crete by parachute, plane or glider, but German officials had said previously that he went there as a parachute trooper.

Will Design Terms To Prevent Nazi Misdeeds in World

"Lasting Settlement And Internal Peace Of the Continent as A Whole Our Only Aim" Says Eden

PRAISES ROOSEVELT

London, May 29— (CP) — Foreign Secretary Eden in his first comprehensive statement on Britain's war aims, declared today that "our political and military terms of peace will be designed to prevent a repetition of Germany's misdeeds".

Mr. Eden said that "under the system of free economic co-operation, Germany must play a part. But here I draw a firm distinction.

"We must never forget that Germany is the worst master Europe has yet known. Five times in the last century she has violated the peace. She must never be in a position to play that role again".

Mr. Eden, addressing a London audience, termed President Roosevelt's speech Tuesday night "a momentous world event" because, "by his words, the President has given resolute expression to the fixed determination of the most powerful nation on earth".

He asserted that "a lasting settlement and internal peace of the continent as a whole is our only aim".

"It is obvious", the Foreign Secretary said, "that we have no motive of self-interest prompting us to economic exploitation either of Germany or of the rest of Europe.

"This is not what we want nor what we could perform . . . .

"The fact that at the bottom of his heart every combatant knows this is the ultimate source of our strength. To every neutral satellite or conquered country it is obvious our victory is, for the most fundamental and unalterable reasons, to their plain advantage.

"Only our victory can restore both to Europe and to the world that freedom which is our heritage for centuries of Christian civilization and that security which alone can make possible the betterment of man's lot upon earth".

He said the period between wars showed "no escape can be found from the curse which has been lying in Europe, except by creating and preserving economy health in every country . . . .

"We can not now foresee when the end will come. But it is the nature of a machine so rigid as the German to break suddenly and with little warning. When it comes the needs of succor to European peoples will be urgent".

Mr. Eden said the President "described with incomparable breadth of vision the scope of the struggle in which we are engaged."

"He defined the settled policy of his country in terms which are as vigorously encouraging to us as they must be disheartening to the enemy," the Foreign Secretary declared.

"To give effect to this policy the President has decreed a state of unlimited national emergency in the United States.

"For our part, we have listened with hearts full of thankfulness to the President's determination that the cause of freedom can and will prevail."

Ickes Advocates 'D. S.' Time in U.S., Hints 'Gasless Sundays' May Come

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Interior Secretary Harold Ickes today advocated daylight saving in the United States on a nationwide scale and suggested the country may have to resort to restricted use of electricity and institute "gasless Sundays" to meet shortages of power and oil.

The statement came as an official of the Federal Power Commission foresaw a power emergency, "perhaps the most serious in history" and revealed studies were being made on means of diverting power from civilian to industrial uses, to prevent interruption of defence production.

Daylight saving Ickes said, could be instituted by an act of Congress, to save substantial amounts of power.

In mentioning the possibility of priorities in the use of power, the Secretary said restricted consumption might easily include night baseball, and he commented: "It's more important to make aluminum than to have night baseball."

The power shortage, he said, might "be met by moral suasion," through civilians voluntarily restricting consumption.

Turning to oil, Ickes told his press conference the problem was strictly one of transportation and he foresaw a possibility of restricted use, especially on the eastern seaboard.

Only Three Survivors Rescued From Hood

London, May 29 (CP)—Although shipping circles had given Britons some hope that a number of survivors might be found from the exploded battle cruiser Hood, informed sources said today that only three—an officer and two seamen—had been accounted for.

The Hood, with a normal complement of more than 1,300 men, blew up so suddenly last Saturday when a shell from the German battleship Bismarck—herself sunk three days later—struck a magazine, naval experts said her crewmen who were not killed outright had little chance to escape.

The name of one survivor was known, Robert Tilburn, whose father, J. F. Tilburn of Leeds, received word he was safe in Iceland after the Admiralty had informed him that Robert was presumed lost.

R. B. Hanson Will Act as House Leader For Next Session

Ottawa, May 29 —(CP)— Hon. R. B. Hanson, Acting House Leader of the Conservative group in the House of Commons, has been asked continue in that capacity for the next session of Parliament, it was announced today after a Conservative caucus.

The request for Mr. Hanson to continue as House Leader was unanimous, the caucus spokesman told the press.

Mr. Hanson assured the caucus he would accept the post for another session.

Active U.S. Intervention Would Shorten the War

Albany, N.Y., May 29 — (AP)—Sir Wilfrid Greene, Master of the Rolls of the Supreme Court of Judicature of England and Wales, believes immediate active United States intervention in the war "would greatly shorten the fight and the Battle of the Atlantic would be won in a night."

CAPT. OF TORPEDOED VESSEL MAY VISIT RELATIVES IN CITY

It is only a note scribbled on a piece of paper, but between the lines of the simple wording another war time drama of the sea may be read.

The note was received by Mr. and Mrs. James Bankier of this city from a nephew, Captain Alex. Bankier, of Glasgow, Scotland, and is postmarked, "Eastern Canadian Port."

In the terse language of the seafaring man, Capt. Bankier writes: "A note to say I am landed in this port. I had the misfortune to have my good ship sunk by a submarine, but was lucky in being picked up and landed here . . . All are well at home."

Captain Bankier further states in his letter that he hoped to visit his relatives here in the near future. He is a veteran of the last war, and has seen continued service in the British Merchant Marine for a number of years.

WEDNESDAY'S RAIN OF GREAT BENEFIT

Farmers of the district especially welcomed Wednesday afternoon's rainfall which sent pedestrians and holidayers scurrying to near-by doorways and other shelter to avoid a drenching.

Grain fields and pastures in particular will greatly benefit by the shower as rainfall was needed badly to encourage growth of grain which had been hampered by lack of moisture since seeding time. Hay fields will also benefit as lack of rain during recent weeks had done much to destroy early season indications of a bumper crop of clover and legume fodder.

CIRCULARS ENCOURAGE HEAVIER MILK YIELD

That the Ontario Department of Agriculture is leaving no stone unturned to assure that Canada's quota of 112,000,000 pounds of cheese for Great Britain will be produced this season is indicated by the measures introduced with the intention of encouraging an increase in dairy production.

Large display circulars asserting that "They also Serve Who Feed the Empire" and stating that with better care, improved pastures and supplementary feeding each cow will do her bit by giving more milk, are being distributed, while booklets "More Milk for Cheese", and "Handbook on Milk Production", both issued by the Department of Agriculture, are to be had by farmers for the asking.

SPECIAL ADDRESSES FROM CHURCH PULPITS ON VICTORY LOAN

Churches of the city and county will echo to a similar theme on Sunday morning, June 1st., when speakers will deliver special addresses pertaining to Canada's and Canadians part in the forthcoming Victory Loan Campaign. In a number of cases laymen will assume the pulpit in place of the regular ministers.

The Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College, is chairman in charge of Churches in the general committee and is making arrangements for the general message to be delivered on Sunday.

BARN IS STRUCK IN HEAVY STORM

Chester McLellan, Eight Miles West of Bancroft, Suffers Loss of $2,000

Bancroft, May 29 — (Special)— Struck by lightning when this district was swept by a heavy rain and severe electric storm early Wednesday afternoon, a large frame barn and granary owned by Mr. Chester McLellan, eight miles west of Bancroft in Faraday Township, was destroyed by fire, together with two heifer calves, cream separator, farm implements and a quantity of hay, which was in the building.

Mrs. McLellan was alone at the time the barn was discovered to be burning, her husband being away working at a neighbor's farm. Mrs. McLellan had gone to the door to note the progress of the storm and was horrified to discover that the barn had been struck and was blazing furiously, her husband not learning of the damage until his return home some time later.

Prompt removal of a cedar rail fence, which ran from the barn to the piggery saved the latter building from falling prey to the flames which destroyed other buildings. Owing to the progress which the fire had gained before being discovered, very little was saved.

The McLellan barn was a comparatively new building, having been built in 1928 and was valued at approximately $2,000. Neither the buildings destroyed, nor the contents, were covered by insurance.

Board Defeats Motion to Retain P. C. MacLaurin As Principal Of B. C. I. For Coming Year

Resolution of April 28th Stands Whereby He is to Relinquish Principalship and Remain as Teacher in Science

The Board of Education on Wednesday evening, by a vote of five to four stood by its decision of April 28th. last by which it was decided that Principal P. C. MacLaurin should relinquish the principalship of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School at the end of June and remain as master of science at the same salary as he has been receiving, $3,800 a year.

After this decision the Board considered applications for the principalship which had been received in answer to an advertisement and took steps to have a committee wait on the Department of Education and consult inspectors at the Department in regard to the appointment of a new principal.

Previous Meetings

Mr. MacLaurin has been devoting his attention latterly to the administration of the school solely. It had been decided before Easter recess that Mr. MacLaurin should give up teaching of classes with the reopening of the school after Easter, and devote his whole attention to the principalship. After Easter it was said that the principal had done some teaching but it was explained to the board it concerned only examination papers. The board on April 28th. took action whereby Mr. MacLaurin was to relinquish the principalship at the end of the present term and to remain as teacher at the salary of $3,800 a year, which he had been receiving.

Meeting of May 12th.

Following a protest meeting of the students some weeks ago and having been requested to receive a deputation of the Kiwanis Club and a delegation of Collegiate and Vocational teachers, the Board at a special meeting of May 12th., heard these delegations appeal that Mr. MacLaurin be retained as principal. No new action was then taken and the board adjourned. On Friday, May 16th., at the regular meeting of the Board a letter from Principal MacLaurin was received in which he made certain explanations and promised his entire co-operation with the board in the principalship.

At that meeting on May 16, Rev. W. J. Walker moved, seconded by Rev. A. B. Payne, for revocation of the motion of April 28th., and for the retention of Mr. MacLaurin as principal of the Collegiate and Vocational School for the next year on probation and if satisfactory until he has completed the years necessary for him to gain the retiring allowance, his term of service to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Board of Education and his complete co-operation with the same.

After long discussion the motion was left as a notice of motion. On May 19th., the Board again met and further delay was sought as it was thought there might be some means of achieving unanimity in the board's decision whatever it might be.

Adjournment took place until last night when the motion was dealt with and defeated. Chairman H. B. Fetterly presided.

Yeas and Nays Called

There was little discussion and after some time Mr. Fetterly asked the members if they were ready to vote. The vote was taken, resulting in four for the motion and five against, the chairman not voting. The motion was declared lost.

Mr. Frank Cushing asked for the yeas and nays which were recorded as follows:

Yeas—Cushing, Payne, McGuire, Walker—4.

Nays—Harrison, Geen, Sisler, Legate, Crosby—5.

Rev. Mr. Walker suggested that the decision might be made unanimous to show that the Board would as a unit stand behind the decision of the majority, but Mr. Cushing saw no need of this, and Mr. Payne declared that "the majority must rule" and that therefore there was unanimity. The matter was left at that.

Applications Studied

The board went into the matter of applications for the principalship, twenty-two having been received. It was decided that the chairman, Mr. Fetterly; Rev. A. B. Payne and Rev. W. J. Walker, be a committee to visit the Department of Education in Toronto, on Saturday morning to consult in regard to the appointment of a principal and to interview the inspectors concerned in regard to certain of the applications. This committee will report to the Board at a meeting on Monday evening next at 7.30 o'clock on the result of their visit.

POLICE BLOTTER

While returning home from night-shift employment at the Stewart-Warner Alemite Company, Miss Jean Lovelace, 10 Sidney St., was accosted by two men at the north end of the upper bridge shortly after midnight Wednesday, the young lady told police. Miss Lovelace told city police she managed to free herself from the grasp of the men and sought solace in a nearby house, from where police were notified. City police scoured the surrounding area, but no signs of men loitering were in evidence.

The young lady informed the authorities that the two men had taken her by the arm and tried to escort her along the street. This is the second time within a week that young ladies have been approached on city streets while returning home from their employment as war workers from night-shift employment.

Spring of Wagon Broken

A milk wagon owned by Reid's Dairy and driven by Ray Post of this city, was in collision with a motor car driven by T. C. Thompson on Campbell St. on Wednesday. The spring of the wagon was broken during the impact. Fortunately the horse did not bolt nor were there any personal injuries sustained.

Fred McNally, Oshawa transient, was arrested in Belleville yesterday on a charge of intoxication. Police took the man into custody following complaints of his annoying the populace and allegedly panhandling along the main streets of the downtown area. He was remanded in custody until Friday's court.

Several motorists were apprehended exceeding the speed limit on city streets by Traffic Officer Doug Ellis yesterday. The offenders will be hailed into court to face charges, Chief Kidd stated today.

Ed. H. Tickell Furnishes Room At Hospital

Mr. Edward H. Tickell, 254 Church Street, has made the gift to Belleville General Hospital of the furnishing of a private room in the new wing. Visiting the institution on Hospital Day, Mr. Tickell was much impressed with the progress being made at the hospital in new arrangements and service. He chose a bay side room, No. 102 on the first floor of the west wing the view from which is particularly lovely. A private room with lavatory facilities, will be furnished in keeping with the general scheme of decoration in that wing.

The Board of Governors and the staff of the hospital are deeply grateful for Mr. Tickell's very handsome gift.

Military Parade and Mass Meeting at Fair Grounds To Inaugurate Loan Drive

The blood-stirring melodies of Canada's patriotic airs, and those of famous regimental marches, will form a martial background to the marching feet of detachments of the Army and Navy Veterans, the Royal Canadian Air Force, the 34th Battery, R.C.A., the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment under Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan, the 4th Anti-Tank Battery from Petawawa under Lieut. Col. T. Y. Wills, the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) under Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble, and the Corps of Cadets of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, here on Sunday afternoon, June 1st.

The parade will be a prelude to inaugural ceremonies to be held in the Belleville Agricultural Park, which will send the Hastings County Victory Loan Campaign off to an auspicious start.

There, before ten thousand people, it is expected, distinguished speakers will convey a message to residents of this county that will bring home, in their full force the duty of every Canadian to the Dominion and the Empire.

Six hundred millions of dollars are expected of Canadians in this drive for Victory Loan Funds. Hastings County, proud possessor of a record during the last war in a similar appeal is expected to emulate its efforts of a quarter of a century ago.

County Raised 3 Millions in 1918

In 1918, when the Empire faced its darkest hours of the last Great War, Hastings County, allotted two millions of dollars, raised the magnificent sum of nearly three millions. It was a proud campaign committee that presented the Dominion Government with two millions, nine hundred thousand dollars. And the committee of this campaign, its faith unshaken in the traditions of Hastings are looking forward confidently to the outcome of the forthcoming effort with an air of optimism.

Colonel Reynolds, president of the famous Canadian Corps has signified his willingness to address the public of Belleville. The distinguished soldier, who entered the army as a private and left it at the end of the war, wearing a colonel's insignia, the Military Cross and Bar, the Distinguished Conduct Medal and other decorations, is, like other veterans of the last campaign, giving his services again to King and Country.

To Meet at Fair Grounds

Special arrangements have been made by the general committee for reception of a large crowd at the Fair Grounds. Sharply at three o'clock the marching troops will enter the grounds, and will march past a saluting base where the salute will be taken by a high-ranking military officer whose name will be announced on Saturday.

Previous to the principal address and interspersing other speeches, the gathering will sing community songs, while the sacredness of the day will be observed with prayer and the singing of hymns.

Hastings County Victory Loan Campaign will actually get under way on Monday, June 2nd, with a flag-raising ceremony to be held at sharp twelve o'clock noon in the City Hall Square. Bands will parade through the city streets at 11.45 arriving at the square at approximately twelve o'clock.

The Belleville Rotary Club will be in charge of the flag-raising ceremonies. Bands will play patriotic melodies until 12.15 and speakers will briefly address the crowd. While the flag is being slowly raised to the staff on the City Hall, community singing of "O Canada" by the assembled crowd will be heard. Following this, the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers" will be sung, followed by the National Anthem.

The flag-raising ceremonies here will be synonymous with similar observances throughout those centres of the county where facilities are available.

Cavalcade of Floats Will Visit Belleville at Noon on June 13th

A huge Cavalcade of Floats, depicting Canada's war effort and urging Ontario citizens to buy Victory Bonds, is scheduled to tour more than 1,500 miles of Ontario highways.

According to an announcement made by the Ontario Victory Loan Publicity Committee, the cavalcade will make its first public appearance in Toronto on Saturday, May 31st.

Start East June 8th

The journey to the eastern part of the province will commence on Monday, June 8th., with Ottawa as the ultimate destination. En route it will stop at Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton, Belleville, Deseronto, Napanee, Kingston, Gananoque and Brockville. The stop in Belleville will be made on June 13th arriving in the city at 12 noon, and staying until 1.30 D.S.T.

Never before has such a large convoy of motor vehicles rolled along Ontario highways. It will include 40 trucks with mounted floats, 10 motorcycles and six other vehicles. A band of 30 pieces will accompany the cavalcade in a chartered bus. Spaced out so as not to interfere with regular traffic, it will stretch about a mile along the highway.

Starting with Toronto, the cavalcade will be joined in the larger towns and cities by a local parade. The latter will include additional floats, bands, military units, local organizations, and military equipment.

Tell Story of Canada at War

Floats making up the cavalade have been designed and arranged in such a way as to tell the story of why Canada is at war, what we must avoid, what Canada is doing, what Canada needs in the way of military equipment and the necessity of buying [illegible] in order to achieve victory. Most of the floats are poster picture style and are uniform in basic design.

The floats are arranged in sequence with a slogan printed along the side. The introductory floats are "King and Queen", "Churchill", "Let's Finish the Job" and "Flags of Freedom", in the order named. These are followed by demolition floats which show what will happen to Canada if we do not 'Face the Facts".

Next in line are a number of floats showing what Canada needs for its war effort. The names of some of these are "More Ships", "More Thanks", "More Machine Guns", "More Guns and Tank Steel", "More Tools for the Job", "More Shells", "More Planes" and "More Medical Aid".

Urge Citizens to Buy Bonds

Other floats urge citizens to buy bonds to "Protect Young Canada", "Bridge the Atlantic" and to "K.O. Hitler". The name of the final float is "There's Only One Answer —Victory".

The floats comprising the cavalcade are being donated by leading industrial and commercial firms throughout Ontario. Expenses of the tour will also be paid by these firms, though the trucks on which the Floats are to be mounted are being supplied by the military authorities.

The officer commanding the cavalcade will be Major I. C. Ellard of Military District No. 2, Toronto.

Starace, Fascist Bigwig, Replaced As Staff Chief

Rome, May 29 (AP)—Replacement of Lt.-Gen. Achille Starace, former Secretary of the Fascist party, as Chief of Staff of the Fascist militia, was announced officially today.

Mussolini appointed Lt.-Gen. Enzo Galbiati to the post which Starace had held since January, 1940, when Ettore Muti replaced him as party secretary. Muti, now a war pilot, later was succeeded by Adelchi Serena.

The announcement, without stating the reason, merely said Starace had left the position May 25. The Fascist militia is a combat organization of Blackshirt battalions fighting alongside regular army regiments in various divisions of Italy's armed forces.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

President Roosevelt has told his people that the United States will never accept the Nazi "shape of things to come" and that the United States is placing her armed forces in strategic military positions and "we will not hesitate to use our armed forces to repel attack," and "we in the Americas will decide for ourselves whether and when and where, our American interests are attacked or our security threatened."

One of the strongest utterances of his broadcast Tuesday night was this: "The delivery of needed supplies to Britain is imperative. This can be done; it must be done; it will be done."

To the Axis powers he gave the warning that the "United States will actively resist wherever necessary and with all our resources, every attempt by Hitler to extend his Nazi domination to the Western Hemisphere or to threaten it." And he said "we shall actively resist his every attempt to gain control of the seas," the freedom of which was a cardinal point of doctrine of the United States. He made it clear that the United States would give every possible assistance to Britain and to all who, with Britain, are resisting Hitlerism or its equivalent with force of arms. He added that all additional measures necessary to deliver the goods would be taken.

In his proclamation of an unlimited national emergency he called his nation to service, declaring that events have shown that the objectives of the Axis belligerents are not confined to those avowed at the commencement of the war but that they contemplate the overthrow throughout the world of the existing democratic order. Then he asked that the nation should pass from peacetime authorizations of military strength to a basis which will guarantee strength to meet and cope with any attempt at hostile encirclement of the western world or threats against it. Henceforth in the United States the needs of defence are paramount he declared.

It has been said there is some vagueness as to convoys of aid but Mr. Roosevelt did say that the United States could answer the peril of shipping losses to Britain through Axis action by "helping to cut down the losses on the high seas." And he also said in regard to the delivery of supplies to Britain "the United States does not merely propose these purposes. but is actively today engaged in carrying them out."

In his praise of the service which Britain. the Colonies and the Dominions as well as China and the Allies are rendering the world, Mr. Roosevelt has once again shown Hitler that the United States will not wait to see him threatening the western world.

His address was a call to American people to be ready for defence and to consider it from the standpoint of the lightning speed of modern warfare.

Mr. Roosevelt has shown that the German Fuehrer cannot threaten the U.S.

DRAMA IN COMMONS

Drama came to the front in the British Commons on Tuesday. The Prime Minister had told of the chase after the Bismarck and promised that the warship's career would soon be finished. Debate went on to other matters of routine.

Then rose Mr. Churchill, asking permission to interrupt. He started after a moment to read from a small piece of paper, "I don't know whether I might venture with great respect to intervene, but I have just received news that the Bismarck has been sunk."

He had finished and sat down immediately. He had made his statement. Members of Commons rose, cheering and waving papers and throwing their hats into the air.

Britain's M.P.'s had a right to celebrate. The greatest of the Hun battleships had been sunk. Shots from the Hood, which was sunk by a projectile which penetrated the Hood magazine, had damaged the Bismarck. The pursuit by ships and planes ended its career.

It was a moment of victory. The loss of the Hood on Saturday had been grievously felt. Now the sinking of the Bismarck avenged the Hood's loss and justified the trust which Britain had placed in her ships and the fleet air arm to guard the Seven Seas. No wonder the Commons cheered the tidings of the British success.

How good to see people in parks at their play,
Plain people in parks at the close of the day.
Nothing but sky overhead in the sky;
No Horsemen of Death riding hardy and high.

Laurier meets Elgin with never a noise
But the dear sounds of motor cars,
bicycles, boys,
Laughing young children, who know what night brings
Promise of safety and sleep on its wings.

Free people in parks at the end of the day—
Men who can smile. and watch rounders and play.
Peace in the sky—but the writing is plain:
They're sweating in England to save us their pain. . . .

Peace in the sky—and the message
sublime:
They're dying in England to give us more time.

THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN

A letter came to this desk the other day from a reader who appears to be very much interested in when the next phase of the war, according to the ancient prophets and writers of prophecies, is going to occur.

One of the hoary greats of the time when a toga was considered the last thing in evening wear, has written that Russia, he calls that nation the Black Eagle, will tell Der Fuehrer that he, the Eagle, is dissatisfied with his methods and is prepared accordingly to bump him off.

Mussolini, The Great Heel. and the remainder of his Italian Boot will be consigned to the cobbler's shop of oblivion; the Cockerel, France, will once more align itself alongside Britain and all will be hunky-dory.

Writing prophecies (ask any sports-writer) is like marriage, it is easy enough to talk oneself into it, but brother, just try and gab your way out of it. It just can't be done.

But, strangely enough, the prophecy alleged to be written by one Johannes, away back when the New York Yankees were not even thought of, has in the majority of its prognostications proved more or less correct. Jo predicted the over-running of the small European States, and called France to toss in the towel with a remarkable degree of accuracy.

But there he appears to be stymied. Jo's next turn in the World Liberty Stakes. is, as we mentioned before, to have the Russian Black Eagle slap the front-running Hitler in the face, and put him in his place. It may occur, at that, but Jo's public is getting a little bit weary of waiting.

However, there are no records to prove that Jo died a bloated plutocrat, so we assume it is safe to presume the Kentucky Derby had not as yet been inaugurated; the world's series was something unheard of; income taxes a dream of the future; the par mutuels a pleasure to come, and Canadians had not as yet given birth to the National Hockey League.

However, it may be a spot of wishful thinking, but Jo's public swear by him, and go all out in saying that he can't miss. He winds up his remarkable document by asserting that the "Lamb" will once more rule the world, and all will be peace and quietness. after little Adolf and his fellow wolves have been placed where they will do no more harm.

SNAPPY, WHAT?

"There is no place in our home for two lie detectors," a benedict friend remarked the other day when asked his opinion of the new scientific gadget. "What do you mean, no room for another?" he was queried. He looked about him before he replied in a low voice, "I married one."

During the First Great War 95 American ships were launched on a single day—July 4th., 1917.

Little Things That Cause The Trouble

By J. H. G. in the Winnipeg Free Press.

Let there be no mistake about it, it is the petty annoyances of civilized life which give rise to all the trouble in this world. Pile enough of them on the saintliest of men and he will go berserk. No one has kept tab on the number of wars which have been fought because gouty generals slipped on scatter rugs, but the number must be considerable; and so must the number of riots that were started because the coffee was cold or the toast burned.

What we shout from our housetop, have the architects of new world orders got to say about the little things in life which can turn mildly stupid house palvers into raging lunatics?

More revolutions, riots and general uproars have their origin in the modern bathroom than anywhere else, with the possible exception of the dining table. Let's start with the bathtub. You would think that it would be possible for an industry which invented such a masterpiece as the bathtub to invent one with a non-skid surface.

Getting into a bathtub is a simple matter, like getting into jail or holy matrimony. But to get out with a whole skin requires the agility of a slack-wire dancer. A moment of carelessness and you awake in the general hospital with your skull opened from ear to ear. And all because nobody has taken the trouble to invent a porcelain which does not become as slippery as greased ice when soapy water touches it.

The modern bathtub has a second irritating defect. The drain is usually located immediately below the spigot. You insert the rubber stopper, turn the water on full blast and go in search of extra towels. When you return the tub is empty and the hot water all gone.

That my comrades, is not the best way to start any day. The force of the water has jumped the rubber stopper from its place. An event which has caused us to wonder if the dirty names who make bathtubs ever use the confounded things.

But if you get through a bath without disast[illegible] your trouble is only starting. T[illegible] is the ordeal of shaving. T[illegible] mind, the greatest sin of [illegible]alism is this: a chemical ind[illegible] which has been capable of [illegible]ng nitrogen from air, of produc[illegible] silk stockings from wood pulp and explosives from cotton, has not even tried to make a soap which would wash off whiskers.

They have not even got around to inventing anything which will retard the growth of hair so that shaving would be necessary only once every week or so. Even that would be a boon to humanity.

Let's turn now from the things they have not invented, which we need so desperately, to some of the things they have invented which are being misused so extravagantly to the detriment of the human nervous system. First, there is coffee. It ought to be a simple job to make a good cup of coffee. You simply mix the right amount of coffee with the right amount of water, and add sugar and cream to taste.

But does anybody know a single restaurant in Winnipeg where good coffee is served? We presume to doubt it because we have tried most of them. It is coffee like that served in Winnipeg which gets people into such nasty moods that they write pieces like this.

Then there is the mania for wrapping things in cellophane, surely one of the major curses of modern living. You cannot buy a cigar, package of gum, or a bottle of glue any more without having to fiddle around with tightly stuck cellophane wrapping.

Then there is—but why go on? We'll pass over such nuisances as the throw-away advertising that clutters our lawn, as men's suits which are designed apparently by women who are misanthropes into the bargain, as telephone surveys and telephone salesmen, as leaky fountain pens, as shoe-linings which wear out in three weeks and irritate your feet, and all the other gaudy caboodle of a berserk civilization.

But the architects of the new world cannot ignore them. Unless they do something drastic about them they are going to have a revolution on their hands pronto. One of the leaders of which will be a queer zany with the initials J.H.G.

3 Freighters, 2 Oil Refinery Ships Sunk

New York, May 29 (AP)—Maritime sources reported today the sinkings of three British freighters and capture of two Norwegian Oil Refinery vessels by a Nazi raider.

A raider was said to have sunk the 8301-ton freighter Port Wellington, the 7,210-ton freighter City of Winchester, and the Kenordoc, a 1,708-ton vessel flying the British flag.

The oil refineries, the 12,083-ton Pelagos and the 12,201-ton Ole Wegger, were reported as "probably sunk" after seizure by Germany in the Antarctic.

Darlan Saves The Axis!

Helen Kirkpatrick Staff Correspondent, cables from London to the Chicago Daily News

Admiral Jean Darlan, Vichy Vice-Premier, handed over 250,000 tons of French merchant shipping to Germany and Italy between April 1 and May 1 according to most reliable British quarters here today.

Thus, the British view is that the French made possible the Nazi attack on Crete and prevented the collapse of the Axis in the Mediterranean.

Shipping tonnage belonging to Italy and Germany, but principally to Italy, in the Mediterranean, totals 700,000 tons. The British estimate that Axis shipping needs cannot be less than 850,000 tons, excluding those vessels required for purely military purposes — troop transports and supply ships.

Without the aid of Vichy France the Axis would have collapsed in the Mediterranean area several months ago, the highest British circles are convinced.

Some time ago, on the insistence of the Germans, French merchant ships were transferred to Italy and took over coastal trade routes from Spain to Italy. On April 1 Admiral Darlan ordered the gradual transfer of 250,000 tons of French merchant ships to Germany.

With the use of these it has been possible for Germany to attempt to land sea-borne troops at Crete, to supply its troops in Libya and probably to attempt to reinforce those troops for a real offensive against Egypt and the Suez Canal.

According to the best possible authority the transfer was outright and neither conditional nor done by the Germans without the full sanction of Admiral Darlan.

It's Iris Time

It is iris time and parks and gardens assume a delicate loveliness they will not have again till another month of May rolls round. Iris lovers attain the peak of their annual ecstacy this week. They are a cult all by themselves, an army in number rich and poor, with eyes that see a thousand separate variations of color and form where ordinary eyes see just flowers.

Their queen of plants has an infinite family of named children, no two quite alike in height, habit or hue—mostly violet, purple, lavender chrome, yellow and all tints, tones and shades thereto related. The differences in the shape alone of their upraised "standards" and their down-curving "falls"— crinkled, scalloped or smooth, wide-open, half-open or closed—needs a chapter in a book to describe. Hybridizers past counting, most of them amateurs, have expended fondness and patience for a century to produce the myriad varieties; they bring forth new kinds every year and the kinds, once established, carry on unchanged ever after.

The lore of the flower is full of wonder tales, beginning with that of Iris, Goddess of the Rainbow. The fleur-de-lis of history blooms early in everybody's garden, masquerading as "Florentine". The cherished "cristata" of four alpine gardens was an American wildflower till a European botanist took it across the ocean to domesticate it. The wild white iris of present-day Mexico hails from Arabia, where it was venerated in Mahomet's era. The conquering Moslems carried it around the Mediterranean into Spain, and Spanish monks four centuries ago brought it with them to America for their mission gardens.

A generous, democratic plant is the iris, and self-reliant, asking few favors, and so, this week there is satiny beauty in the dullest city back yard and the bleakest country dooryard, as well as in places more fashionable. And though just now in the world may be a poor time for cheerfulness, a cheerful time it is, all the same, being iris time.—N.Y. Times.

BOY ANGLER

I read a little story in the paper
yesterday
Of a youngster on a trout stream and the luck that came his way.
With his very simple tackle, hook and angleworm for bait,
He caught a six-pound beauty for which patient grown-ups wait.

The "whopper" fought with fury and a log he went below,
But the youngster just as plucky had a trick or two to show.
In the stream he dove undaunted where the water breaks and spills,
And he got that speckled monster with his fingers through the gills.

Oh, I chuckled when I read it and I chuckle even now;
Life at times will give to boyhood
what to age it won't allow.
And the more I think it over, I think also I can say:
Had some grown-up hooked that
"whopper" he'd have surely got away.

WE WAN T BEANS

National defence officials say that beans are more popular in the army and navy today than they ever have been before.

Beans are still a military staple and are definitely demanded by the men, jokes to the contrary notwithstanding.

Small white soup beans were formerly used by the navy in such large quantities that they came to be known as navy beans.

Navy beans, however, appear on the army and navy menus less frequently than formerl.

Sailors and soldiers require green foods and nowadays string beans are widely served in both the army and the navy.

Before the days of improved canning and refrigeration it was difficult to keep green vegetables of any kind on shipboard.

Dry beans were easily stored and they kept well on long voyages and accordingly they became the traditional fare of sailors.

There was a sound economic reason for the bean-eating habit of New Englanders.

New Englanders became a seafaring people early in their history and the Yankee farmers produced large quantities of beans to supply the demand.

Boston became noted the world over for its baked beans.

Today, however, New England gets many of its beans from Michigan and other states.

According to an old Yankee superstition, beans grew on the wrong side of the pods in leap years.

Beans became so common in New England that a person too obtuse to understand the obvious was said not to know his beans.

The North American Indians cultivated beans before the coming of the white man.

Lima beans, native to tropical America, were so called because they were first raised in the United States from seed imported from Lima, Peru.

Among the ancient Greeks and Romans white and black beans were used as ballots in popular elections.

Beans are rich in protein and accordingly are a good substitute for meat. They are wholesome fare for anybody because they contain certain important vitamins, those mysterious chemical substances necessary to the proper utilization of foods by the body and to prevent various diseases.

So-called black-eyed peas are really beans and in some parts of the United States they are known as black-eyed beans.

The debate, "Resolved that the theories of Fascism are more just than those of Communism" was debated with the affirmative taken by Miss D. Sharp and Miss Allison Vanderwater, Marsh Hill and the negative by Miss Esma Cole and Mrs. Carleton Potts, Mount Pleasant.

The judges were Mrs. H. Dafoe, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver and Dr. C. F. Walt and they decided in favor of the affirmative. Miss Margaret Vanderwater delighted with a vocal number and Mr. Ralph Campbell conducted the recreation period. Marsh Hill young people served an appetizing lunch and those in attendance were privileged to have an intellectual treat and a social half hour. At the close votes of thanks were reciprocated.

On Friday afternoon the pupils of the Allan School with their teacher, Miss Esma Cole, journeyed to the Williams School where all enjoyed a game of soft ball with the Allan School winning the honors. At the close of the game the pupils of the Williams school with their teacher, Miss Betty Hoard, served lunch. This event was to celebrate Empire Day.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Views Differ on Autographing Graduation Photographs

Graduation days are coming and graduation photographs are being planned. An important question of the moment is, "What shall I write on my photographs?"

Graduates-to-be are puzzled as to whether or not to sign their photographs, and, if they decide to sign them, what form of name and what kind of message to choose in individual instances.

First consider the question as to whether you shall write at all on your photographs. There are two points of views about this. Many people are of the opinion that an unautographed photograph is a more personal one. This may at first sound paradoxical, but as you analyze it, you may perhaps agree, or at least see some justification for it.

Naturally, the person to whom you send such a personal thing as your photograph knows who the original is; it is unnecessary to sign it. Also if you write a message on your photograph, only this one message greets the person as he or she looks at the photograph. Whereas, if you don't write a message on it, the person to whom you give it supplies the message for himself or herself. In other words, this procedure allows more scope for the receiver's imagination

The other facet of the question is that some people have a special enthusiasm for autographed photographs, cherish the friend's handwriting, and are delighted to have the friend's message. This is all very human and natural.

The idea is to realize that there are two points of view. Very often you can find out by subtle and judicious questioning, which is preferred by the person to whom you are going to give your photograph. Perhaps the best way is to wait until the person suggests, "Won't you autograph it for me?"

If you decide to sign your photographs, take special care to choose the appropriate message, one which won't be apt to be outmoded. You have to show your taste in so few words. Express your loving devotion to a beloved grandmother or a favorite aunt, but never use too personal a message on the photograph to be given to the beau or the belle of the moment. Friendships change, you and I know that there are many boys and girls who exhibit their collection of photographs and who unattractively boast of them and their impulsive and too-revealing messages.

To friends of your own age, the simplest of messages, always in good taste, is "To Tom, from Joan", written in your very best handwriting. I suggest the pleasant and not-too-intimate word "Greetings", or "Friendly greetings". And save the precious words "Love", "Devotion", "Affection" and the like for the relationships to which they appropriately and importantly belong.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church officiated.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was charming in a pretty frock of Heaven blue wool crepe, a halo hat of white straw, white gloves and accessories to match. She carried a bouquet of orchids and freesia. Miss Madeline Gray, her bridesmaid, wore a charming dress of dusky rose crepe with matching hat and accessories of beige. Mr. Geoffrey Beacham, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Directly after the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to immediate relatives and close friends at the Stirling Hotel, with the bride's mother receiving, gowned in navy and white sheer and white accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

You Can Avoid Ailments Common to Your Build

Physicians now recognize that the shape of an individual seems to lead to certain ailments— the round chest or immature chest leading to tuberculosis the heavy wide type of body leading to liver, heart and blood vessel ailments, and the narrow or slender type of body leading to peptic ulcer (ulcer of stomach and small intestine), anaemia, low blood pressure and tuberculosis.

I am reminded of this because in a recent issue of the American Journal of Digestive Diseases, Dr. S. C. Robinson says,

"The peptic ulcer patients tends to be normal or underweight; he is usually of the slender or narrow type; he has little tendency to get heavy around the waist—protruding abdomen; his blood pressure is lower than the average".

The slender individual is more apt to develop tuberculosis because his chest is immature and he does not get sufficient oxygen. As his small intestine is a few feet shorter than the average, he gets less nourishment from his food, and nourishing food is a factor in preventing tuberculosis. Because he is thin and nervous, his stomach manufacturers more acid digestive juice than he needs and excess acid causes ulcer. His blood is thin for lack of oxygen and nourishing food. His blood pressure is low because all his vital forces are low.

Does having a slender or narrow body mean that the individual is sure to develop a peptic ulcer? Does having a wide body mean that the individual cannot develop a peptic ulcer?

As a matter of fact, it is quite possible for a narrow individual to avoid peptic ulcer, and it is quite possible for a wide heavy individual to develop peptic ulcer. This is because the nerves, the emotions, can be so disturbed that ulcer occurs whether the individual is narrow or wide.

Some months ago I met a former patient and commented on his healthy appearance. He was of the wide type of build and I was astonished when he told me he had had a stomach ulcer that had required surgery to correct. I told him that he was the wrong type to have ulcer—wide build, buoyant disposition, friendly with everybody.

"Yes", he replied. "It was because I was wide, buoyant and friendly that my firm (stockbrokers) had me handle all the clients during the 'break' in the market. It was not long before I could not eat or sleep and the ulcer developed".

By keeping calm, narrow individuals can avoid ulcer. By not overeating, wide individuals can avoid heart, bloodvessel, liver, and kidney ailments.

BOTTLE NEED NOT BOTHER BABY

IF IT DOES Mrs. Robert E. Brandon, of Markham, Ontario, has this message for you: "As so often happens to bottle-fed babies, stomach trouble and constipation were so troublesome we despaired of ever raising our first baby. A neighbour recommended Baby's Own Tablets and they proved so satisfactory we have never been without them for over thirteen years, with the result we have five extra sturdy children. So far they have missed all the so-called children's diseases and four of the five were bottle fed."

And Mrs. M. Butchart, of Toronto, says this: "Baby's Own Tablets are excellent for bottle-fed babies as they assist in digesting foods which cause indigestion."

Baby's Own Tablets are equally effective in diarrhoea, simple croup, colic, colds, simple fever and teething troubles. Sweet-tasting, easy to take, safe. Analyst's certificate in every box.

Never be without Baby's Own Tablets—sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

Importance of Putting Victory Loan Over The Top Stressed By Napier Moore In Address To Canvassers

Impressing district war loan chairmen and working canvassers of Hastings County the vital necessity of the forthcoming Victory Loan campaign going "over the top" if Canada were to be saved from possible Nazi domination with all its known terrors, Mr. Napier Moore, Editor of MacLean's Magazine, Toronto at an informal banquet attended by district war loan workers, in a graphic account of the cost of Canada's war effort told why Canada must not fail. Mr. Moore was guest speaker on the evening's program which included movie reels depicting scenes of the last war, together with shots of Canada's vast industrial machines showing the part which machines are playing in making victory in the present conflict possible.

In opening his address Mr. Moore referred to the sinking of the German battleship "Bismarck" which he said was a direct threat to the commerce of Canadian shores and a threat to "the supply belt which is furnishing Britain with the sinews of war." "As part of the pattern, the destruction of which is the announced aim of Hitler and his stooges, by building up industries and agriculture we are merely bolstering our self-preservation. "To-night there can be no mistake about the meaning of "Stand on Guard," he said.

No Freedom Under Nazis

"What is this thing we are fighting against?" asked Mr. Moore. "We are fighting against what would happen if this country were under Nazi domination—suppose it happened here—there would be no minimum wage laws; no conciliation boards; no collective bargaining; no choosing of trades. Parents would be denied the right of deciding the destinies of their children; Christianity would be non-existant; there would be no pensions, no widows' or mothers' allowances. Whole areas of this country would be denuded of the Canadian population to make room for German immigrants. Nazi officers would be everywhere and it would be forbidden to hold public meetings. Homes would be watched and there would be no privacy."

"The taxes we are paying would be nothing as compared to what we would be compelled to pay as idemnity for Nazi occupation. That's the sort of thing we are fighting," warned Mr. Moore.

Money Must be Had

Mr. Moore referred to the forthcoming loan campaign as a recruiting drive and assured the canvassers "that they were about to go out to enlist the sinews of war, without which an army, a navy or airforce cannot exist." "You are going out to enlist money that is necessary to equip our army and money that is needed to assist in licking Hitler and in making democracy safe," he said.

The speaker advised the canvassers to approach the prospective subscriber and state his case in terms or in language which the everyday man can understand. The astronomical figures which must be used when stating the amount of money required to conduct Canada's war effort mean little or nothing to the average person, but when you tell him that it costs $114 for personal equipment for each soldier, that it costs $5.46 per days to sustain him in Canada and $7.11 overseas, he begins to understand.

Huge Costs

In continuing to state the tremendous cost of a modern warfare, Mr. Moore stated that an expenditure of approximately $200,000,000 was necessary before an armored division was ready for active service. It takes 214,000 horsepower to move an armoured division and the total cost represents a figure greater than all that has been spent on harbours and public works in Canada since confederation. In order to keep one medium anti-aircraft gun firing a period of one minute it costs $620. The training of a pilot, air-gunner or observer costs $25,000, a Spitfire costs a like sum and a Hurricane $50,000, while the cost of a bomber runs anywhere from $125,000 to $150,000. The total cost of the war this year will be a billion and a half dollars and will require one-third of the working time of the nation if it is to be put over successfully.

"Great Britain needs goods far beyond her ability to pay for them, and the people of this country are being asked to make up for the difference. Through the government Canadians have promised "That we will supply the tools," said Mr. Moore.

Self-preservation is the incentive for Canadians to raise the objective of $600,000,000 in the forthcoming Victory Loan drive, stated the speaker, but if anything further than this is needed there could be nothing better than the indomitable example set by the British people, who, he said, "had become a symbol imperishable beyond their glory."

Indomitable Seamen

"It is in Halifax that we see bits of the Old Country; it is there that we see men representative of those who have experienced untold hardships following torpedoings at sea. Many a British sailor who is seen about the streets in civilian clothes has been marooned in an open boat at sea for as long as seventeen days, has been picked up to be in a hospital for two weeks and then get up and go out to sea again on the next boat."

"You are going out among the people to undertake to ask them the privilege of lending their money and I ask you, isn't it better for us to sacrifice to assist the people of this embattled island?" concluded the speaker.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. S. B. Wright of Deloro, while appreciation of the district chairmen and canvassers was expressed by R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., who in a short address stated that Canadians do not yet realize the seriousness of the present situation. He would like to see more of the attitude as taken by President Roosevelt in his recent address. There was no camouflage, just a pure statement of fact, he said. Referring to the money which is to be raised, Mr. Arnott stated that the situation demanded that it was not just a case of lending money, "We have to give it," he concluded.

Mr. Bert Boyce, Vice Chairman of Hastings County war loan district, in the absence during the first part of the evening of Judge C. A. Cameron, acted as chairman for the night and introduced chairmen and vice-chairmen of the eight separate districts which Hastings is divided into for the war loan campaign.

Must Get Subscriptions

Judge Cameron expressed his appreciation to all the canvassers who on June 2nd would be going out among the people to get subscriptions stating that "you are giving up your time; giving up more than you will get out of it." In a word of advice to the canvassers Judge Cameron asked that they not be content with no for an answer. "Don't be discouraged with the first refusal, but go back until you have received a subscription," he said. In conclusion he referred to the monster Victory Loan rally to be staged in the Agricultural Park this coming Sunday at which Col. Reynolds of the Canadian Corps will be guest speaker, and also to the ceremonies to be held in connection with the visit of the torch bearing bomber on June 9th.

Captain Al Plunkett, of Dumbell fame, now stationed at the Trenton R.C.A.F., was present at the banquet and acted as song leader for the evening, favoring with two rollicking numbers, "Let's Have a Party," and "If You Know Susie Like I Know Susie." Al Gordon acted as accompanist. The girls' Invictae Club of Bridge Street United Church served the delicious supper in the Sunday School Hall and were the recipients of a hearty vote of thanks, expressed by Chairman Bert Boyce.

This is reported under Trenton division. It represents a very patriotic and generous support of the services being rendered to men in uniform at home and abroad by the Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Knights of Columbus, I.O.D.E., Salvation Army and Canadian Legion.

U.S. JUDGE CUTS RED TAPE TO SEND $1,000 BEQUEST TO SCOTLAND

St. Louis, May 29 (AP)—Regular court procedure was disregarded yesterday when Judge Walter F. Stahlhugh gave his approval for immediate aid to one of Britain's Nazi bomb victims.

One thousand dollars was bequeathed to Miss Margaret R. Dickie of Peterhead, Scotland, by her brother, the late John S. Dickie, vice-president of a construction company here.

Executors filed a petition pointing out that Miss Dickie's home recently had bgeen destroyed during a bombing raid. Judge Stahlhugh ordered the $1,000 released to her at once before the will was probated.

POLICE COURT

Over forty Thurlow residents, who failed to obtain their 1941 dog licence tags were summoned into Thursday's County Police Court, held at the Court House before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. today. In the majority of the cases the delinquents had entered pleas of guilty and paid the costs of summonses issued after producing their individual dog licence to the satisfaction of His Worship. Two others failed to answer to their names when called into open court and each was convicted and the same disposition made as in the cases where pleas of guilty were accepted prior to the court. However, in default of the latter two assessments, the persons involved will be sentenced to fifteen days

Three Traffic Cases

Three traffic cases were also heard today. Elliott Cohen, Toronto, and H. J. Cordy, Sulphide, paid $5.00 and costs respectively after being convicted of careless driving, while David Stevens, Napanee, was assessed $10.00 and costs after being convicted of using, or permitting to be used, Ontario motor vehicle licence plates which were not issued for the vehicle upon which they were used. R. D. Arnott K.C., local barrister appeared on Stevens' behalf and assured the court the fine would be paid forthwith.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., conducted the prosecutions in all cases, assisting Bruce Martin, Thurlow Township tax collector, in the presentation of the violations of the township dog licence bylaw charges.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A new incident between Vichy and Britain today brought the problem of French collaboration with the Axis again to the fore. Yesterday British bombers attacked an Italian supply ship (or troop transport) which had taken refuge at Sfax, Tunisia, and today Vichy announced it would make the matter the subject of a diplomatic protest.

Britain has known for some time that Vichy is tolerating the use of the territorial waters of Tunisia by Axis convoys bound for Libya. Leaving Sicilian ports at nightfall, these ships quickly cover the 100 miles to the nearest North African point and then hug the French Tunisian coastline until they reach Tripoli.

In one convoy protected by Italian naval units a British submarine discovered a 5,000-ton French tanker and immediately sank it. No explanation of the presence of this French ship in an Axis convoy has been forthcoming and without one it seems fair to assume it is part of Vichy's "collaboration" with Berlin and Rome.

Make Dash for French Harbour

Yesterday's incident had its beginning in the bombing by the Royal Air Force of an Italian merchantmman which had taken refuge in the French-owned Kerkennah Islands off the Tunisian coast. Later another merchantman and an Italian destroyer escort were sighted. When attacked one of the Italian ships made a dash for Sfax and when it reached the harbor there the R.A.F. renewed the attack.

The French claim the bomb hit harbour buildings and a French ship, and today Vichy, in the absence of direct relations with Britain, lodged a protest with the United States for transmission to London.

It is unlikely that Britain will pay much attention to it. Vichy's excuse for allowing this sort of thing to go on is that it is in accordance with the armistice conditions imposed by the Germans at the time of France's collapse. But Britain obviously has no alternative but to attack Axis personnel, ships, and aircraft wherever they may be. That is the price France and the French Empire must pay for Vichy's co-operation with France's former enemy.

Lovely Olympe Bradna and Arthur Kennedy are shown above in a scene from Warner Bros. exciting film, "Knockout," in which they have the leading roles. The thrilling action drama is now at the Capitol with the added feature "Romance of the Rio Grande," starring Cesar Romero.

Connie Mack's Hand-Built A's Supply Newest Sensation With Strong American Loop Drive

Team Wins Nine of Their Last Eleven Games and Now Fifth

TIGERS MOVE UP

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The sensation of the spring in the Major Baseball Leagues is being provided by Philadelphia Athletics, who have won nine of their last 11 games.

From a haphazard crew that floundered helplessly for five weeks once losing seven straight games and another time five in a row, the A's suddenly have sprung up to challenge the first division in the American League.

They squeezed into fifth place ahead of Boston yesterday by capturing a 6-4, 16-inning marathon from the Red Sox.

No one will dissent in giving the greatest credit to that 78-year-old genius of the scorecard, Cornelius McGillicuddy himself.

For years Connie Mack has been planning and building for days like these.

Short on Hurlers

Now he has a young, vital team, full of potentialities but short on pitching. This latter difficulty has been alleviated through great relief work by Luman Harris and Tom Ferrick, who was picked from semi-pro ranks last winter.

Ferrick pitched the last 10 innings against the Sox yesterday, kept eight hits spaced and allowed only one run. It was the 10th time in 12 relief calls he has finished the game and on eight of these occasions the A's won.

While the Athletics have been raiding in the east, Detroit Tigers have conquered the first-place Cleveland Indians three in a row, yesterday an 8-5 margin. Bruce Campbell again led the Detroit assault with a home run, his fifth in sixth days.

25,000 at Capital

The second-place Chicago White Sox dropped their second straight to St. Louis' Browns 8-4. A grand-slam home run by George Selkirk with the bases full in the eighth brought New York Yankees a 6-5 verdict over Washington Senators in the first night game ever played in the nation's capital. A crowd of 25,000 attended.

St. Louis' Cardinals continued their burning pace in the National League with another ninth-inning rally to clip Chicago Cubs 6-5.

A three-run homer by Vince Di Maggio gave Pittsburgh Pirates the margin they needed to cage Cincinnati Reds 7-4.

Brooklyn's Dodgers preserved their hex over the Phillies by taking a 6-5 12-inning decision in a night game.

CORBYS LEADING SOFTBALL LOOP WITH THREE WINS

Chalk Up Third Straight Victory at Expense of Esquire Juniors by 12-2 Count

POINT ANNE WINS

Four runs in the third and fourth innings respectively were enough to win for Corbys A.C. as they chalked up their third consecutive win of the City Softball League by trouncing the Esquire juniors 12 to 2 at the Coleman Flats last night. It was the Corbys third win in as many starts and gives the Bawden-led leaders a strong hold on the league leadership.

As the Corbys took full advantage of the Esquire kids' errors and pounded out 13 safeties, including Ted Henn's third inning circuit blow, Connie Harris scattering the seven junior bingles in a fine mound effort. Harris blanked the kids for every frame, except the third and only gave up one extra base blow.

Jimmie Barriage, who had four hits in six tries, opened the game with a hard triple down the left field line and scored on Ronsky's long fly. Errors, J. Barriage's single and Henn's home run gave the Corbys four in the third and they added another quartette in the fourth. However, the winners only got one hit off Powers after the fifth, but it was all Harris from that point.

Jim Barriage, Henn and Cy Barriage paced the winner on the attack, as Guay and Powers carried the sting of the juniors' attack.

Cementmen Win

Down in Point Anne the "Cementmen" experienced little difficulty in disposing of the SACO. by a 23 to 6 score to vault into second place in the City League standing. In winning Bubby Gaulin's charges clicked with the season's first triple play of the year.

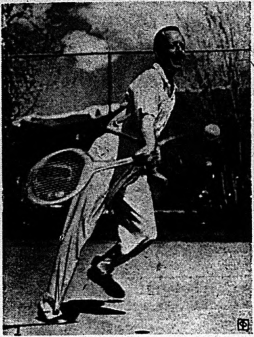
LARRY GAINS DEFEATED

Newcastle-on-Tyne, May 29 (CP Cable)—Sergeant Jack London of the Royal Air Force pounded his way to a three-round knockout of Larry Gains, former heavyweight boxing champion of the British Empire, in a scheduled 10-round bout here last night.

The aging negro, formerly of Toronto and resident of England for many years where he is a Sergeant in the British army, was on the defensive from the opening bell. Due to the war, Gains has not appeared in many bouts during the past year but he kept himself in top physical shape through the rigors of army training.

The Forehand Drive



The forehand drive is perhaps the most essential and most often used shot in tennis. Here Roland Bloomstrand is coming up to meet the ball with the centre of his racket. From an original position with his weight on the right foot and left shoulder and foot facing the net, he has come forward, turning his hips and shoulders toward the ball and is in the act of transferring his weight to his left foot.

Your racquet should be held with the forehand, preferably the eastern style grip, which is now used by more than 70 per cent. of our really good players. In other words, the apex of the angle between the thumb and forefinger falls very closely to the centre of the upper surface of the racket handle when the surface of the racket is held perpendicular to the ground. Thumb and fingers should be held diagonally around the handle, with a slight separation of the forefinger from the other fingers for additional support and "feel."

While in the waiting position, face the net, relax, crouch slightly and rest the throat of your racket in the fingers of your left hand. (If you are left handed, vice versa.) As the ball approaches, turn your hips to the right, transfer your weight to the right foot, bring the racket back keeping your elbow down. Now lower your arm and racke so that the centre of the racket so that the centre of the centre of the ball at the time of impact. This is the main rule for all drives from the baseline. Remember, it is a judged height and the ball may bounce low, medium or high. Therefore, you have to adjust yourself by spreading the feet and bending the knees.

As you come forward, shift your weight from the right to the left foot. The hips and shoulders are now turning. Try to keep the centre of the racket travelling with the ball as long as possible in the desired direction, that is, either to the left straight forward, or to the right, depending on where you want to hit the ball. Finish the stroke up and around the left shoulder. This gives a slight top spin to the ball and insures a safe margin in clearing the net, which you will not have if you hit all balls with a 90 degree angle of the racket surface in relation to the flight of the ball and a straight follow through. Try to hit your forehand at the time the ball is opposite your left heel.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 29—(AP)—Rumor Foundry: The Brown front office is spiking stories Rick Ferrell will replace Fred Haney. They sounded off-key to start with since Haney tried for two seasons to get Ferrell on the Club. . . And we suppose reports that some of the Reds aren't speaking to each other are just part of the gossip that always goes along with a slump . . .The Washington Boxing Commission says it paid Arthur Donovan $150 to referee Louis-Baer. Ray C. Alvis, one of the promoters, says Donovan got a grand. Which is right, and if it's Alvis, who made up the difference?

Hank Greenberg's outfit is marching 15 miles a day from Fort Custer, Mich., to Camp Forrest, Tenn. . . Good crowds turn out at every stop. At one, signs were being carried around reading, "Here comes the army—and Greenberg" . . . Prof. Moe Berg, the linguistic coach of the Red Sox, interviewed Maurice Tillet (the Angel) and reports the Angel speaks the best French he's heard since he was in Paris several years ago. Moreover, M. Tillet struck Berg as a cultured and educated gentleman, even if he is uglier than Tony Galento.

One minute interview:

Joe Cronin: "If Joe and Dominic Dimaggio played in the same outfield there wouldn't be enough room for a third outfielder".

Crack of the week.

"I'm still wondering", writes Ben Atkinson, "how anybody got close enough to Whirlaway to scratch him".

SIX OF RANGERS ON THE BLOCK SAYS PATRICK

Dave Kerr, Art Coulter and Clint Smith Definitely Will be Sold

GENERAL SHAKE-UP

Victoria, May 29 (CP)—Lester Patrick, who can be silent or loquacious as the occasion demands, kept his counsel today in the plans he has in mind for the rebuilding of New York Rangers after announc- the National Hockey League team are on the block.

Vice-President of Madison Square Garden and manager of Rangers, Patrick revealed last night in an interview that goalie Dave Kerr, defenceman Art Coulter and centre Clint Smith are up for sale or trade. He refused to discuss whether he had received any bids for the players and declined to name others who might be involved in deals.

Rumors in the last part of the hockey season, however, were to the effect that Rangers would be willing to part with Kilby Macdonald and Alf Pike, both forwards. Macdonald was a standout in his freshman season in 1939-40, when he was named the outstanding rookie of the year and was awarded the Calder trophy. His goal production fell off sharply in his sophomore year.

Hiller Sold Last Season

The first move in the Rangers' reorganization campaign came shortly after the end of the 1940-41 schedule when forward Wilbur (Dutch) Hiller was sold to Detroit Red Wings. Hiller's sale came at a time when there were numerous rumors that Rangers were due for a general shake-up.

Patrick, here for the summer, was reported to have looked over possibilities on Canada's senior amateur champions, Regina Rangers, and the Canadian junior titlists, Winnipeg Rangers, while en route to Victoria. He would not say, however, whether he intended to sign up any of the amateurs.

Even before the end of the last season's hockey season rumors cropped up that Canadiens were in the market for Coulter, who has long been considered the mainstay of the Ranger defence.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Having accompanied the Kingston ball club to Buckingham, Que., last Sunday, Kingston Bill Walshe has the following comment to make of the Interprovincial baseball setup: "Kingston players and officials were jealous of the suitable little ball parks and grandstands in Hull and Buckingham, which were both well filled for the Sunday afternoon games. And, of course, the light refreshments Sunday afternoon in the Hull hotels were also appreciated. Hull has a new ball stadium, built by the municipality and hundreds from Ottawa and surrounding communities go to Hull for the games. Buckingham, about 20 miles from Hull, also attracts fans from the district but the Quebec teams will have a tough time making expenses with the added taxes. In Buckingham there is an eight per cent. cut on every 25 cent ticket, with four per cent going to the Quebec Province, two per cent to the Dominion and two per cent to the municipal government. Considering the cuts Kingston is in a good position, in fact, Star Reid, all alone, collected $91 at the Cricket Field Saturday which meant the sale of 400 tickets for everything from a five cent piece to a quarter. The collection about paid the expenses on the long trip to Buckingham so the senior team should be self-sustaining and leave a little to foster more juveniles and junior ball."

Secretary Barney Smith of the Ladies' Softball League, released a revised schedule for the remaining games of the season. Over in Trenton President Jess Baker and his contemporaries have organized girls' softball to function along with their men's league. By next month the Trenton girls' clubs will be anxious to participate in some exhibition games, which should give the local lassies an opportunity to get in some additional softball during their long lay-off periods, made necessary owing to a fifth club being included in the schedule. Only a single home and home game schedule was adopted by the gals' loop, but the league play-offs were extended to a three-in-five series in the semi finals and the best four-in-seven series for the final championship games.

Elsewhere on today's local sport pages commences a new series of articles entitled—"The Six Fundamental Strokes in Tennis," by Roland Bloomstrand. The articles will appear in sequence and should be of material assistance to local tennis lovers and help their game immensely.

Do you remember when Jimmy McLarnin knocked out Young Corbett III after two minutes and 37 seconds of the first round in their scheduled 10-round world's welterweight boxing title bout at Los Angeles eight years ago tonight. The Vancouver fighter floored the champion twice before the referee halted the bout.

Point Anne and Corby's A. C. advanced in the city softball loop with wins last night, Connie Harris scattering seven hits well to win over the Juniors, while the Cementmen kicked in with the season's first triple play as they won 23 to 6 over the SACO nine. The game the fans have been awaiting, Corby's versus Reliance, is slated for Friday night. After the game the executive of the City Softball League met and William (Billie) Hughes was added to the executive body. The league executive voted to accept a trophy to be donated by the McCarthy Theatre. This cup will be given to the local Intermediate "A" winner from Belleville and will be competed for annually. Club secretaries will be advised that all playing certificates must be in the hands of Secretary Knott by the end of this week and clubs failing to comply with this request will not be permitted to further participate in league games until such certificates are properly filed.

One of the long-held theories in baseball is that a pennant-winner cannot be bought, with many examples being cited by men who tried that method and failed, but Larry McPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers threatens to upset the form, according to John E. Wray, sports editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, commenting on the possibilities of the Flatbush outfit capturing the National League gonfalon.

"Even though you have millions, you can't step right out and buy enough standout players who will guarantee you a big league winner," asserts Wray. "That's one of the arguments employed to show that big league baseball isn't dominated by mere money. They'll cite you the cases of Dunn, Ball, Yawkey and others who tried it and failed.

"But they reckoned without Larry MacPhail, world champion spiller of the well-known beans. Larry slaps 'form' around with abandon. And right now he's threatening to smash the theory that baseball winners can't be bought. At heavy cost for individual stars, MacPhail has put together the winning Dodgers. They haven't gone over for a pennant yet, but they may prove strong enough to grab the flag, next October.

"With the exception of two players, Reese and Reiser, the remainder of the Dodger team seems to have been bought and paid for. Thus MacPhail seems to have everything. What he touches prospers. He has imposed radical ideas on Organized Ball He made 'em like night baseball. He introduced the safety helmet. He got away with fireworks and foot-racing. And he wasn't afraid to put up $125,000 and players for a man he needed—Medwick. The Brooklyn club has really got something in MacPhail."

WILL DESIGN

Breadth of Vision

He asserted that the President "pointed the way for free nations of the world...... He has accomplished a great act of faith and statesmanship."

The keynote of the President's speech, he said, perhaps lay in "the repeated declaration that the national existence of free nations must ultimately depend upon freedom of the seas."

"This freedom," he added, "has been maintained in the past by the British and American navies and both countries have fought on many occasions to maintain it."

Mr. Eden said the British Government would give "full support to any scheme that commands general approval" for tightening political, economic and cultural ties among Arab countries, presumably including French-mandated Syria.

Long Tradition of Friendship

Britain had "a long tradition of friendship" with Arabia, proved by deeds as well as words.

"Some days ago I said in the House of Commons," he went on, "that His Majesty's Government had great sympathy with Syrian aspiration for independence.

"I should like to repeat that now. But I would go further.

"The Arab world has made great strides since the settlement was reached at the end of the last war and many Arab thinkers desire for the Arab peoples a greater degree of unity than they now enjoy."

Turning to the Iraq situation, Mr. Eden expressed hope that Britain "very soon" would rid the Middle East State of Rashid Ali Al Gailani, whom he called a "self-constituted dictator who brought much unnecessary suffering to his fellow countrymen."

"Then we will be able to establish a basis for sincere and cordial cooperation with the Iraq people in accordance with our mutual interests," he said.

"That is all we ask. We have no designs of any kind against the independence of Iraq."

Fabric Will Not Endure

The Foreign Secretary, returning to the European situation, declared it would "be foolish to belittle Hitler's conquest of a greater part of the continent of Europe."

This conquest he called "a remarkable and ruthless military achievement."

"This one man rules over scores of millions of conquered peoples," he said, "either directly or indirectly or through his creatures, be they Nazis or quislings.

"It is this man and his satellites, all except the deputy feurher (Rudolf Hess) now otherwise engaged, who control the lives and liberties of all who dwell in these vast territories . . . yet this vast and sinister fabric will not endure."

Mr. Eden said Britain found the keynote of her own purposes in President Roosevelt's message to Congress last January listing the "four essential human freedoms" of speech and religion and from want and fear.

"We have declared that social security must be the first object of our domestic policy after the war," he said. "And social security will be our policy abroad not less than at home.

"It will be our wish to work with others to prevent starvation after the armistice, the currency of disorders throughout Europe and wide fluctuations of employment and prices which were to cause so much misery in the 20 years between the two wars."

In Position to Carry out Policy

The British Empire and her Allies and the United States and South America, he said, alone are in a position to carry out such a policy for "irrespective of the nature of the political settlement, continental Europe will end this war starved and bankrupt of all foods and raw materials which she was accustomed to obtain from the rest of the world".

"She will have no means of breaking vicious circle", the Foreign Secretary said. "She can export few goods until she has first of all received the necessary raw materials."

Britain has no intention of returning "to the chaos of the old world", Mr. Eden declared, adding that "to do so would bankrupt us no less than the others.

"When peace comes", he went on, "we shall make such relaxations of our wartime financial arrangements as will permit revival of international trade on the widest possible basis.

System of International Exchange

"We shall hope to see development of a system of international exchange in which trading of goods and services would be the central feature".

He continued that the transition to peaceful activities "will need the collaboration of the United States ourselves and all free countries which have not themselves suffered the ravages of war".

"The Dominions and ourselves can make our contribution to this", he explained "because the British Empire will actually possess overseas enormous stocks of food and materials which we are accumulating so as to ease the problems of overseas producers during the war and of a reconstructed Europe after the war . . . .

Nothing to Offer is Claim

"What has Germany to offer on her side " Absolutely nothing."

Mr. Eden quoted the German Economics Ministry as saying present German rationing must continue at least one year, and possibly several years after the war.

He added: "If peace brings disappointment and such conditions continue beyond the disciplined period of war, social security can hardly survive."

After the war, he said, "shipping will be short and local organization in Europe in a state of collapse.

"It, therefore, is important to begin in good time a discussion of priorities and allocations.

"Our friends and Allies now represented in London will tell us what their liberated countries need most urgently in order that we may all co-operate and be ready for prompt action."

He added that 'after the unhappy struggle now in progress between Japan and China there obviously will be problems of similar magnitude to be faced in that part of the world, in the solution of which all countries concerned will, we hope play their part."

Northwest Germany Attacked During Night

London, May 29 —(CP)— An authoritative source said today that a small force of Royal Air Force bombers attacked objectives in northwest Germany during the night despite "very bad weather" over the continent.

(Berlin admitted that British raiders dropped bombs on north German coastal regions.)

ONE SENT TO PRISON

London, Ont., May 29 —(CP)— Two active army soldiers were sentenced in court today for the robbery with violence of a civilian two weeks ago. They were Gnr. Harold Mason, 38, given two years in Kingston Penitentiary and Gnr. Marvin Cooper, 25, sentenced to three months in jail.

3,036 Men Given Work in Past Year By Local Employment Service Office

Three thousand and thirty-six men were placed in regular employment by the Belleville office of the Ontario Employment Service, Department of Labor, during the fiscal year, April 1st, 1940 to March 31st, 1941, according to figures released today by Superintendent W. D. Ross.

These figures represent an increase in placements of 1,300 over figures of 1939.

Total registrations for the year were 7,475, an increase of 3,190 over the previous year's total. The main contributing factor to this increase, the superintendent pointed out, is the fact that registrations included those of persons living not in Hastings County, but surrounding counties as well.

Unemployed people given casual employment amounted to 1,228, as compared to 661 in 1939. Transfers from other offices were 162, as against 42 in 1939 while local and county residents placed in employment in other districts were 42 as compared to 6 for the previous year.

The number of general placements constitute an all-time record for the office, Superintendent Ross stated. This is due to the fact that Canada is working under wartime conditions, and many people registered with the hope of securing employment in an effort to further the country's war industries.

District Registrations Now 180

At present, he added, total registrations for the entire district number approximately 180, with those actually coming from the city being practically nil. Recent labor demands have absorbed nearly all available help and there is none to be had in any phase of skilled labor.

Placements include practically every sphere of workaday life from a nurse-maid to an executive of a large manufacturing corporation Nearby airports and other construction projects have absorbed the majority of available help with local and district industries of both wartime and commercial nature taking their quota.

Farm Help Scarcity Serious

The most serious shortages occurred in the farm labor and domestic help fields. The lure of more lucrative work in factories and construction projects proved strong and resulted in a drainage of help in these circles of labor.

Skilled labor has been at a premium since shortly after the war began. Superintendent Ross said. All available master workmen were quickly absorbed when the country's industrial war machines got under way and many students in mechanics and other phases of skilled labor have been undergoing instruction here and placed immediately in jobs.

In addition, a number of skilled artizans have been brought in from outside points in an effort to meet the demand here.

British Intercept German Freighter

London, May 29—(CP) — The German freighter Lech, 3,290 tons, trying to run the British blockade from a South American port to occupied France, has been intercepted by a British ship, the Admiralty announced today.

The Lech left Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, April 28, carrying a cargo of fuel oil, cottonseed, hides, iron, mica, coffee and other merchandise.

Capt. Friedrich Brinkmann had asked permission to sail for Bergen, Norway, according to information available in Rio de Janiero. The British authorities said today, however, that German-occupied France was the intended destination.

The Lech arrived at Rio de Janeiro March 3 from Bordeaux after a 31-day voyage, the first German ship to reach Brazil through the blockade.

HANSON URGES

No Threat Intended

Col. Ralston said no threat was intended and he was surprised Maj. Cockeram brought the matter up in the House without notice. The letter was written in a friendly spirit from one member of parliament to another.

In the letter, which was read in the House by Maj. Cockeram, Col. Ralston said: "Your duties as a member of parliament entitle you to express opinions in the fullest possible way in all public matters but your obligations as an officer are governed by King's regulations and orders which require an officer to restrain himself from any expression of opinion regarding the administration of the army otherwise than through the recognized channels, namely by way of complaint to superior officers."

Appreciated Position

Col. Ralston told the House he appreciated the position of Members of Parliament who were also in the army and believed they could reconcile the duties of their two functions. He hoped Maj. Cockeram could do so.

"My honorable friend and Members of the House ought to realize," he said, "that there cannot be discrimination between those who are members of His Majesty's forces; that a member of parliament cannot put on the uniform and still transgress or infringe upon the usual regulations that govern officers in the discussion of what may be regarded as matters of administration and policy".

The greater part of the sitting was spent on the Succession Duties Bill which was still under consideration in committee of the whole when the House rose and will be considered again today.

Third reading was given to Pensons Act Amendments intended to bring that measure into line with requirements of the present war. Just before the night adjournment Finance Minister Ilsley introduced two further bills based on budget taxation changes—measures to amend the Income Tax Act and the Special War Revenue Act. These were given first reading.

Terms Tax a Capital Levy

Mr. Hanson objected to the succession duty measure on grounds that coupled with present rates of taxation imposed by the province it was a capital levy and likely to discourage enterprise which would be needed after the war.

"I am endeavoring to advance the theory that there should be retained in Canada for the benefit of future generations a substantial amount of capital wealth which would be available to carry on the peacetime pursuits of industry and commerce," he said.

In some circles it was not popular to defend capitalism but one of the objects of Communism, Nazism and Fascism was to destroy capitalism. As an alternative they offered national regimentation and it was the only alternative.

"May I declare my conviction," he said, "that sensible Canadians, if properly led and properly educated, if given the right to think for themselves, will reject the proposals which have been enunciated in continental Europe; will reject the doctrines of those whom, for lack of a better term I shall designate as the 'have nots.'

"I am convinced they will cling to a capitalistic system, purged and cleansed, as I think it must be, of the many evils that have been attendant on that system or that are attendant on any system.

"In other words I visualize for Canada and this North American continent a system of capitalism as it should be . . . which will still allow to me and to you and to people in this country who possess brains and ability the opportunity to go out and be creative, not only in the interests of private initiative and private gain but to the everlasting benefit of the nation as a whole."

R. Macdonald Agrees

Ross Macdonald, (Lib. Brantford) said he was in accord with the tax because of war conditions but warned that taxes were dangerously close to the point at which they would discourage initiative.

Says Bill "Callous Betrayal"

As the bill amending the pensions act received its third reading Air Minister Power and Dr. Herbert Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale) made brief comments on a charge made by Mr. Blackmore the day before that the bill constituted a "callous betrayal" of the veterans.

Mr. Power said pensions legislation had received careful attention every session since the First Great War and that in almost every case Canada's scale of pensions was higher than that paid anywhere else. He suggested Mr. Blackmore was using the pensions debate to advance his "favorite theory."

Mr. Blackmore's group advocates the Social Credit theory of monetary reform.

As a member of the Pensions Committee which studied the bill, Dr. Bruce said the Blackmore speech was "a totally unjustified slur on the integrity and sympathetic understanding of the veterans' problems by a committee composed almost entirely of veterans."

Mr. Blackmore said he intended no slur on the committee and asked Dr. Bruce if the committee got all it wanted in the bill.

"It is as good a bill as we thought we could give them at this time," said Dr. Bruce. 'I would like to ask the honorable member a question. If his remark was not a reflection upon the members of the committee, upon whom was it a reflection?"

"Probably it was a reflection on the individual whose will set bounds on the ability of the committee to achieve its desire," said Mr. Blackmore.

"Nobody ever set bounds on my wishes in respect to my independence on that committee," said Dr. Bruce.

Washington Believes Japan's Adherence to Axis Weakening

By JACK BELL

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 29 —(AP)— Responsible legislative members said today there is a growing belief in administration circles that Japan's adherence to the Axis soon may weaken. They cited as evidence President Roosevelt's virtual omission in his fireside chat of any discussion of America's problems in the Pacific.

This belief, reported to be entertained in high quarters, was said to be based on information that business interests apparently are gaining influence in the Tokyo government and might eventually prevail over the military party which led Japan into the war with China and into the Axis alliance.

No Reference to Japan

The President made only brief references to the Pacific in his address Tuesday. He mentioned aid to China, but nothing else beyond the statement that the dictatorships are organizing a system which might be used to force enslaved peoples to build "a naval and air force intended to gain and hold and be master of the Atlantic and the Pacific as well."

Chairman Walter George (Democrat, Georgia) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, after a study of the speech, told reporters he considered it "significant" that the President did not deal with the Pacific problems. He declined to elaborate, but indicated that some change in the Far Eastern situation might be in the offing.

From other legislators, however, came reports the possibility the Japanese might cool toward the Axis alliance figured in discussions the President held with Congressional leaders in a "preview" of his speech a few hours before his address.

Influence Business Interests Growing

The possible ascendancy of business rather than military interests to the controlling position in the Japanese government has been looked upon here as being likely to bring with it some move to withdraw from active co-operation with the Axis.

What its effect might be on the undeclared war with China was left to speculation, although some influential elements in Tokyo were known to have been urging that Japan stop the conflict on terms the Chinese government might be willing to accept.

Elderly Visitor to Marmora Recalls His Experiences With Fourpaw Circus

Marmora, (Special)—A visit to his niece, Mrs. Thomas Gray, of Marmora, on Wednesday, the first in over ten years, was the occasion for Samuel E. Davis of Stoney Lake, of celebrating his eighty-fifth birthday. Those who know this veteran lumberman and jobber will admit that they know of no other man of his age, who is better preserved. He is a bachelor who for over sixty years has lived alone and done his own chores and cooking on 200 acres which in recent years has been chiefly pasturage. He recalls the fine vistas of rock elm, pine and maple that used to be when his parents moved into this particular Stoney Lake territory about ten miles from Havelock, where so many of his years have been spent. His father was born in Wellington, Prince Edward County while he claims Cramabe Township as his native soil. His schooling did not commence until he was fourteen years of age. His father was an acrobat who travelled with the old Fourpaw and Van Auberg Show, later absorbed by Ringling Brothers and at one time commanded a salary of $225 a month for an act put on by himself and family. Samuel Davis had his own part to play in this act and recalls those contortions of his that he has not been able to repeat for some years now. He remembers too how his father won a $50 bet in outshining another performer who was called "The Indian Rubber Man." The Davis family covered a great part of the United States and Canada in the two years they were with the show. He has never smoked and has also been a total abstainer. In his day he has done much hunting and in his younger years played violin and piano for dances and parties. He said he had lumbered summer and winter and did jobbing for years for William Coulter of Toronto. He has been a member of the Methodist and later the United Church and joined the Masonic and Orange Orders. He is particularly fond of reading and in the daytime can read well without glasses. He has one sister living on a neighbouring farm, Mrs. George Allie. Another sister, the mother of Mrs. Thomas Gray, with whom he spent his eighty-fifth birthday, passed away some years ago.

FDR CLOSE-LIPPED

Major discussion, however, centred on delivering goods to Britain.

Mr. Roosevelt, in response to press conference questions, said that convoys in the 1917 sense were outmoded. Then, he pointed out, there were only submarines to combat, whereas today merchantmen must be protected from submarines, surface raiders and air bombers.

American patrol ships in the Atlantic, he repeated, are seeking to locate where any sky, surface or sub-surface raider is at a given time. He conceded the patrols were not 100 per cent successful, but added they were growing more effective every day.

Questions Turned Aside

The President turned aside several questions with the observation their answers would provide information Hitler would like to have. One of the things he thought Hitler would like to know was whether patrol vessels had been ordered to resort to new measures to protect commerce.

The President's statement that he did not intend to seek a change in the Neutrality Act, informed quarters said, removed the likelihood of any incident in the present European or Mediterranean Sea war zones that might raise the question of freedom of the seas for American merchant shipping.

However, they pointed out, a clash on this issue could take place in the Red Sea. There is no neutrality prohibition against American ships operating in that body of water, but Germany recently posted the upper half of this sea as a zone of unrestricted warfare. This zone is not recognized by the United States.

HEPBURN RESISTS

Keep in Own Hands

The lates statement was in regard to Federal Finance Minister Ilsley's budget proposal that the Federal government take over provincial income and corporation tax fields, with compensation to the provinces. In his telegram last night Premier Hepburn said the provincial government would "keep in its own hands the means whereby services necessary to the wellbeing of the citizens may be maintained at the highest state of efficiency."

Premier Hepburn earlier had protested the Federal proposal to tax interest paid non-resident holders of provincial bonds and in reply Prime Minister Mackenzie King stated two days ago the Federal tax "should not involve any threat to the credit of Ontario or any other province."

Premier Hepburn's telegram last night said that Prime Minister King's message "entirely fails to justify your discriminatory measures in imposing a 15 per cent tax on interest paid to non-resident holders of Ontario bonds payable in Canadian funds while expressly exempting interest on Dominion and Dominion-guaranteed obligations."

The telegram mentioned Prime Minister King's reference to the fact the principle of taxing interest on provincial bonds while exempting those of the Dominion was laid down in 1933 by the Bennett Conservative government, and added:

Policy Repudiated at Polls is Claim

"It is unbelievable that this should be your defence especially in view of the fact that you did oppose the Bennett taxation proposals and further in view of the fact that the Bennett administration policies were repudiated at the polls by one of the most decisive verdicts registered by the people of Canada."

Premier Hepburn declared in his wire: "Now that you have made it abundantly clear to Ontario that you are determined not to remove the injustice against which Ontario and others have lodged emphatic protests but that you propose to persevere in an action which is clearly designed to degrade the credit of the Canadian provinces, I deem it my duty to inform you that this your latest provocative act against the good relations which should exist between the Dominion and Provincial Governments leaves the Ontario Government no alternative but to advise you that it has decided to keep in its own hands the means whereby the services necessary to the wellbeing of the citizens may be maintained at the highest state of efficiency.

"In no other way does the Government of Ontario believe that its revenues and credit may be kept on the present levels and you have given this province the very best reasons in the world for retaining full control and management of its own fiscal machinery.

"You are hereby assured that this Government which has and is giving fullest cooperation in all matters pertaining to the prosecution of the war will continue to cooperate with a view to bringing about what is most urgently required, namely a full-out war effort to save Christian civilization."

Lovely Martha Scott is starred as Ella Bishop the screen's most vivid heroine since "Stella Dallas" and "The Old Maid" in the powerful dramatic hit "Cheers For Miss Bishop," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XXXV

Devona went through the next few days as in a troubled dream. Shopping, poring over timetables, phoning for reservations, she attended to every detail with only part of her mind. With the other, she tried to believe all this was really happening.

Talbot, so busy with interviews, publicity agents costumers, songwriters, she saw only fleetingly. And Dale, preparing for the trial that would—if he won—convict Macias and his ring of henchmen, and put Dale himself directly in line for State District Attorneyship, was working indefatigably.

The trial opened two days before the simple wedding at the Chapel of the Flowers was to take place.

"I wish one of us could be there to hear Dale's speech," Tal said the evening before. "But I can't possibly make it. Not and be ready to leave on Friday. But why can't you go? Or have you too much shopping?"

Devona negatively shook her head. Shopping when there was this chance to watch Dale reach his goal! "It can wait. I'll be there."

The Trial Begins

So, promptly at 10 that important morning she slipped into the courtroom, into one of the rear seats, and waited impatiently through all the preliminary court procedure, her eyes on Dale's dark head bent now over a bundle of papers he'd taken from his brief case.

A few minutes later, the trial began.

Testimony

Several witnesses whom she'd never seen were interrogated swiftly, carefully. Dale's questions were simple, clear-cut, direct. His manner, courteous but firm.

Then members of the sinister little gang whom she did recognize were called to the stand. Freda's pallid face, eyes wide with terror, voice almost inaudible, replied nervously to Dale's questions. And probably no one in that audience but felt sorry for the poor girl. Obviously in love with the handsome Macias, she'd let herself in for heartbreak. But she wasn't criminal. Devona was glad when Dale finally dismissed her.

Then Wong, impassive, sly. And his admission that he had been "planted" in Vara Vadne's lovely hacienda simply because Jose Macias knew that Dale was a frequent visitor there, and because Wong was clever at pilfering information from bulging briefcases, faithful in reporting information to his chief.

Finally, Jose Macias himself was sworn in. Stepping arrogantly to the stand, his handsome, evil dark eyes swept imperiously over the courtroom as he took his oath to "tell the whole truth, nothing but the truth."

Dale Wins

Anxiously she leaned forward, her ears strained to catch Dale's every word, his every question. And with every moment her pride in him mushroomed bigger and bigger.

And finally, when Dale turned to the jury to summarize his case, he spoke so eloquently, with such quiet, well-reasoned judgment that when he closed and sat down, the little audience burst into spontaneous applause.

Devona's eyes were wet with happy tears as she stumbled out of the gallery and made her way through the corridor outside to Dale's private office.

He came in a moment later, his triumph written in his smile.

"We won, Devona! Congratulations are in order," and held out his hands to her. "They let the little blonde off, but we've caught the big ones."

"Oh, Dale! I'm so glad, so thrilled for you. You were wonderful, really."

She had intended it should only be a friendly handclasp—but somehow, suddenly she was in his arms her lips pressed hard against his.

He held her tight aginst his shoulder for a long moment. Then as behind them, the door swung open, shut again with a little swish, they lept apart, flushing guiltily as they faced the intruder.

It was Freda Camp!

"Hello," Dale said quietly. "Was there something——?"

"Yes." She stared at him her blue eyes vacant, wild. "Yes, there is. You can't send Jose to jail. You can't! You can't!"

Dale Is Shot

Her pinched white face worked hysterically as, with a jerk, she pulled something out of her pocket and screamed: "You can't do that to him! I'll kill you first!"

Dale's leap toward her came an instant too late. Staggering, he crumpled to the floor almost at the girl's feet while she, still screaming, buried her face in her hands.

Instantly the room swarmed with people. Officers, clerks and a moment later the Judge himself.

Numb with shock, Devona watched them lift Dale, his face deathly white, and carry him to the worn leather sofa.

"Call an ambulance!" some one shouted.

"I've got the girl!"

"Clear the corridor!"

Then the wailing shrief of a siren.

At the hospital they made her wait in the corridor outside the room. Wait for hours—pacing the long hall, studying every face that came out of that room for some sign, some signal.

Life Hovers

"He's conscious now—or will be soon," a soft-voiced nurse told her finally. "You say you have sent for his brother?"

Devona nodded and tip-toed to the bedside. For the space of a sigh his eyes flickered open, found her face bent close to his own, recognized her.

"Don't go—," he murmured, slipped back again into unconsciousness probably before he heard her promise.

"I won't, darling."

Tal came finally and kept vigil with her through that interminable day, the long hours of the night.

And when at 4 the next morning the tide did turn, there was no more hemorrhage, and there was hope, the doctor turned to Devona, smiled kindly. "He'll be all right now."

Dale, as if to corroborate the doctor's judgment, opened his eyes, smiled at her, said, "Sure—I'm all right."

Tal Witnesses Scene

Devona lost her head. The strain of the long vigil, her relief, her surging joy sent her flying to that bedside, tears spilling down her cheeks as she sobbed:

"Oh, Dale, my daring. Thank God. If anything had happened — darling I couldn't have—stood it." And pressing her face close to his, she buried her sobs in his pillows.

Dale's good arm went around her shaking shoulders quickly. "Here, honey. None of that, please."

She couldn't stop. Not for the moment. But when she did dry her tears, pull herself together, she saw the quiet smile on Tal's face.

Dale saw it, too. And when Tal, muttering something about coming back later, lunged out of the room, Devona turned stricken eyes to meet Dale's.

"Now I've done it," she said. "Tal—knows!"

No Sign of Tal

"He mustn't!" Dale's face clouded with anxiety instantly. "You're engaged to—him! You're going to stay engaged! Tomorrow is your —wedding day, isn't it?"

Devona glanced to the window where a cold foggy dawn was already pushing back the darkness of this past night. "Yes—my wedding day."

"Go call Tal back," Dale said, angry now. "Go tell him something—anything. Quick! Before he——"

Devona flung open the door, her heels clattering a sharp staccato on the deserted corridor floor as she ran to the elevator. No sign of Tal in the lobby below. His car gone from the parking space outside. Frantic now she fled back to the hospital office.

"Call a tax—quick!"

A moment later as her cab hurtled across town, Devona, for the second time, prayed that she might not be too late. Because, and realization drove horror deep into her soul, if Tal succeeded in destroying himself this time because of her, Dale would never forgive her. She would never forgive herself! Never!

She went directly to the old Brasher home. Tal had not been there since morning. Nor was there any message at her hotel. The sleepy clerk hadn't seen any one. Nor the night watchman at the office building where Tal had been working with publicity men.

By 10 o'clock that morning, Devona had been everywhere she could think of. Absolutely no trace of Talbot.

Desperate, exhausted, she returned to the hospital.

Dale, ashen but calm, was dressed now, his coat flung over the heavily bandaged shoulder, the sleeve dangling. He looked up anxiously.

"You didn't find him?"

Wearily, hopelessly, Devona shook her head. "No, not yet."

They called the police then. And every hospital and every morgue in the county. Still— no Talbot.

Rome, May 29 (AP)—The Italian High Command claimed today its troops landed on the Greek Island of Crete yesterday while Fascist aircraft attacked British naval units in the surrounding waters.

It was claimed three cruisers were hit by torpedoes launched from the attacking Italian planes and another by bombs. (Confirmation is not available).

The communique failed to say how the troops were landed. It was the first report of Italian troop landings on the island, where the Germans have been fighting furiously against British and Greek forces since May 20.

JERSEY GIANTS WITHIN 2 GAMES OF FIRST DIVISION

Ten Day Spurt of Squad Unnoticed Because of Commotion Among the Flashier Clubs at Top

LEAFS DIVIDE

(By The Associated Press)

The plodding Jersey City Giants, unnoticed because of the commotion among the flashier clubs at the top of the International Baseball League standings, have made their way to within two games of the first division in the last ten days.

The little Giants made it five in a row over Syracuse Chiefs last night behind the steady four-hit pitching of Hugh East, registering a 3-1 triumph although held to three safeties themselves.

Joe Krakauskas, a Brantford Ont., boy just down from the big leagues, had a no-hitter going in the sixth, but Herschel Martin spoiled it with a single and the blow scored east. Johnny Davis' triple, another single by Martin and an outfield fly resulted in the other two Jersey runs.

Meanwhile, the other clubs did little to relieve the confusion among the leaders.

Royals Extend Margin

Montreal's mighty Royals extended their margin over the second-place Bears splitting a doubleheader with the weak Toronto Leafs. Steve Rachunok hurled Royals to a 6-1 victory in the 7-innings twilight affair, but the tailenders struck back behind Herman Besse in the nightcap, winning 8-6 to end a four game losing streak.

Baltimore Orioles continued their mastery over Newark, pounding five hurlers for 14 hits and a 7-4 victory, while Rochester moved into a tie for third with Buffalo, defeating the Bisons 5-4.

At Toronto a four-hit outburst in the sixth inning of the first game, climaxed by Jack Graham's two-run homer, spelled finish for Walter Lanfranconi, and ran the Royal's unbeaten string to five straight. Toronto turned around then and pulled the same stunt in the Arclight contest scoring seven runs in the sixth with the help of homers by Al Rubeling and Eddie Morgan.

Softball Loop To Hold Tourney On Dominion Day

The Belleville Senior Softball League will hold a mammoth softbal tournament in Belleville on Dominion Day with all receipts to go to the Ontario Softball Association War Service Fund for the purchase of sports equipment to be given to Canada's fighting forces, it was decided at an executive meeting of the association held last night. Besides the stronger clubs in the Belleville association, outside clubs, including "Dit" Clapper's Hastings' team and a team from the R.C.A.F. will be invited to compete in the tournament. The Belleville Centennial Softball Trophy will be awarded to the successful team winning the tournament championship of the day.

An offer from Mr. Vince Freeman, manager, of the McCarthy Theatre, for the presentation of softball trophy was accepted by the association executive, the trophy to be awarded annually to the Belleville softball team winning the City Intermediate "A" series for the right to compete in the O.A.S.A. playdowns. The trophy will be known as the McCarthy Theatre Cup and will be presented to the winning club by Mr. Freeman at the McCarthy Theatre after being won.

William Hughes, of this city, was added to the association executive, President Clem Bowler announced. A full executive was present at the call of Secretary Harry Knott for the purpose of passing upon league certificates. However, only the Corby A.C. and SACO Clubs tendered their certificates. The executive ruled that all certificates must be in the hands of Secretary Knott before the end of this week, clubs failing to comply with this regulation will not be permitted to further compete in the league schedule until all their playing certificates are passed upon.

HOSTAK DEFEATED BY TONY ZALE IN TWO ROUNDS

Indiana Boxer Retains N. B. A. Middleweight Title in Furious Contest

SEVEN KNOCKDOWNS

Chicago, May 29.—(AP)—They grow them game in Gary.

Tony Zale, who once toiled in the mills of that Indiana Steel City, proved that before 14,087 roaring fight fans at the stadium last night. Knocked spinning in the first round, he came back with a furious attack to knock out Al Hostak of Seattle in two minutes, 32 seconds of the second stanza and retain his world's National Boxing Association Middleweight championship.

The scheduled 15-round battle opened furiously. Swarming across the ring, Hostak craked the champion with a right to the chin that sent the Gary boy reeling. His gloves touched the canvas but he did not take a count. He piled back into the Seattle fighter from then on to the bell.

Zale Tears In

As the second round opened Zale tore in with both hands. Hostak dropped for a nine count from a savage blow to the heart. Down he went again for a three count. Twice more the courageous Hostak fell without taking a count but another smash put him down for nine.

Again Zale raced in slashing the glassy-eyed Hostak to the boards for a count of five and a count of eight. As he arose Zale uncorked a terrific right to the heart. Hostak started to buckle, took a left to the face and went down for good. As the "10" was counted off he was sitting down, vainly trying to get his legs under him.

The battle, which grossed $48,475, was the third between Hostak and Zale. In January, 1940 Zale took a decision in an overweight match, then won the title from the Seattle Star last July.

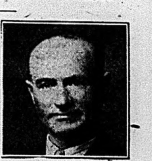
"Now, After 23 Years I Have Found Relief"

Suffered Long Time from Stomach Misery, Aches and Pains in Back and Joints, Nervousness and Constipation. Tells How Syntona Gave Him Relief.



MR. GOOLEY

How we wish every one of you who reads this story, could really know of the thousands of users who have found agreeable relief from stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles, backache, nervousness and rheumatic-like aches and pains by taking this grand Herb and Root medicine. Many of them your own neighbors and friends like Mr. Joseph B. Gooley, 256 MacNab Street, North Hamilton, Ontario, who says:

"For the last 23 years I have suffered continually with indigestion and constipation. My stomach would bloat like a balloon and sour bits of undigested food came up in my throat. I used to get dizzy spells, blinding spots appeared before my eyes, tongue was always coated and in the mornings I had a bad taste in my mouth. I was always constipated.

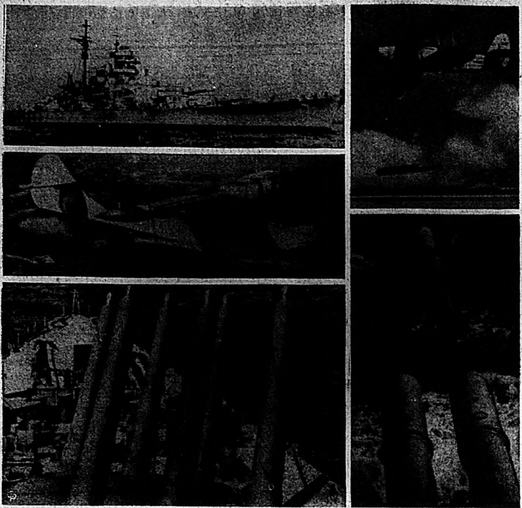
"More lately I began to suffer from rheumatic-like pains in my limbs and joints and I had a terrible backache all the time from which I could get no relief.

"I had been reading about all the people who were being helped by Syntona and so I decided to give it a trial. Well, that was a lucky day for me, because now after all those years I have found relief and I can eat so many different things without having that miserable gas, bloat and distress in my stomach. The dizziness, coated tongue, spots before my eyes and even the backache are gone completely and my bowels are regular again.

"My appetite is good now. I sleep much better and can't remember when I felt so good. I advise others suffering like I was to give Syntona a chance to help them, for it is a great medicine."

All who suffer are cordially invited to call at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville, and find out for themselves about Syntona. See how it can help you, too.

HOOD REVENGED AS PLANES AND GUNS SINK BISMARCK



Britain's navy and air force, working in close co-operation, took grim revenge for sinking of H.M.S. Hood when they caught up with the German battleship Bismarck whose guns sent the British ship down, and proved once more that Britain rules the waves. Torpedoes launched from Fleet Air Arm planes, and from the tubes of British warships crippled the fleeing raider, according to admiralty reports, after an American-built Catalina bomber had spotted her trying desperately to reach haven in French ports from the vengeance-seeking naval vessels on her trail. Then the guns from big battleships—possibly the new H.M.S. Prince of Wales—smashed and battered her. Torpedoes finally sent her to the bottom with loss of her 1,500-odd officers and men. This layout illustrates the action. At TOP LEFT is the Bismarck herself, a 35,000-ton giant, armed with eight 15-inch guns and smaller armament. At TOP RIGHT a torpedo-carrying plane of the Fleet Air Arm launches its missle, just as planes did at Taranto against Italian vessels and against the Bismarck. CENTRE LEFT pictures a Catalina bomber, one of the many which American factories have sent to fight under the British flag. LOWER shows the big guns of a British battleship, and at RIGHT a torpedo jumps from the firing tubes of a naval vessel tearing through the sea. Loss of the Hood was more than compensated by destruction of the new and heavily armored German ship.

CRETE DEFENDERS FIGHT WITH BACKS TO WALL

Bombers, Fighters From Egypt Bases Stabbing at Enemy

London Military Circles Claim Pressing Need For Still Stronger Air Support

ALLIES POSSESS RETIMO

London, May 30.—(CP)—British-Greek forces in Crete fought with backs to the wall against growing odds today and informed sources grimly acknowledged the defence of the Greek Island appeared to be entering its last desperate stages.

Royal Air Force bombers and long-range fighters, operating from Egyptian bases at least 350 miles away, were reported stabbing at the northern shores of Crete in an attempt to delay the landing of German reinforcements, but military circles said there was pressing need for still stronger air support.

Nazi claims that the defenders were preparing to leave the island went unanswered.

Informed quarters, however generally accepted Berlin reports that Heraclean (Candia)— as well as Canea and Suda Bay—are in German hands.

MOVE TO SPEED WORKOFCOMMONS

Parliament Will Meet Each Morning at Eleven O'clock Until Adjournment

Ottawa, May 30 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will move in the House of Commons Monday a resolution calling for morning sittings of the House starting Tuesday with a view to cleaning up current House business as rapidly as possible.

Mr. King's resolution, notice of which he gave in today's votes and proceedings of the Commons, reads: "That on and after Tuesday, June 3, 1941, until adjournment on completion of current business, the House shall meet at 11 o'clock in the morning of each sitting day and that in addition to the usual intermission at six o'clock p.m., there shall also be an intermission every day from one to three o'clock."

This practice was adopted near the end of the last session last summer to facilitate adjournment and on occasions the usual 11 p.m. adjournment hour was extended so that the House sat into the early morning to clean up its business.

During the past week the House decided to do without any evenings off and as a result sat Wednesday night—customarily a night off—and will sit through tonight until 11 p.m., whereas in the past this session the Commons has been adjourning for the week-end at 6 p.m. Friday.

Max Schmeling's Death Denied By Nazi Sources

Berlin, May 30—(AP) — Max Schmeling's own words were quoted in the German Press today to relate his part in the Nazi invasion of Crete after reports that he had been killed were denied.

An interview with the former heavyweight champion by Siegfried Kappe, a German military reporter, told how Schmeling had wandered alone half a day in the Crete wilderness after becoming separated from his companions.

The official denial of Schmeling's death said he was in an Air Force hospital with a minor attack of a tropical disease.

"Our group was to take a penitentiary building on an important, strategic street", the pugilist-parachutist was quoted.

"There was heavy fighting. Our opponent had heavy weapons which we lacked.

"Some of us were separated from our group but at dusk we were rejoined and the strategic road as well as the prison were ours".

Holiday Brings to Halt Urgent Preparations Of United States

Washington, May 30 (AP)—A Memorial Day holiday to honor the dead of past wars brought almost to a halt today urgent preparations of the United States to meet the threat of another armed conflict.

Even before dawn a three-day week-end "blackout" started for many of the principal aircraft plants which have been working around the clock on urgent orders for warplanes for Britain and the U.S.

A Navy order to shipyards turning out warships directed a holiday for all civilian employees, except those necessary for maintenance. The national holiday applied as well to plants at work on sorely needed cargo vessels replacements for the battle of the Atlantic.

Principal aircraft plants reported operatioins would cease for three days, indicating a maximum reduction of 10 per cent. in the month's output of warplanes.

Grand Orange Lodge Presents Cheque for 4 Mobile Kitchens

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—The Grand Orange Lodge of British America today presented a cheque for $12,400 to the Canadian Red Cross Society for the purchase of four mobile kitchen units to be used in bomb-stricken areas of England, Scotland and Wales. Lt.-Col. T. A. Kidd, Grand Master, presented the cheque which was accepted by Mr. Justice P. W. Gordon, chairman of the executive committee of the Canadian Committee of the Canadian Red Cross.

U.S. Veteran Advocates All-Out Aid To Britain And Convoys if Needed

Washington, May 30 (AP)—Before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Sergeant Alvin C. York called today for immediate all-out aid to Britain, and added "if that means that we have to use convoys, then we should use them."

The Tennessee mountaineer who became one of the outstanding heroes of the First Great War American Expeditionary Force was invited as principal speaker at Memorial Day ceremonies in Arlington National Cemetery.

In his prepared address, York struck out at advocates of "isolationism." He said that Senator Burton, Wheeler (Dem-Montana) "ought to know by now that you can't protect yourself against bullets with an umbrella."

To "a United States Senator whose favorite bird must be the ostrich" York coupled a reference to "a famous transatlantic aviator." Both, he said, "feel differently than the veterans do about this country's most pressing problems." For the veterans, he said, "liberty is something they fought to keep."

York said he and other veterans of the First Great War frequently were asked what they had gained by fighting "to make the world safe for democracy."

"Let me answer them now," he said. "It got me 23 years of living in a country where the goddess of Liberty is stamped on men's hearts, as well as on the coins in their pockets........

"By our victory in the last war, we won a lease on liberty, not a deed to it. Now, after 23 years, Hitler tells us that lease is expiring and after the manner of all leases, we have the privilege of renewing it, or letting it go by default."

BRITISH FORCES MOVE CLOSER TO BAGHDAD CAPITAL

Within Five Miles Of Goal And Advance 15 Miles In 24 Hours

IMPEDED BY RAINS

London, May 30 —(CP)— Authoritative sources reported today that British forces had advanced to a point within five miles of the Iraq capital of Baghdad.

At the same time another British column moving up the Euphrates river was reported to have reached Luquait, about 250 miles south of Baghdad and 50 miles northwest of Basra.

The column reported within five miles of Baghdad was advancing from the west after capturing the town of Khanuqta, fall of which was announced in a communique yesterday.

Though impeded by extensive rains and damage to a bridge on the path of the advance, British forces apparently covered about 15 miles in the past 24 hours. Khanuqta is 20 miles west of Baghdad.

Mobile Forces Used

Mobile British forces were said to be participating in the drive.

A statement by authoritative sources said:—

"Our forces advancing up the Euphrates from Basra have reached Luquait, about 50 miles southeast of Ur.

"Our advance from Khanuqta has been somewhat impeded by extensive floods and damage to an iron bridge eight miles west of Baghdad, but a British mobile force has reached the neighborhood of Madaimain about five miles northwest of Baghdad."

Deposed Regent at Fallujah

Cairo, May 30—(AP)—Emir Abdul Ilah, deposed as regent of Iraq in a coup d'etat, has entered Fallujah in the wake of British troops advancing on Baghdad and is consulting with his followers on the establishment of a new government, it was reported here today.

The Emir fled Iraq when Rashid Ali Al Gailani seized the reins of government and began fighting against British troops. Tribal chiefs were said to be flocking to his standard.

Tripoli Raided

Damascus, Syria, May 30 (AP)—The British Air Force in the past two days has raided Tripoli, Deirezzor, Aleppo and Rayak airdromes and Homs railway station in French-mandated Syria, causing damage, according to a report issued here.

THREE OF CBC STAFF KILLED IN CAR CRASH

Vehicle Bearing Prominent French Canadians Hits Tree

ONE SERIOUSLY HURT

Montreal, May 30 (CP)—Death of Rev. Wilfrid Morin in hospital early today raised to three the toll in a highway accident last night when a car bearing five prominent French Canadians swerved off the road about 40 miles north of here.

Father Morin, chaplain of Hospice St. Henri here and radio lecturer, died shortly after undergoing an emergency operation. His death followed that of Fernand Leclerc, head of the Special Events Department of the Canadian Broadcasting Company's Montreal Studios, and Leo Pol Morin, musician and lecturer.

The two other occupants of the car—Louis Francoeur and Prof. Louis Bourgouin were also brought to hospital here. Condition of Francoeur, news commentator for the CBC's French network, was described as serious.

The five, associates on a French-language radio quiz program, were returning here from an outing at Lac Guindon when the car went out of control at a curve, plunging into a ditch and crashing into a tree.

Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm Slightly Improved

Berlin, May 30—(AP)—Slight improvement in the condition of former Kaiser Wilhelm was reported today as members of the family hastened to the bedside of the 82-year-old emperor who is in exile at Doorn, Holland.

A telephone call from Doorn to the Hohenzollern estate here said Wilhelm appeared slightly stronger but that his condition was still serious.

He was stricken several weeks ago with an obscure intestinal disorder and artificial feeding has been resorted to while physicians sought to diagnose the exact nature of the complaint.

OVERCOME BY PAINT FUMES

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—Capt. Sydney Youens of the Toronto Fire Department was overcome by paint fumes and dense clouds of smoke while fighting a two-alarm fire at the Trelco Paint and Varnish Company plant today. He was rushed to hospital where his condition is reported to be serious.

ITALIANS ADMIT 17,879-TON LINER SUNK BY TORPEDO

State That Most of Soldiers Aboard Were Rescued—Was on Way to Libya

SAY DESTROYER SUNK

Rome, May 30 (AP)—The 17,879-ton liner Conte Rosso, laden with troops, has been sunk by a torpedo south of Syracuse, Sicily, but most of the soldiers aboard were saved, the Italian High Command said today.

On the other side of the ledger, the High Command claimed the 1,340-ton British destroyer Hereward had been blown up by bombs dropped by Italian planes. The Daily War Bulletin said 229 members of the crew had been rescued, including 26 seriously wounded.

(Confirmation of the Italian claim was immediately available in London.)

The 19-year-old Conte Rosso, travelling in convoy when she went down, apparently was transporting troop reinforcements to Italian garrisons in North Africa, since the newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma said fresh manpower was being convoyed across the Mediterranean by the Italian Navy.

(The Admiralty two days ago announced the sinking by a British submarine of a liner of approximately this size.)

In another phase of the war at sea, Il Popolo Di Roma said all Italian submarines in the Red Sea had returned to their Italian bases after a voyage of many weeks around Africa, during which the crews were on half rations. Two of the subs narrowly escaped disaster from mines, the paper said, shortly after they left Massaua, Eritrea, in April.

NO UNREST IN CAMP

Ottawa, May 30 (CP)—The Defence Minister, Hon. J. L. Ralston, said last night that investigation by military authorities indicated reports of ill-feeling at Petawawa, Ont., Camp between active army recruits and men called up for compulsory military training are unfounded.

He said reports received by him indicated there was no unrest in the camp "beyond the natural impatience of all ranks to get overseas."

The investigation was made following reports that ill-feeling had been aroused when active service units had been placed under canvas and their hutments made available to men called up for compulsory training.

FIRE DESTROYS THIRTY GARAGES, 3 RACING CARS

Blaze Wipes Out South Section of Garages at Indianapolis Speedway

RACE TO BE RUN

Indianapolis, May 30 (AP)—A fire that started in the south garage section of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, three hours before the scheduled start of the annual 500-mile race, today destroyed three race cars and 30 garages, burned three men slightly and caused damage estimated at $100,000 by Speedway officials.

Only one of the burned cars was entered in the race. The other two had not qualified.

The blaze damaged power lines leading into the speedway. The power failure affected the electric timing device by which the cars are clocked.

Three Men Burned

The three men burned were Jim Pherice, a member of the crew of race driver Kelly Petillo of Los Angeles; James Lynch of Chicago, a member of the Speedway technical committee, and Lloyd Barnes, an Indianapolis mechanic. They were treated at the Emergency Hospital on the Speedway grounds.

The cars of Mauri Rose, Rex Mays and Wilbur Shaw, the three drivers holding first row positions in the starting lineup, were in the garage section that burned but all were pulled to safety.

The six-cylinder rear-engine automobile which was to have been driven by George Barringer of Houston, Tex., was destroyed. The blaze started in the garage housing the Barringer car, said mechanic-owner Eddie Offutt, as gasoline Offutt was draining from the tank spilled and was ignited by static electricity or a match.

The rest of the race cars were saved.

Loss of Barringer's car reduced the starting field to 31—two less than the limit. A crash late yesterday eliminated young Sam Hanks of Alhambra, Calif., and his machine. Hanks' accident occurred as he was making a practice run.

Unconfirmed Nazi Report Claims Gen. Freyberg Killed

New York, May 30 —(AP)— The German radio, claiming to be quoting a Cairo radio station, today said Maj.-Gen. B. C. Freyberg, V.C., commander of the British and Imperial forces in Crete, had been killed when his plane crashed en route to Alexandria. Columbia Broadcasting System recorded the German broadcast.

(Confirmation was not immediately available in London or Cairo.)

Rashid Ali Goes To Iran After Help From Axis Fails

Came to Power Through Pro-Axis Coup D'etat Engineered Early in May

BRITISH OCCUPY UR

London, May 30 (CP)—Rashid Ali Al Gailani, anti-British premier of Iraq, has fled into neighboring Iran (Persia), officials quarters said today.

Rashid Ali, in power through a pro-Axis coup d'etat, had been leading Iraq forces against British authority since they first opened fire on Britain's treaty airdrome at Habbaniyah, Iraq, May 4.

He called for Axis aid to his cause of expelling British troops from Iraq, but apparently on account of Germany's preoccupation with the conquest of Crete, Axis help was limited to a trickle of warplanes and technicians.

The text of the London announcement:

"It is learned in official quarters in London that Rashid Ali has fled from Iraq.

"He has crossed the frontier into Iran, accompanied by Amin Zaki, his chief of staff, and the self-styled 'regent' Sharaf whom he purported to appoint Regent in place of the Emir Abdul Ilah."

Authoritative sources reported today that British forces had advanced to a point within five miles of the Iraq capital of Baghdad.

At the same time, the British Middle East Command said that another British column moving up the railroad along the Euphrates River had occupied Ur, the birthplace of Abraham, 110 miles northwest of Basra.

Naval Patrol Boat's Crew Escape Death

Quebec, May 30.—(CP)—Twelve men escaped death last night when their naval patrol boat, H.M.C.S. Madawaska, collided with the Schooner Tadoussac transport in the St. Lawrence River near St. Jean, on the nearby Island of Orleans.

How the collision occurred could not be ascertained but the schooner was said to have struck the Madawaska, on the Naval Control Service Patrol, in the centre, causing serious damage.

The captain's cabin on the Madawaska was reported to have been torn off and part of the starboard side of the boat was smashed in above the waterline.

Italian Aircraft Reported by R.A.F. in Iraq

Cairo, Egypt, May 30. —(AP) — The presence of Italian aircraft in Iraq was reported by the Royal Air force for the first time today.

It said R.A.F. patrols shot down three CR 42's yesterday near Khanuqta, which British ground forces are reported to have occupied.

British Cruiser Interrupts Celebration Of German Passengers on French Ship

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, May 30.—(CP)—Intercepted at sea by a British cruiser while passengers were celebrating with champagne their expected arrival at Martinique, the 8,379-ton French passenger ship Winnipeg is in Port-of-Spain Harbor and hundreds of her German passengers have been interned.

Two American-born women told today how scores of Germans bound for the French colony of Martinique threw hundreds of letters and other papers into the ocean after the cruiser had fired a shot across the Winnipeg's bow and escorted her to Trinidad.

Of the 751 passengers aboard, 210 Germans, 76 Austrians and 70 unclassified perosns have been interned pending investigation while the remaining passengers are being examined aboard the vessel.

The two American-born women among those already examined and released are Mrs. Antoine Pelseel and Mrs. Marcel Lowenstein, bound from Paris to Stamford Conn.

26-Day Voyage

The women, who are accompanied by their French husbands, told a dramatic story of their 26-day voyage from Marseille to Trinidad by way of Oran, Algeria, and Casblanca, French Morocco, in a vessel they said was intended to carry only a small fraction of the 751 accommodated.

Food was running low, they said, but champagne flowed freely Monday night in celebration of the expeted docking Tuesday at Martinique.

Suddenly, they said, at 2.30 a.m. a shot came across the Winnipeg's bow. Soon thereafter, they reported, scores of Germans rushed to the portholes and threw out letters and other papers. Throughout the next day, en route to Trinidad, papers continued to be thrown out until a trail of letters bobbed in the vessel's wake. Even typewriters went overboard, Mrs. Peissel said.

(The seizure of the French ship was reported Tuesday in Washington and the Vichy Government Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, called at the State Department for Information.)

French Use Humor On Restrictions Of Food and Coal

Vichy, May 30 —(AP)— Frenchmen are wielding their sharp wit against food restrictions, which is about all they are allowed to attack in their present circumstances.

Satiric political weekly sheets, once the pace-setters for humor, have disappeared, but their cartoonists go marching on in the daily press.

Typical is a cartoon of an artist showing a friend a painting he has just completed.

"Do you mean to tell me," the friend asks, eyeing a rich display of food on the canvas, "that you can do all that from memory?"

On the same order is the one about the young children saying: "Grandpa, tell us again about the indigestion you used to have five years ago."

Waiters' insistence on food tickets comes in for its share of "panning." A characteristic cartoon was one which showed a conductor going through a stalled train and saying, "Gentlemen, present your meat tickets. The engineer has just hit a cow."

Food restrictions are not the only ones which are made the butt of French humor. During the winter months it was largely directed against the shortage of coal. An artist at the time pictured a man telling his valet, "My hat and coat, James. I'm dining in tonight."

American Tourists Pour Into Canada On Memorial Day

Windsor, Ont., May 30 —(AP)— American tourists poured into Canada in record-breaking numbers at this port of entry today. Thousands had crossed the border before noon and indications were that all previous Decoration Day traffic figures would be shattered.

Bringing with them American dollars, so essential to Canada's war effort, the welcome visitors took advantage of the long holiday week-end to cross to this country.

At an early hour last night, long before darkness came and shortly following the closing of offices and factories in Detroit cars began to gather on the bridge and tunnel approaches.

Bismarck Survivors Arrive at English Port

An English Port, May 30—(CP)—Survivors of the shattered 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck, sunk by British naval forces in the North Atlantic last Tuesday, arrived here today. British ships rescued about 100 of the Bismarck's complement of 1,300 to 1,500 men.

PATRON COMPLAINS OF BEING "GYPPED"

Complaining he had been "gypped" and made a victim of sharpsters, Leonard Phillips, of Consecon, told police he had lost $20.00 while playing a gambling game at the carnival now showing at the Cricket Field on St. Paul St., Thursday. Later Traffic Officer Doug Ellis accompanied Mr. Phillips to the show lot, where the operator of the game in question, agreed to refund the man's money, but told police the game had been legitimate.

BANTAM SCOUT CAR OBJECT OF INTEREST

Seeming rather out-of-place as it was parked alongside expensive motors at the curb outside the Hotel Quinte this morning, a bantam scout military car was the object of considerable attention as passersby gave the strange appearing vehicle the once-over.

Considerably shorter of wheelbase and smaller in every other way than the conventional motorcar the drab-colored scout car was powered by an efficient four-cylinder motor and was equipped with four-wheel drive that is used to extensively in the army transport service. Without a top of any description, the vehicle will seat two passengers and has space for equipment to the rear of the seats. It can do 75 miles per hour on the highway or 35 miles per hour across open country, according to army officials. The scout car, passing through the city, was garaged at the armouries overnight.

ARRESTED FOR FAILURE TO ANSWER SUMMONS

Failure to answer his name when he was called in Tweed Police court on Thursday afternoon to answer charges of participation in a disturbance of the peace, brought Andrew Rikley Marlbank resident, additional trouble. He will appear in police court on Thursday next to answer the first charges and do some explaining to the bench as to his absence on Thursday. At present he is lodged in the county jail.

SEPARATE UNITS DRILL ON CAMPUS

The campus at the Belleville Collegiate resounded with the sound of marching feet last night when two separate units paraded and trained within the bounds of the school campus last evening.

Under Captain C. A. Cameron a complete company of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Battalion paraded with rifle drill being included in the evening's parade.

In another portion of the grounds the members of the Ontario Voluntary Constabulary were parading and drilling dressed in their natty O.V.C. uniforms.

Little Girl Resents Uncommunicativeness Of Wax Model in Store

Those wax figures that model women's fashionable attire in such a life-like manner aren't altogether up to the mark in other social amenities, at least so thinks a very diminutive young lady, who accompanied her mother on a shopping tour of a Front Street Department store yesterday afternoon.

The little miss, she is only a few years old, admired the model as it stood nearby in all its beauty of apparelled adornment, and finally spoke to it. Receiving no answer, she spoke a second time, and again disappointed, she resorted to the child's prerogative of showing her displeasure, by protruding her tongue in a very unmistakable manner in the general direction of the wax figure.

Without waiting to see the effect, she strode down the aisle of the shop to join her mother, pride of achievement glowing in her eyes.

Governor-General Will Inspect Creameries, Cheese Factories Here

According to information received by Chief Grader James L. Irwin of the Federal Department of Agriculture here, His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, Governor General of Canada, and Her Highness the Princess Alice, will pause in Belleville en route from Ottawa to Windsor.

While no specific time was mentioned, the information stated that Their Excellencies would arrive within a day or so. That would mean the Governor General's party would arrive either today or tomorrow.

His Excellency expressed the desire to visit one or more cheese factories and creameries in this district, and Department of Agriculture officials in Ottawa, selected the Cloverdale Cheese Factory near Wellington; the Foxboro Cheese Factory and the Belleville Creameries.

Officials of the various factories have been notified of the impending visit, and are extending all efforts to show Canada's Governor General and the Princess Alice, the Bay of Quinte's dairy products manufacturing plants at their best. The Governor General's party will be accompanied on their visit by local Department of Agriculture officials.

Ontario Intelligencer Newsboys Enjoy Hospitality Of Sims Shows

Fine Acts of Magician Thrill the Boys—Free Trips on the Various Rides Greatly Enjoyed.

Taking in all the "sights" and enjoying the rides with all their youthful enthusiasm, seventy-five Ontario Intelligencer newsboys and a quartette of "newsgirls" enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Fred Sims last night when they were taken on a conducted tour of Sims' Greater Shows now playing at the Cricket Field in aid of the Belleville Beaches Association.

Mr. Sims, who is indisposed, expressed his regret at being unable to be present, but assigned two of his executives to conduct the boys "around the lot."

"Fathered" by a member of the editorial staff of the newspaper, the parade of news youths left the offices on a noisy if harmless invasion of the shows, a few minutes after seven o'clock. Here they were met by a welcoming committee and the envy of hundreds of other youngsters, taken on the numerous rides and conducted through a number of the tented shows.

The rides, perhaps, came a bit fast for some of the youngsters, as they turned up at times quite white of face, and with strange feelings in the region of their belts, but no harm was done and by the time they had witnessed the first vaudeville performance, all physical disturbances were forgotten.

They thrilled at the magic and legerdemain of a magician, who caused rounds of merriment when he borrowed a dollar bill from one of the boys and accidentally burned it. All was well, however, when it turned up neatly concealed within a large-size potato which somehow had found its way into the pocket of another member of the news clan.

The boys saw the "floating lady;" heard a ventriloquist perform with a "Charlie McCarthy"; saw an attractive young lady sawn in two, and another stabbed with a dozen swords. It was delightful entertainment and the boys appreciated with cheers the foresight and generosity of Mr. Sims in extending them the invitation to visit his shows.

Alex. Simpson Killed When Truck Overturns

Alex. Simpson, well-known former Belleville athlete and employee of the Imperial Oil Company, was instantly killed Thursday night when the tank truck he was driving overturned in a ditch, according to meagre information received early today by Imperial Oil Company officials here.

The accident, the information revealed, occurred near Pembroke, Ont., to which place Simpson had been transferred from this city a few months ago.

Alex. was well-known and very popular in softball and baseball circles in the city and district. He was catcher for the Corby Softball team for two years and last year was elected Captain of the squad. During his stay here he was also associated with the Latta team of the South Hastings Baseball League. He was 35 years of age.

He joined the Imperial Oil Company staff eleven years ago and during that time has been connected with them in Tweed, the place of his birth, Toronto, Kingston and Belleville. An ironic touch of fate is seen in the fact that his late father met his death in identically the same manner. He leaves a wife and two small sons to mourn his loss.

INVENTIVE FOLK WAR PRODUCTIVE

Britons Working Their Genius Overtime, Refugees Help Too

London (CP)—The war has made thousands of scientifically-minded Britons invention conscious. Scores of novel suggestins, 95 per cent of them connected with warfare, are offered daily to various Government departments.

"Britain needs all the new war inventions she can get," said the honorary secretary of the Chartered Institute of Patent Agents. "Every device, however fantastic, is given consideration, because from the most extraordinary suggestions often come the germs of a revolutionary idea."

A spate of suggestions and inventions to combat night bombers comes after every heavy raid, no matter what part of the country is affected. These ideas so far "can be numbered by tens of thousands." European exiles, skilled technicians in their own countries, are trying to repay some of their debt to Britain by using their creative genius to combat the agressor. Many valuable suggestions have come from them.

Lessons Learned In Crete Will Deter Hitler From Invading Britain Says Halifax

New York, May 30 (CP)—The New York Times in a Washington dispatch today quoted Viscount Halifax as saying in an interview that the lesson learned in Crete will deter Hitler from attempting an invasion of Great Britain.

"Crete has shown the military experts of the world," the ambassador said yesterday, "the difficulty of parachutist landings upon an island even by a nation with prepondenant air power, which Germany was able to muster off the coast of Greece. In Britain, where our air force is very strong, an invasion would be many times more difficult if not impossible."

Lord Halifax said that in attaining the successes so far gained in Crete, the Germans "have paid a disportionately heavy price." By Britain's stout defence "we have gained what will probably be a decisive advantage for General Wavell who now is able to turn the balance of the scales against the Nazis in Iraq."

No Changes In Gov't Says Mr. Lapointe

Ottawa, May 30 — (CP) — No change has taken place in the Government, Justice Minister Lapointe told Commons yesterday in answer to a question from Conservative House Leader Hanson about the proposed retirement of Agriculture Minister Gardiner from the portfolio of National War Services.

(Mr. Gardiner was reported to have stated at a calf sale at Brampton, Ont., Tuesday, that he was making his last public appearance as Minister of National War Services and would devote his whole time to the Agriculture Department.)

Mr. Gardiner said possibly he carried "my usual practice of agreeing with the press a little too far." He said he probably made it possible for some person to interpret his words as an announcement.

In an interview later Wednesday Mr. Gardiner said that at Brampton he had been introduced as Minister of National War Services and after what had appeared in the newspapers regarding a new minister for that department he told the meeting it was possible he was no longer head of that department, but was concentrating on the Department of Agriculture.

Later he was asked at Brampton if his resignation was to be announced in Ottawa that day and he replied he did not know.

Conant May Serve \s Temporary Director Of Racing Association

Toronto, May 30 — (CP) — Attorney-General Gordon Conant of Ontario today would not confirm reports of last night that he would serve as a temporary director of the incorporated Canadian Racing Associations until a current dispute between the I.C.R.A. and the Thoroughbred Breeders Association is settled.

"I have received no invitation," said Mr. Conant. "If and when I receive it I will consider it and make my reply as soon as possible".

The dispute between the T.B.A. and the I.C.R.A. was reported today to be nearing settlement. If the invitation is extended and Mr. Conant accepts, he would replace Fred Orpen, manager of the Metropolitan Racing Association and operator of Long Branch race track in suburban Toronto.

The main difference between the two bodies is refusal of the I.C.R.A. to recognize Ryland H. New of Oakville, Ont., as the Breeders' representative to the I.C.R.A. Board.

Rev. D. T. McClintock Accepts Call To Toronto Church

Rev. D. T. McClintock, of Tabernacle United Church has accepted a call to become minister of Fairlawn United Church, Toronto, as stated supply for a period of one year, it was announced this morning by Mr. McClintock. The vacancy in the pulpit at Fairlawn United Church was occasioned by the recent resignation of the minister, Rev. E. S. Sinclair owing to ill-health and with no time to select another minister before Conference a unanimous call was extended to Mr. McClintock who, it had been announced, was retiring from the ministry.

A former Presbyterian, Rev. Mr. McClintock came to Belleville from Wellington United Church, Brantford, and although having reached retirement age, willingly accepted the call to Fairlawn Church. He entered the ministry 37 years ago, his first charge being Grand Valley Presbyterian Church. From there he went to Alexandra Presbyterian Church, Brantford, and then to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church at Nelson, B.C.

At the time of the union of Presbyterian and Methodist Churches, Mr. McClintock entered into evangelistic work and for seven years was engaged in this capacity with former Presbyterian and United Churches across Canada.

Mr. McClintock is no stranger to pulpits of Toronto churches, having been stationed in that city for a number of years before coming to Belleville. During his ministry in Toronto he was co-pastor of High Park Avenue United Church and for six years was minister of Carman United Church. From there he went to Brantford and four years ago accepted the call to Tabernacle United Church in Belleville.

With the forced retirement of their pastors, the official board of Fairlawn United Church, after telephoning, came to Belleville and interviewed Mr. McClintock, who accepted the call. Fairlawn United Church is at the corner of Yonge and Fairlawn streets in North Toronto and has a congregation of 800. Mr. McClintock will assume his new charge on July 1st.

QUINTS PRESENT AMBULANCE TO THE RED CROSS

Ceremony Could Not be Carried Out on Birthday, Wednesday, Due to Rain

HAD 'MIKE' FRIGHT

Callander, Ont., May 30 (CP). — The celebrations attending the seventh birthday of the Dionne Quintuplets were carried on Wednesday with formal presentation by the quintuplets of an ambulance to the Canadian Red Cross. On the actual birthday a downpour of rain prevented this ceremony outside the nursery, where the new ambulance, business-like in its drab khaki, stood ready for the formal presentation.

There was lots of birthday left for the Quints themselves, surrounded by stacks of presents from all parts of the continent and from all sorts of people. But it seemed last night, when the quints made an appearnce on a broadcast program, that they actually got most excitement out of an impromptu gift for their father. Oliva Dionne snatched a big butterfly outside the nursery, placed it in a glass bottle, and for hours it attracted the quints while numerous presents from far and near remained for later consideration.

Had "Mike Fright".

The famous five suffered an attack of "mike fright" for a time during the broadcast and when they got their cue to give greetings to Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe over the air very little could be heard. Later in the program they recovered their poise and joined in a rousing rendition of an old French folk song.

Five demure little ladies, they were seated on small chairs before a low-placed microphone, their parents and other relatives, newsmen and photographers and others crowding the room for the broadcast. The quints were clad in flowered blue print dresses with flowers in their hair.

Dr. Dafoe, who brought them into the world seven years ago, was in a Toronto hospital recovering from an operation, and thus missed his first quints birthday since that hectic morning in 1934 when he attended their birth.

Sims Shows Attract Crowds

Highly entertaining in their variety and color the Sims Greater Shows, currently playing at the Belleville Beaches Association, are attracting large crowds. Aided by ideal weather, the shows proved to be the mecca for thousands of spectators last night who enjoyed to the full the many entertaining and educational highlights provided by the management.

There is color and variety aplenty. Brilliantly lighted ferris wheels, the ubiquitous merry-go-round, caterpillars and numerous other rides are not only attracting the children but large quotas of grownups as well.

Various concessions, ring-throwing attractions, the ever-present bingo, pitch-penny, and other games are proving extremely popular. The penny arcade where one can enjoy himself for an hour with a few coppers is proving a favorite spot for patrons.

The tented shows are clean and entertaining. Here one can see a lady floating in midair; a Charlie McCarthy who does practically everything his original prototype does; attractive young ladies stabbed by numerous swords, only to emerge in "one piece"; in another case the famous "cutting the girl in two with a saw"; feats of magic and legerdemain, and not to mention a trio of dancing girls who bring the mysterious dances of the Orient, the Far East and the southern islands.

In the various games of chance, many handsome prizes are being given away. There are hammer-wielding devices, a novel engraving artists; a photographer who snaps your picture while you wait, and numerous other colorful novelties that help to round out a pleasant evening's entertainment.

The Sims Shows will play here the remainder of the week, closing on Saturday night.

BRITAIN'S WAR AIM

Germany, which has five times in the last century broken the peace of the world, must never be able to commit such misdeeds again, said Captain Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, telling the British Commons of the problems of peace after victory and of Britain's only aim, "a lasting settlement and internal peace of the continent as a whole."

Britain has no motive of self-interest prompting to economic exploitation of Germany or of the rest of Europe he affirmed.

Could the nations now suffering in serfdom to Hitler have heard this address they would be cheered in their days of torture, sweat and tears through which they are passing under the curse of Hitler, to know there is a day coming which will be to every nation's plain advantage, a day which only British and Allied victory can bring to the world and a day which will be the herald of economic health in every country.

Captain Eden painted the giant task which will rest upon the British Empire, her Allies the United States and South America in carrying out the policy which will be necessary, a policy of social security abroad as well as at home and in working with others to prevent starvation after the armistice, the currency of disorders throughout Europe and wide fluctuations of unemployment and prices which were to cause so much misery between the two wars. He drew a picture of continental Europe ending the war starved and bankrupt of all foods and raw materials.

The British Empire and the American peoples in the two continents of the North and South have a glorious opportunity, according to the Foreign Secretary, because they possess material means and have the will and intention to evolve a postwar moral order which seeks no selfish national advantage for any one of them, an order where each member of the family shall realize its own character and perfect its own gifts in liberty of conscience and person.

He pointed out the peculiar troubles of transition from the armistice to the desired peace brotherhood of nations with due liberty to each to develop its own balanced economic life and its characteristic culture. It will require an international economic system which will be capable of translating technical possibilities of production into actual plenty and maintaining the whole population in continuous, fruitful activity. That will be difficult, he said.

He told how "the British Empire will actually possess overseas enormous stocks of food and materials which we are accumulating so as to ease the problems of overseas producers during the war and of reconstructed Europe after the war."

FASCIST DIVISION SURRENDERS

Every few days comes news of more Italian surrenders in that part of former Italian East Africa which is known as Ethiopia.

The Italians whose efforts in empire-making have been folded up completely sought to expand empire by robbery. Great empire-building is not done in that way. The empire-maker has to serve those whom he rules. Italy did not do that. She allowed her Fascists, hungry for self-glory, to crush free peoples. The result has been hatred of every institution Italian by the Ethiopians and the Albanians and a readiness to revolt when the occasion presented itself. What the Ethiopians, though unpracticed in the ways of modern war, did in helping Britain and the Empire troops to redeem the Ethiopian kingdom shows clearly the folly of Mussolini's colonial dreams and the impossibility of building an empire on the Fascist foundation.

Americans have been advised by the New York Times to remember the old principle that in order to sell one must buy and that by buying British goods "we benefit American trade as much as we do British." Another comment is "by buying British goods today we help the British to help themselves."

Canadians might take the suggestion and buy British goods wherever possible. They know the quality of British goods. They know that the British stamp is the guarantee of first class workmanship and quality. That is the worldwide experience of those who have dealt with the British.

The Suwannee River has its source in the Okefenokee Swamp of Georgia.

A "make-up" man has a peculiar mind,
Be he normally merry or solemn.
For when he's a line or two short you will find
He takes on an air of exotical kind—
And it shows at the end of the column.

As I feverishly follow the last escapade
Of Gladys, the modernized Borgia,
I read her confession—then this is displayed:
The Suwannee River begins in a glade
In Swamp Okefenokkee in Georgia.

When I've read of the run of my favorite horse,
Or picked out the winner at croquet,
I'm expecting the odds, but I read—why of course!
The Suwannee River can be traced to its source
In the Georgian Swamp Okefenokee.

Whether a make-up man thinks sudden change is a rest,
Or irrelevant matter a joke, he
Surely could get something else off his chest
Than: The Suwannee River is seen at its best
In the Georgian Swamp Okefenokee.

"AN outrageous racket" is what Judge Wearing of London, Ont., termed the indiscriminate tooting of automobile horns during wedding parades. He has ordered the police of that city to stop the practice immediately. While it may be the only chance for the groom to "toot his own horn" the practice is one that amuses only those involved, and is a nuisance to the remainder of the populace.

IT'S A PLANT!

(News Item:—Berlin. May 27—The Voelkischer Boebachter, Adolf Hitler's official Nazi daily, advised Germans, in effect, to butter their bread with daisies. Chickweed, nettles, dandelions, butterburs and caseweeds were other plants suggested for wartime soups, gravy and vegetable dishes.)

The Hun shouldn't mutter of shortage of butter
Or if margarine stocks become hazy,
For now it is said, he can butter his bread
With the petallic gold of the daisy.

If his Teutonic belly should crave jam or jelly
To ease his immediate needs.
He should make the most, of his one piece of toast
Covered thickly with cockleburr weeds.

Or if small Hans and Fritz, in the midst of the blitz,
Should demand foods of some special nature,
He must give them the seeds of trees, plants or weeds,
And others of like nomenclature.

He mustn't feel hurt if he has no dessert
For in order to feel much alive, he
Can order his lunch, ersatz bread with a bunch
Of succulent fresh poison ivy.

SO pleased was Fred Sims, genial proprietor of the Sims Shows now playing here, with the fact that his 1941 opening day in Trenton was the first in six years not marred by rain, that he gave Chief of Police William Bain of that town a substantial cheque for the British War Victims' Fund. "It is not a gift," Fred smiled, "It is insurance. Something to bring a little comfort to those grand British kiddies."

PARACHUTIST Max Schmeling, erstwhile heavyweight champion of the world, is no more. War is no respecter of persons. Schmeling met his death when he attempted to escape after being taken prisoner by British Tommies. There were no cheering thousands to give him acclaim; no loquacious manager to tell the world "We was robbed." The lethal fists of Champion Joe Louis removed him from the fistic world, and the lethal lead of a justified Briton removed him from this terrestrial sphere. He discovered that British soldiers, like American boxers are not to be intimidated nor trifled with.

MEMORIAL DAY

Not yet, not yet, the dream you kept,
Not yet the everlasting good;
Not yet the final barrier swept
That bars the way to brotherhood.

The tyrant mind still worships force,
Insisting power alone makes right;
And blind to any gentler source,
Puts all its trust in dynamite.

All you who died for liberty,
And left to us the torch to bear;
Look down upon our world and see
Sad Christians slaughtered while at prayer.

Each time they said, oh glorious dead,
Yours was the war to banish strife;
But once again the fields grow red,
And madmen squander human life.

Now with memorial flags and flowers,
And words of praise we come again;
And wonder, if these sons of ours
Like you must also die in vain?

Things The Germans Want to Know

By Bernard Newman for the British Ministry of Information

An officer of the French counterspy service once remarked to me: "Our greatest problem is not the German spy, but people who do not mean any harm."

He was right. I could quote dozens of confirmatory examples from my own experience. Some of the men reading these lines will remember the Battle of the Somme in 1916. The first idea was a surprise attack—by far the best form. Information continuously leaked over to the Germans, however. I was one of the plumbers deputed to trace the leak.

I went back to Amiens, the great railway centre. My disguise was very simple; no whiskers or grease paint. I was a British private soldier and I pretended to be half tight—a very easy disguise. For three weeks I hung about public houses frequented by French railwaymen.

It was rather boring. Then one evening I met a Frenchman who turned out to be a signalman. Rubbing his hands, he announced to his friends at the bar: "Ah, my lads, the old Boche is going to get it in the neck now. Another 11 train loads of ammunition up today—two train loads of guns. Old Jerry is going to taste his own medicine."

That might be a flash in the pan, so I went back the next night, and the next. When I arrested that man he nearly went through the roof. "What!" he cried, "me helping the enemy! My dear sir you never made a bigger mistake in your life—it's exactly the other way round. My friends at the bar were rather down in the mouth because of the knocks we've been taking at Verdun. I set myself to cheer them up—and I've done it. Helping the enemy indeed! I've been performing a valuable national service!"

He was quite sincere. I never saw a man so taken back as that signalman when, during his trial, I was able to prove that among his friends at the bar was a German agent, gratefully lapping up all the information he handed out. I never heard a man sob like it in my life — never want to hear a man sob like it again. But all the sobbing in the world could not save him and—far more important—all the sobbing in the world could not save the lives of thousands of British soldiers; lives which might have been saved if the Somme had been a surprise attack.

Instead, as some of my readers can confirm, the Germans knew everything we did, because men like that French signalman could not keep their mouths shut.

Here is one of our most serious problems of the war.

It is important to realize that everybody knows something which Hitler would like to know. The information may be gained at work, or from relatives, in factories or in the forces. It may only be fragmentary, but it is none the less important.

Many people help the German Secret Service merely because they do not know how it works. Perhaps they have been misled by the films—they are looking for a man with the face of a Conrad Veidt and a bevy of glamorous blondes.

German agents depend very largely upon their unpaid and unwitting helpers. Their methods are not dramatic, nor do they need to be. Each day may provide them with fragments for their jigsaw puzzles.

The ramifications of those puzzles extend far and wide. And that is the lesson for Canada.

'Our Job To Combine With Britain'

From an Editorial by Freda Kirchwey in the Nation, New York Liberal weekly

It all goes together, because it is a state of mind. You placate Hitler and Mussolini and Franco and the Japanese. You prefer soft words to hard ones, and words to acts. You try to buy what you dare not command. You refuse to recognize facts when they are uncomfortable; and you always prefer diplomatic manoeuvres to sturdy resistance.

Now it is over. The gentlemen of Vichy whose robes of office have won such unctuous admiration, are finally admitted to be stark naked even by the bemused officials in Washington. Nothing is left for us but the necessity to act, and to plan our actions in the light of one cold, shining fact. In Europe we have only Hitler to deal with. There are Frenchmen left, and no doubt 90 percent. of them hate Hitler with an intensity we cannot even imagine. But there is no France. There are Spaniards, but no Spain. These and the other lands that have been conquered and occupied are no longer nations; they are raw materials and factories and above all bases; and they belong to Adolph Hitler.

Our job is immeasurably difficult and absolutely inescapable. We can no longer dodge and prepare ourselves to act at some remove in the future. Our job is to combine today with Great Britain—and with every existing anti-Nazi element in every country—to defeat Hitler by all the forces at our joint disposal. If this means sending an army to England or Africa we must do it. Certainly it does not mean that now. We have no army ready to send, and if we had, the sending of it would interfere with tasks that need doing immediately and at top speed. But it may mean supplying warships and planes, both to protect the goods we ship to Britain and to prevent the Nazis from seizing new strategic points of attack. Specifically it may mean collaborating with the British fleet and the forces of General de Gaulle to occupy the Portuguese and French islands and the French African ports before the Germans get there.

It means, too, producing goods done or thought we could possibly do. It surely means using American ships to carry those goods to the fighting fronts; and this in turn makes it necessary to wipe out the last legalistic pretense of "neutrality" that stands in the way of our full aid. It means freezing the credits of the Axis powers and ruthlessly preventing goods from reaching them, by whatever round-about routes. It means breaking off diplomatic relations, which no longer serve even as a useful source of information, and throwing out the agents of our acknowledged enemies.

Perhaps more than all, it means carrying on an imaginative political war, in which we make use of every anti-Fascist group and individual still free in any country on earth; giving them encouragement and support — and arms, where possible. It means, in short, an acceptance of the total meaning of total war; and this, I am afraid, demands a revolutionary change in Washington. The appeasement state of mind must be blasted out of the places of power or the Fascists will win the battles of the future as they have won every major battle in the past.

But this we need not allow. We, the citizens of a free republic, can end the policy of dodging and cringing. We have only to say what we want — out loud and in one voice.

ON THE RECORD
By DOROTHY THOMPSON
On Style

Much will have been written about the President's address before this column appears. I should like to call attention, therefore, to only one aspect of it: Its style. In the last decade we have been treated, or subjected, to floods of oratory, to stirring cries, denunciations, rancorous debate. We have listened to the roarers and the menacers. Across the oceans Hitler's blare has sounded and Churchill's silver scorn.

But the American people heard, on Tuesday night, the most perfect and complete expression of a case that has been uttered anywhere in the world since the outbreak of this war. For reason, simplicity, candor, total absence of malice; for structure, form balance, climax, it will rank among the great speeches of history.

It was a speech that anybody could understand—the school-boy; the taxi driver; the worker on the assembly belt; the provincial housewife.

Yet it was a masterpiece of the spoken world; a textbook classic.

It was not oratory. It was speech; not addressed to masses, but to people—to individual persons. It was communication. Its whole undertone was one of exquisite courtesy. It admitted "a decent respect for the opinion of mankind." Someone who had been thinking a long time, through complicated and confused situations, had brought complete order complete clarity into his own mind; he had reduced everything to essentials; he had organized those essentials in their precise places; he had found the simplest, truest, cleanest words to express those essentials.

And then he sat down with us, and said it seemed, "I know you want to know how things are — well, they are like this."

And listening, we knew they are like this. Just exactly like this. When he stopped speaking, we were quiet, and then, suddenly we felt happy—happy and free.

That is the function of free speech. To make people more free. To take shackles off their minds and off their wills; bring light into their intelligences, understanding into their hearts, and to put marrow into their bones.

The speech was a work of art.

What does that mean? Why is it important to emphasize style?

Because the content always determines the form in a work of art. The work of art is truth made form. Content and form are completely integrated. They are inseparable from each other. The realization of this is what ola meant when he said, "The style is the Man."

A brilliant liar, a masterful demagogue isolates a fact or even a segment of truth expands it out of proportion, searches out the words that appeal to the particular emotions of anger, fear or passion that can be evoked by that fact, paints images, sets spotlights, floods, colors, dazzles. He injects everywhere into his words his own personal magnetism. He shakes and unseats the personalities of his listeners, he disarms their minds he makes them putty in his hands. Detach his words from himself and they disintegrate. They cannot stand alone.

But the great writer or speaker sets words stone on stone. They build into an architectural structure. They may be decorated with gargoyles of wit or adorned with the painted glass of metaphor but they need neither. Erected they stand forever and they stand alone. They are greater than the person who uttered them, and somehow apart from the person who uttered them. For the truth has commanded the speaker. It has laid hold on him—not he on it. And through him it lays hold on all.

Consider the curious way in which the President's climax was an anti-climax.

His whole listening audience reached that climax before he did.

Not once had he exhorted them. Not once had he "whipped them up." In the whole speech there is not a single direct appeal to emotion. There is only appeal to reason and realism—to "common sense"—to the sense common in men who are all endowed with reason. Emotion follows realization. It is not used to invoke it.

The President made statements of fact, he marshalled those together that belonged together, and he drew logical conclusions. He moved on to more facts, and more conclusions, by the same process.

Therefore, when he came to the whole conclusion and uttered the words "Therefore with profound consciousness of my responsibilities"—his consciousness was already everybody's consciousness, and his responsibilities everybody's responsibilities.

And his pledge our pledge.

A distinguished alien, not an exile, resident for years in America, stood up after a pause and said, "Tomorrow I shall take out my first papers. This is my home."

CRYSTAL PALACE

Ninety years ago the Crystal Palace, a magnificent structure of iron and glass built especially for the London industrial exposition of 1851, was regarded as one of the wonders of architecture.

Recently the last vestiges of the Crystal Palace were demolished to salvage steel for British armaments and to remove a conspicuous landmark in London for Nazi bombers.

Although similar expositions had been previously held on a small scale, the London industrial exposition in the Crystal Palace was the first to which the term "world's fair" was popularly applied.

The royal commission in charge of the world's fair of 1851 was acquainted with the great conservatory of iron and glass that the architect and horticulturist Joseph Paxton had built for the Duke of Devonshire at Chatsworth in Derbyshire in 1836, and it commissioned Paxton to design a similar but larger glass and iron structure for the great Victorian fair in London.

This structure of iron and glass consisted of a central hall 1,608 feet long and three transepts, the central one of which was 390 feet long.

For his Crystal Palace, which contained 900,000 square feet of glass, the architect was knighted and became Sir Joseph Paxton.

The two 282-foot water towers at the ends, and the great north tower, anticipated the modern skyscraper.

In 1853 and 1854 Paxton supervised the removal of the Crystal Palace and its re-erection on a 200-acre tract of land at Sydenham, in the suburbs of London.

Until the central part of the structure was destroyed by fire in 1936, the Crystal Palace continued to be used for concerts, flower, animal and mechanical shows, moving pictures, boxing and cricket matches, football games, sideshows and all sorts of exhibitions.

During the Great War the Crystal Palace was used by the royal naval division for training purposes.

German zeppelins did not bomb it because it served as a good guide for night attacks on London.

For several years after the war it housed the Imperial War Museum.

The original cost of the Crystal Palace was 1,500,000 pounds sterling.

When the water towers were recently pulled down they yielded 1,500 tons of scrap iron for British armaments.

LAY SHIP KEELS ON ROCKY SHELF ON MAINE COAST

Far-Seeing Ship-Builder Makes Ready for Construction of Big Fleet of Merchant Liners for British Trade

By JACK PILLSBURY

South Portland, Maine (CP) — The day dreams that William S. Newell had 20-odd years ago mean today that Britain will have in record time 30 brand new 10,000-ton freighters to add to the Atlantic line of communications.

The vessels needed so acutely in the "Battle of the Atlantic" will soon be assembled in a novel shipyard now taking form on the edge of this cape across from the shipping centre of Portland.

Workmen are just scooping out dirt to make a big hole and are erecting concrete walls and floors, so they can build seven ships at a time in three big new drydocks. When the ships are ready to float they will simply open the gates at high tide and push the boats out. When the water ebbs out at low tide, the gates will be closed and more keels will be laid.

Good Location

During the First Great War Mr. Newell was engineering and works manager of the old Bath company, and one Sunday afternoon he happened to be in Portland on the Eastern Promenade, a height affording a fine view of the harbor and the cape that is South Portland.

His shipbuilding eye noted what a splendid location the little makers of wooden boats had for their work. They were on a gentle slope down to the sea, and near the deep-water channel. It looked good all around. Newell dreamed about it a bit and then walked on.

Twenty-three years passed. Then came another sunny afternoon. It was last October, the place was the New York offices of a firm of naval architects, designers of many of the ships built at Bath.

"How would you like to build some cargo ships for England?" asked William F. Gibbs, head of the firm. "I'd like it," replied Mr. Newell.

"It means a lot of perspiration. They need them in a hurry." "I'd rather sweat now than bleed later."

"But they want odd boats, just slow ships, old reciprocating engines, Scotch boilers." "We'll give them the engines and boilers they want and we'll paint the ships pink, if that's the way they want them."

A boy brought a chart of Portland Harbor. Newell pointed out the spot he had studied that day during the First Great War.

But Agreement Safe

It took six weeks to make the deal. Finally, early in December, R. Cyril Thompson, head of the British purchasing group, set sail for London with the copies of the agreement. He sailed on the Western Prince. The Western Prince was torpedoed. Mr. Thompson spent eight hours on a life raft in the middle of the Atlantic before he was rescued. He still had the agreement.

Five months have passed. South Portland today shows plenty of evidence of work. The dirt is being moved at the rate of 7,000 yards a day. Archibald M. Main, vice-president of the Bath concern, explains the big point about the South Portland location.

"There's a rock shelf about 30 feet beneath the earth's surface," he says. "We are scooping out down to this bedrock. The concrete will form three big drydocks. In one of these we can build three ships at a time, and two ships at a time in each of the other two drydocks. Cranes can lower material to men in the docks, and they will be protected somewhat from the weather and wind.

"When the ship is ready for launching, we will simply open a gate and let the 17-foot tide do the job for us. It eliminates all the cost and difficulty of launching, and the fact we are near the deep channel means that the only limit to the size of the ships we can build is the size of our docks, and they will be quite large."

Necessary to Control Prices Of Gasoline And Consumption Says Controller

Toronto, May 29 CP)—G. R. Cottrelle, oil controller in the Department of Munitions and Supply, said in a statement here today that it is "necessary to control" prices of gasoline and that "we are faced with a curtailment in consumption whether we like rationing or not."

Mr. Cottrelle said he could not say when price conrtol would come into effect.

"Oil tankers ordinarily in use to supply the United States and Canadian markets from Gulf ports, the Dutch West Indies and South American countries are being drawn on for the trans-Atlantic service," said Mr. Cottrelle. "There is no doubt that we are faced with a curtailment in consumption whether we like rationing or not."

It is doubtful if oil rationing would be extended to homes in Eastern Canada now using that fuel, said Mr. Cottrelle. However, the situation in British Columbia is different. All oil supplies for that province are shipped in by tankers. "There are a lot of big buildings in British Columbia on oil heating. They may have to go on coal as a matter of necessity as the oil may not be available.

The UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PLAN

To the Employer...

Contributions to the Unemployment Insurance Fund become payable as from July 1st, 1941.

Contributions are made by the employer and the employee, and are paid by the purchase of Unemployment Insurance stamps by the employer from the Post Offices.

The employee's contributions are deducted from his wages by the employer.

Stamps will be affixed to a special book, called the Insurance Book, by the employer. The book is the employee's record of contributions, and when he becomes unemployed it forms the record from which insurance benefits may be paid. Full details will be sent to you when you have returned the postcard attached to a form which is now in the mails.

The plan of procedure has been adopted after consultation with employer and employee associations and is one which has been based upon thirty years' experience in Great Britain.

The Dominion Government adds 20% to the combined employee-employer contributions, and in addition, pays the administration costs which include the operation of a National Employment Service for the convenience of employers and employees.

Contributions are payable by all persons while in employment and by their employers, with the exceptions listed in the panel below.

The first duty of every employer will be to REGISTER WITH THE COMMISSION by completing the postcard attached to a form which is now in the mails, and obtaining and issuing insurance books for all his employees. If there is doubt as to whether your employees, or any of them, are insurable, ask for instructions when you return the postal card. If you do not receive a form through the mail go to the nearest Post Office and ask for one. All employers must complete registration prior to June 14th, 1941.

The Commission feels that it can be assured of the full cooperation of all employers. Nevertheless, attention is drawn to the fact that registration is compulsory and any failure to register is an infraction of the law and is subject to penalties.

Aircraft Repair Depot Team Doubles Score Against Bata Squad

Trenton, May 29 — The Aircraft Repair boys from the Trenton Airport doubled the score against the Bata softball team from Frankford last night in the Trenton Softball League. The score was 18 to 9.

The Aircraftmen started in the first stanza to collect runs when Harnden, the first man up, hit for a double. Four other hits in the same frame netted four runs. From that time on their lead was never seriously threatened.

The Bata men although they collected 13 hits were unable to make their hits count and a number of runners were left stranded on bases.

Davis, on the mound for the winners, kept the Bata men limited to four hits until the sixth frame when he eased up to allow five more hits. He struck out eight and walked four. Chard, hurling for the Bata men, was unable to limit the heavy hitting opponents and gave up 22 hits.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Howie were guests of honor at a party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. On Saturday Mr. Howie was presented with a beautiful lamp by the Post Office staff, in honor of his marriage.

Mr. E. Ormonde Butler, local barrister, is in Toronto, today attending the 10th reunion of his graduation class from Osgoode Hall. The class reunion banquet will be held at the Albany Club this evening.

Friends of Mrs. R. A. Backus were sorry to learn of the sudden death in Picton on Wednesday of her uncle Mr. Andrew Van de Water.

Honoring Mrs. Cecil Warren, who is leaving to reside in Lindsay, about twenty-five members of St. George's Guild entertained for her at an afternoon tea held on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Collyer, Herchimer Avenue. The spacious rooms were most attractive with Spring flowers. During the afternoon, Mrs. Trump, past president, presented Mrs. Warren with a beautiful pair of book ends, Mrs. Warren thanking her friends most graciously. An expression of appreciation to Mrs. Collyer for her hospitality was made at the conclusion of the very pleasant afternoon.

Masses of Spring flowers indoors and the colorful beauty of the garden lent charm to the afternoon tea held yesterday at the home of Mrs. W. C. Mikel, William Street, by members of St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E. A large number of guests attended and after tea they lingered in the garden, admiring its profusion of bloom and excellent planning. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. E. J. Neate, regent of the Chapter, and Miss Margaret Curlette of Toronto, who is Mrs. Mikel's guest. A former resident of the city, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Curlette, Miss Curlette is a prominent educationist. She was formerly headmistress of the Presbyterian Ladies' College in Toronto. Former friends welcomed the opportunity of chatting with her yesterday. Miss Helen Blair and Mrs. Bert Docter invited the guests to the tea room where Mrs. A. E. McColl, Mrs. George Graham, Mrs. F. S. Lazier and Mrs. J. R. Abrams poured tea. The tea table was lovely centred with a bowl of roses. Mrs. E. Robson, Mrs. G. Watkin and Mrs. W. Gilbert were conveners and they were assisted in the dining room by Mrs. A. E. Chaplin, Mrs. Arthur Simpson, Mrs. W. R. Strachan, Mrs. H. Gibson, Mrs. R. Rodgers, Mrs. E. Lang, Mrs. C. Bishop and Mrs. H. Brown. The treasurers were Mrs. W. R. Stark and Mrs. H. A. Singer. An added pleasure for the guests was the tea cup reading by Miss Aylesworth. The home cooking table was in charge of Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mrs. E. Thomas and Mrs. D. Rowe. Sale of tickets on the handsome bag made by Mrs. Macoun and presented to the Chapter was looked after by Mrs. H. Fenn, Miss L. McRae being the winner.

HICKS—SILLS

Picton, May 30.—(Special)—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Sills, East Lake Road, was the scene of a pretty wedding at eleven o'clock, Wednesday, May 28, when their eldest daughter, Nina Alma became the bride of Vernon Lyall, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hicks, Cherry Valley. Rev. L. B. Smith of Addison, Ont., a former minister at Cherry Valley, officiated and Mr. F. E. Rice played the wedding music.

Lilacs and vari-colored tulips banked the archway of white streamers from which was suspended a white wedding bell and similar flowers decorated the home.

The bride wore a gown of blue embroidered triple sheer, with white accessories and a pearl necklace. She carried Sweetheart roses and maidenhair fern.

Miss Aleita Unger, Yerexville, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing crushed strawberry sheer with white accessories, and carried American Beauty roses. Mr. Douglas Moore, Cherry Valley, attended the groom.

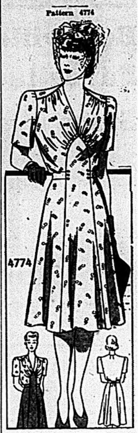
A reception followed the ceremony with pink streamers and pink flowers decorating the two long tables. The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake. Mrs. W. Sills, mother of the bride, chose a gown of Airforce blue crepe, while Mrs. A. Hicks, the groom's mother, was in navy and white. The assistants were Miss Madeline Unger, Miss Dorothy Rorke, Mrs. C. Henderson of Madoc, and Miss Olive Sills, the latter also admitting the guests, wearing a party frock of dusty rose.

The groom's gift to his bride was a gold compact; to the bridesmaid, a silver casserole; to the best man, a gold tie clasp.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Hicks left for Ottawa and points east the bride travelling in a dress of midnight blue crepe, navy coat and hat with white accessories. On their return they will reside at Cherry Valley.

Panel Novelty In Soft Dress

Pattern 4774



By ANNE ADAMS

There's a slim-as-an-arrow look about this soft Anne Adams frock that will make you confident of your attractive appearance wherever you wear it. It's Pattern 4774, and easy to make with the Sewing Instructor for guidance. The most flattering feature of the whole style is that tapering panel that goes up at the front, forming a point just below the graceful, new low neckline. The shirring that is held in place by the top of the panel gives all the softness you need through the bust-line, and there are gathers just below the curved shoulder yokes, too. The back of the dress is made simply, with one smart panel down the skirt. You will like this style in all one fabric—say a cool-looking print — or else with the top and sleeves in gay contrast.

Pattern 4774 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3 1-4 yards 39-inch fabric.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

FOXBORO Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Foxboro Y.P.U. was held in the Sunday School rooms. The President opened the meeting with a poem. After singing hymn 43, prayer was led by Miss Milligan. The business was transacted, and then Edythe Cook took charge of the worship service. After quiet music was played, hymn 45 was sung.

Mary Helliwell then read the scripture lesson. Edythe Cook gave the explanation. After hymn 181 V. Sherry led in prayer. The topic was then given by Edythe Cook. Following the offering the benediction was repeated in unison. Miss Milligan then gave a questionnaire in form of a book review. The meeting was closed by the National Anthem.

CARMEL Y.P.U.

The closing meeting until autumn of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held at Carmel United Church on Wednesday evening, May 14th.

Miss Hazel Hicks opened the meeting with community singing. Miss Irene Haines read the scripture lesson. Hymn number 347 was sung. Miss M. Waddell led in prayer. A reading was given by Miss M. Waddell following which Misses Ethel and Evelyn Fox played a guitar duet. Mrs. Percy Reynolds read a story. Miss Iva Horton gave an instrumental. Hymn number 296 was sung following which the National Anthem was sung. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. Recreation was given by Mr. Percy Reynolds, Mr. Glen Ross and Miss Ethel Fox. Refreshments of pie and ice cream were then enjoyed by everyone.

Harper's Bazaar says:
It's a WHITE SEASON

● Frilly blouses, petticoats, gloves, ruffles, collars — most everything is white! WHITE IS RIGHT this season. But white things must be washed frequently and repeated washings turn them yellowish, unless Blue is added. A swish or two of Blue in the final rinsing water on wash day assures the sparkling snowy whiteness that fashion demands — and it costs only a cent or two a month!

RECKITT'S BLUE
PREVENTS CLOTHES FROM TURNING YELLOW

Mary Anderson and Donald Douglas are the high spirited duo in this scene from "Cheers for Miss Bishop," the new romantic drama starring lovely Martha Scott, now showing at the McCarthy Theatre with the extra added hit, "Men of the Lightship," stirring story of war on the high seas.

Fashion Flashes

NO MATTER how little or how much you are prepared to spend, you'll find a smart and wearable print in every price bracket. Neat and pretty is a soft green rayon crepe with a feathery white leaf design. A draped neckline finished with a deepplaced bow, buttons all the way down, groups of pleats and a low curved hip-yoke make for high style.

DRESSING UP a simple frock is easy. To perk up a dark blue or black frock, one shop suggests hat and bag or belt of red patent leather.

AS A CHANGE from the solid-tone blouse, there are delightful printed blouses to dress up dark suits. A smart little shirt-waist with a very low neckline is in white dimity with a violet and blue floral print. Long sleeves.

A COOL DAY in town brings out some good-looking costumes. Noted recently a slim black sheer wool skirt worn with a pink woolen jacket with dolman sleeves and a black silk scarf with big pink dots filling in the square neckline.

CORPS PRESIDENT

Above is Colonel G. E. Reynolds, M.C., D.C.M., president of the Canadian Corps Association, who will be the guest speaker at the War Victory Loan Campaign rally being held in the Fair Grounds on Sunday afternoon.

Col. Reynolds joined the 39th Battalion in 1914 as a recruit with no previous military experience. Before he left Canada he had been promoted to sergeant and attained the rank of regimental sergeant major in the field. He was commissioned in his own battalion and won the Distinguished Conduct Medal as a lieutenant. He was also awarded the Military Cross and a bar to his D.S.O. He was badly wounded and as a result of his extensive lumbering experience in British Columbia was given command of a forestry unit stationed in Northern Scotland with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

Col. Reynolds has been president of the Canadian Corps for the past three years. His services to his country and his fellow veterans while in this office have been outstanding.

Girl Typist, 21, Is An Objector

London (CP) — Britain's first woman conscientious objector, a vivacious stenographer, claims she will not register under the call-up of women for war work because "she refuses to be part of the war machine."

Daphne Kiek, blond 21-year-old Surrey typist, has listed her obections and sent them to Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor. They are not based on Christian faith.

Although living in a badly-bombed London district, she maintains pacifist views and believes that Britain should make a negotiated peace with Hitler.

There are no tribunals for woman objectors, but they have the right of appeal to "hardship committee", which will respect objection as a reason for application. She has offered herself as a test.

Miss Kiek said during an interview she would not even take dictation which would direct emergency services into a raided area.

"I would not type anything which supported an organization which prolongs this war," she claimed. "I would not deliberately train as a nurse or a warden. I could not take on a uniform job of any sort, or any first aid."

Smiling Queen 'Touches Wood'

London (CP)—Queen Elizabeth believes in "touching wood."

During a visit to the King George and Queen Elizabeth Club for Service women of the Empire, her Majesty asked a young Irish cook in the basement kitchen if the gas supply had been cut off as a result of air raids. "Oh, no," the Irish lass replied. "We haven't been without gas, yet."

The Queen promptly touched the table and said "we had better touch wood then just to be on the safe side." Her Majesty spent a half-hour chatting with uniformed women in the club quarters. They included Canadian nurses, Wrens and Waafs.

Maybe Imagine She Wears Hat

London (CP)—A woman plaintiff in Divorce Court appeared before the judge without a hat. Mr. Justice Langton said that in more peaceful times he would have insisted on her being "properly clothed," even if she had to borrow another woman's hat to appear before the Court.

"But", he added, "circumstances being as they are, I think I shall 'put the telescope to the blind eye'." Counsel for the petitioner remarked that "so little passes for a hat upon a woman now that your Lordship could perhaps imagine one there."

Presented With Watch by Enginemen and Staff of Belleville Division

ENTERED SERVICE IN '16

Enginemen and staff of the Belleville Division of the Canadian National Railways honoured one of their members at the Engineers' Hall on Pine St. last night when A. B. Saunders, who has been promoted to the position of Divisional Superintendent at Hornepayne was presented with a gold watch upon the eve' of his departure from Belleville, where he has been Divisional master mechanic for the past six years.

Canadian National employees and officials were present to wish Mr. and Mrs Saunders success in their new life, members of the Belleville Engineers' Educational Club also being on hand for the occasion. ITALIAN FORCES ARE HEMMED IN

Fascist Withdrawal From Debarech Causes Main Force Real Trouble

London, May 30—(CP)—Italian forces at Gondar, a pocket of Italian resistance in northwest Ethiopia, have been hemmed in by a Fascist withdrawal from Debarech, on the Aduwa road 50 miles to the north, authoritative British reports said today.

Allied forces moving against Gondar in the sector north of Lake Tana are composed principally of Ethiopians commanded by British officers, these sources said.

Native forces in southern Ethiopia have cleared the Italians from the area between Soddu and Muggo, about 70 miles to the north.

At the beleaguered, British-held port of Tobruk on the North African front, British forces made a thrust at the Axis dent in the western permimetre of the Libyan port's defences.

Around Salum, just on the Egyptian side of the Libyan frontier where Axis vanguards recently have been active, these reports said there were only patrol skirmishes.

DAMAGED IN FORCED LANDING

Brantford, Ont., May 30—(CP)—Flying Officer Haig Simms, Toronto and Leading Aircraftmen Joe Dutton, Calgary and B. Deane, Preston, escaped uninjured yesterday when a bomber from No. 5 Service Flying Training School was damaged in a forced landing near the village of Boston.

The tail of the plane was damaged when it came down in a field on the farm of Russel Johnson.

Dutton is the son of Mervyn (Red) Dutton, Manager of New York Americans of the N.H.L.

NORWAY'S BOMBED AREA

London (CP)—Many people at Kristiansund in Norway were obliged to spend the whole winter in fishing boats because of the destruction of their houses by German bombers last summer, the Norwegian Telegraph Agency reports. A correspondent who recently visited the town describes the damage caused by fires as "the most catastrophic that has ever been known in all the Scandinavian countries."

ONE FIGHTERS LIKE DICKENS

London (CP)—A small unit of men on defence duty in a lonely part of Oxfordshire have become regular readers of Charles Dickens. When a Y.M.C.A. tea car brought a visitor to talk about Charles Dickens, the men said, "He's dead; why not talk about crime novels?" The talk proved so interesting that the men read some of Dickens' books and then asked for a complete set, which has now been supplied.

R.A.F. Sergeant Writes in the Clouds of Huts' Work in Britain

Toronto (CP)—Praise for Y.M.C.A. work in war-smitten Britain comes from high places. National headquarters here have the following written by a Royal Air Force sergeant in his machine several thousand feet up, to a Y.M.C.A. voluntary worker in Leicestershire:

"The Y.M.C.A. huts that you speak of are by a long, long way the best of their kind. I have been into Y.M.C.A. huts all over the country and they are really 'the goods.'

"I wish we could let people see what an absolute God-send they are to us on our travels, or as a place where we can go and read and write at night and get a cup of tea and a meal. I myself have been saved many a cold and miserable wait by finding a Y.M.C.A. hut for a hot drink. All the good I've ever had from these places has been really good.

"I have not expressed my opinion as fully as I should like, but think it will clear any doubts that you might have had on the subject. I can say that the gratitude of everyone goes out to the people who run these places. I only wish they had some in the air! I could do with a cup of hot tea now!"

DID YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE TODAY?

Do you really know why constipation is so harmful?

You probably know that constipation sets up poisons in the large intestine or colon. But do you know that these poisons seep through the walls of the colon and infect the bloodstream? They set up toxic accumulations in kidneys and liver and are contributing causes of rheumatic pains, sciatica and backache.

Most laxatives only act in the colon. Kruschen does more. It is the laxative with a double action. Besides ridding the colon of stagnating waste matter, Kruschen's mineral salts have a diuretic action. They flush the kidneys, help to clear the bloodstream of all poisonous matter, and so protect your whole system from that form of infection.

You can get Kruschen from all drug stores. Prices 75c, and 25c.

Butter And Egg Prices Go Higher

Toronto, May 30.—Light receipts and good demand lifted prices of both butter and eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday.

Lack of fresh supplies tended to raise prices in morning trading on the egg market, and quotations extended to country dealers advanced one half cent a dozen. Quotations to the retail trade were also increased slightly. Prices per dozen were as follows: Grade A-large, 27 cents; grade A-medium, 26 cents, A pullets 22 cents and B, 22 to 23 cents. Grade C remained unchanged. In afternoon trading receipts continued light and buyers assumed a cautious attitude, buying only for immediate requirements, and consequently a slightly easier undertone developed.

Offerings of top grade creamery solids at 30 3-4 cents a pound were cleaned up early in the day on the butter market and in late afternoon sellers began asking 31 cents a pound. As was the case with eggs, receipts were light and there was no pressure to sell. The market held steady to firm with quotations advancing about 1-4 cent a pound. At the close retail price of first grade, butter stood at 32 3-4 cents a pound.

HOG MARKETING RECORDS BROKEN

Promise is Bright That Canada Will be Able to Respond to British Request for Ham, Bacon Increase

Ottawa, May 30 (CP)—Hog marketing returns received by the Agriculture Department show all records are being broken, bringing bright promise that Canada will be able to respond to the United Kingdom request that shipments of hams and bacons be increased.

From Jan. 1 to May 29 marketings in Canada were 2,510,216 hogs as compared with 1,999,245 for the corresponding period last year. As last year's marketings broke all previous records this year's figures are most satisfactory Departmental officials said.

In the House of Commons yesterday Agriculture Minister Gardiner stated United Kingdom had requested that Canada fill its agreement of 425,000,000 pounds of Wiltshire sides by Sept. 15 instead of Oct. 31 the normal 12-month period the agreement was to run.

Officials have been placed on domestic consumption of pork products to keep it within last year's consumption figures. In recent months Canadians have been eating much more pork than in former years, and the Bacon Board put on the restriction to curb this increase.

"If Canadians would cut down on pork consumption we could fill the contract with Great Britain by Sept. 15," an official of the Bacon Board said. It means supplying the 425,000,000 pounds to the United Kingdom in 46 weeks instead of 52 weeks.

As soon as the contract is filled a new agreement will be negotiated covering the succeeding 12 months, this official said.

Proclaims Emergency

Here is President F. D. He also warned that the United States will never relinquish its right to freedom of the seas.

BOMBERS

British-Greek troops were reported still in possession of Retimo, approximately midway between Canea and Heraclean on the Northern coast, though the Nazis were said to be advancing toward the town after beating off repeated counter-attacks

Official sources said they had no confirmation of Italian reports that Fascist troops had landed on Crete but added that it probably was true. The Italians would be landed for political reasons and because of the "natural habits of the jackal", the sources said.

Emphasize Lack of Air Power

The London press took a glum view of the situation, emphasizing the lack of British air power and losses sustained by the Royal Navy in attempting to block the landing of sea-borne Axis troops.

(London has announced the loss of three cruisers and four destroyers and damage to other naval craft in Cretan waters.)

"We are hard pressed in Crete," declared the Daily Express. "The Germans had only air power to pit against sea power, land power and Crete patriotism, but they have obtained a firm foothold on the island. They have taken a heavy toll of our warships."

The Daily Herald's military expert emphasized that possession of Canea and Suda Bay probably would make it possible for the enemy to bring in "the modern armament he knows so well how to use, and our position will be still further worsened."

The size of the Nazi air fleet already based on crete was emphasized by R.A.F. reports that a concentration of more than 100 Nazi aircraft had been bombed at one point on the northwest end of the island Tuesday night.

Military sources estimated that 60,000 to 70,000 men—roughly half on each side—now were engaged in the fighting on Crete, which was described as the fiercest of the war, with hand-to-hand [illegible] raging in many areas.

Claim Retimo Taken

Berlin, May 30 (AP)—D. N. B., Nazi news and propaganda agency, claimed today that the Crete seaport of Retimo was taken by German forces yesterday forenoon.

Several thousand Italian prisoners were liberated, D.N.B. said.

(Explanation of the presence of Italian prisoners at Retimo was not at once forthcoming. It was possible, however, that these were prisoners taken by the Greeks in the Albanian fighting that preceded German conquest of the Greek mainland.

(Retimo lies on Almyro Bay, about 30 miles southeast of Canea and 40 miles west of Heraclean Candia), both occupied by the Germans.)

Girl Students' Classes Make Way For R. C. A. F. Training

Guelph, Ont., May 30 (CP)—Hon P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture told the graduating class of Macdonald Institute today that discontinuation of institute classes for the duration of the war "is one of those strokes of fate which brings a realization even to students at a girls' school that a disastrous war is in progress and that we are living in serious, indeed critical times."

Dewan emphasized the need for sacrifice on the part of the graduates if they were to play their full part in the Dominion's war effort.

One hundred and two young women received diplomas and prizes.

It will be the last such occasion for the duration of the war as 1,200 members of the Royal Canadian Air Force are expected to arrive shortly to take over buildings formerly occupied by the girls as No. 4 wireless training school.

Misses Maribelle Combes and Florine Combes, Tillsonburg, Ont., sisters, were among the graduates.

CONSERVATIVES CRITICIZED ON STAND TAKEN

Debate on New Federal Succession Duty Enlivened by Many Exchanges

READY FOR SENATE

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Ottawa, May [illegible] criticism of the Conservative Party attitude toward the new Federal Succession Duty, and particularly that of Conservative House Leader Hanson, enlivened final House of Commons debate last night on the bill to provide for that levy. The measure now is ready for consideration by the Senate.

M. J. Coldwell leader spoke out against the major opposition party as the bill was given third reading just before adjournment.

Commending the government for initiating the measure at a time when "every dollar" was needed for defence Mr. Coldwell said he was "disappointed at the long barrage of criticism put up against it (the bill) by the Conservative leader in this House."

"That, of course, is the traditional Conservative attitude which years ago drove many a young man out of the Conservative party," he said.

"Today that is not the attitude of humane or thinking people, and, as a member of an opposition group in this House I commend the government for bringing in this measure."

Mr. Blackmore, whose party advocates adoption of the Social Credit theory of fiscal reform, coupled his criticism of the Conservatives with condemnation of the government's fiscal policy.

Stirling Expresses Regret

"The leader of the Opposition has properly voiced his objection to the onrushing tide of devastating taxation," Mr. Blackmore said.

"If the Finance Minister were a Conservative of the finest type he would be forcing upon this country a burden of taxation quite as onerous as that which the present Finance Minister feels himself obliged to force upon the country.

"I have listened with great care to the objections of the Conservatives and not once have I heard any Conservative member tell what he would do to raise the money without this taxation."

There was a way to manage Canada so that there would be all the money necessary to prosecute the war to the limit of the country's resources and leave the people in a position to own their own homes, Mr. Blackmore said, but he would not give details at the moment.

There was reason for Canadians to hope "to look up and rejoice," Mr. Blackmore said. "But we are not going to have hope and rejoicing by further development of the policies which are being forced upon us by the administration at the present time."

Hon. Grote Stirling, (Con. Yale) expressed regret that Mr. Coldwell should have criticized the Conservative leader while Mr. Hanson was out of the chamber.

"The leader of the Opposition and his colleagues of this party have not expressed themselves as opposed to the principle of the legislation but have carried out those duties which we of the Opposition consider lie upon us to offer such criticisms as they think are warranted," Mr. Stirling said.

The bill, which will be considered by the Senate when it meets next Monday night, was adopted with minor amendments after a discussion which was largely restricted to lawyer members.

The tax, on a graduated scale, is patterned after provincial succession tax measures, combining a general tax on the whole estate with a tax on the succession received by each beneficiary, and is paid by the beneficiaries.

Today the House will take up remaining budget bills which include the Income War Tax Act amendments and amendments to the special War Revenue Act.

Other features of yesterday's session included the tabling, late last evening, of the exchange of notes with the United States whereby it is agreed that an additional 8,000 cubic feet per second be diverted from the flow of water above Niagara Falls to meet urgent power requirements in both countries.

Canada is to get 3,000 cubic feet and the United States 5,000, estimated to develop respectively 35,000 and 70,000 horsepower.

War Services Minister Gardiner announced that labor camps would be opened about June 15 in which conscientious objectors, Mennonites and Doukhobors of the 21-year-old class would do road-building and national parks work for periods of three or four months, in lieu of compulsory training.

Injured Men Make Way to Homes at Some Distance From Scene of Accident Near Calgary

Calgary, May 30 (CP)—Two Royal Canadian Air Force fliers, PO. B. C. Ward and Lac. Thornton, were injured early today when their Avro-Anson bombing plane crashed in the Bowness district six miles west of Calgary.

Wing Cmdr. A. D. Ross said both men suffered facial injuries but did not appear to be seriously hurt.

Authorities learned of the crash when Thornton, cut about the face, staggered into the home of J. C. Scott near Bowness about 3.15 a.m. after walking or crawling nearly a mile from the wrecked plane. He was semi-conscious and said he believed Ward was still in the plane, which apparently crashed about two a.m.

About four a.m. Ward limped to the home of J. M. Munro who rushed him to hospital.

Phil Carscallen, reporter of the Calgary Albertan, located the plane wreckage at 4.25 a.m. when he spotted the lights of the plane still burning. He said the aircraft was badly damaged.

Wing Cmdr. Ross said a court of inquiry will be held.

Feller Winning Tenth of Year Proves Indians' Insurance Against Long Losing Streaks

Shutout Tigers 9-0 With Seven Hits and Allowing Only Two to Reach Third

CARDS KEEP ROLLING

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

One of the reasons given at the start of the season for rating Cleveland Indians as an outstanding pennant threat in the American League was that they could have no losing streaks.

Twice the Indians have faltered and lost three straight. Twice the husky righthanded ace has stepped in and stemmed the tide. He did it yesterday with a 9-0 decision over Detroit Tigers, who had had Cleveland on the run all during the first half of this week.

Feller scattered seven hits, striking out eight and allowing only two runners to get past first base—none after the third inning.

It was rapid Robert's 10th victory against two defeats this season coming with less than a third of the schedule completed it held out the enchanting possibility of thirty victories for Feller this year.

While Cleveland was regaining its grip on the American League St. Louis Cardinals rolled their winning string to ten games for the second time this season with a 10-9 decision over Cincinnati Reds.

Fifth Straight by One Run

The world champion struggled gamely, shaking up their batting order and using five different pitchers. But the Cards scored in six different innings and pulled off four double plays, one of them snuffing out a three-run rally by the Reds in the ninth. It was the fifth straight victory by one run for St. Louis.

The most spectacular individual performance yesterday was the one-hit pitching show put on by Bill Dietrich of Chicago White Sox in shutting out St. Louis Browns 4-0.

The only safety off him this time was a single by Chet Laabs in the fourth. The Sox themselves made just six hits against the Browns, but one of them was a homer by Moose Solters.

The 10-game losing streak of Washington Senators was charitably checked by rain, which washed out a five-run sixth inning of New York Yankees and left the score tied at 2-2.

Boston Red Sox benched Jimmy Foxx at his own request and punched out a 6-4 verdict over Philadelphia Athletics, who sank back to sixth place.

New York's Giants bashed Boston Braves 9-2 in the other of the day's two National League games.

Little Johnny Lane To Ride in Race Against Grandson

(By Tony Slaughter)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Brady, Tex., May 30—(AP)—Little Johnny Lane, 61 years old today, still boots thoroughbreds across the finish line as a jockey.

He's been riding 46 years and thinks he has several good seasons left. He's making plans to compete for his sixteenth consecutive year in the annual Brady Jubilee and race meet July 3, 4 and 5.

And that's causing Johnny more worry than any event in years.

Because, you see, his keenest competitor will be a young upstart following in the footsteps —or rather hoof beats— of his grandfather.

Merlin Lemons, Lane's grandson, has been riding two years and already has a long list of winnings to his credit.

Having to race against Merlin is worrying Johnny a lot more than getting eight horses into shape for the big meet.

Johnny never has been a horse owner. "There's more money riding for the other fellow", he said. "I've had lots of chances to buy promising horses, but a fellow like me could invest all he had and then suddenly see his investment vanish should a horse or two get crippled or break down".

When the racing season is over Johnny will go back to his farm in the Voca Community.

But, says Johnny: "I'll ride as long as I can sit in the saddle".

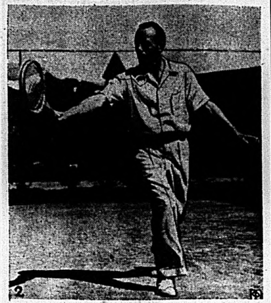
2—THE BACK HAND DRIVE



In the backhand drive, here demonstrated by Roland Bloomstrand, the important thing is to turn left from your original forehand position, getting your right shoulder and foot over on the backhand side. The ball is struck slightly below its centre with your own and the racket head following simultaneously after the impact in the desired direction of flight.

In the eastern style, there is a slight change for the backhand grip. You make a quarter turn to the left, keeping the finger still diagonally across the racquet handle with the thumb along or around as you prefer. As the ball approaches, you turn left from the waiting position, getting your right shoulder and foot over on the "backhand" side. Never leave them on the "forehand" side while executing a backhand. Sink the centre of the racquet lower than the ball will be at the impact, hit slightly below the centre of the ball, move your head and the racquet head forward simultaneously in the desired direction. Reach after the ball and keep your balance throughout the entire stroke.

If you want a slight top on the ball, especially for a cross-court shot, raise the swing as in the forehand, and let yourself turn to the right, finishing the stroke quite high. Always play your drives with the arm normally extended, this is, well away from the body. Lunge forward or run sideways while hitting the ball and check yourself to see if you have your weight on the foot closest to the net at the finish of all shots. Try to connect with the ball when it is opposite your right toe when hitting a backhand.

Right of Race-Track Club to Run Contest Questioned by Court

Montreal, May 30 (CP)—Right of a race-track club to offer rewards to its patronh for correct guesses on winners of a day's meet was questioned by Court of King's Bench yesterday.

The point was raised in the appeal of the Montreal Jockey Club against a decision of Mr. Justice Joseph Archambault stating that the club must pay $300 to R. W. Breeze of Montreal. Breeze bought a program for 15 cents at a race in 1939, which carried with it the right to attempt to select the winners of the next six races. Breeze guesses have collected $300, but the club refused to pay him on the grounds that he had entered his name in block letters whereas the program specified that it was to be in writing. Mr. Justice Archambault had upheld Breeze and the Montreal Jockey Cub appealed the decision.

During hearing of the appeal yesterday, Mr. Justice Lucien Bond asked if the contest itself fell under the terms of the Criminal Code. If it did he said, the court could not hear the appeal. He allowed plaintiff and defendant until June 14 to file supplementary factums dealing with this point.

With the bulk of the senior students to attend district secondary schools during the current school year having graduated at Easter under the Department of Education plan and many having availed themselves of war work positions, the entries in the senior series of the Bay of Quinte Interscholastic athletic meet, to be held at the Exhibition Park here on Saturday, will not only be limited, but whittled to the minimum. From the Belleville Collegiate Institute only junior and intermediate boys will be represented and then only five in all. In the girls' competition, however, juniors, intermediates and seniors will compete. Miss M. Allison, director of girls' athletics at the B.C.I. & V.S., is pinning great hopes on petit Inez Lunberg to win the junior girls' championship of the district, while Joy Putman and Dorothy Price will carry the Belleville senior banner. Athletes from Picton Collegiate, Trenton, Napanee, O.S.D., Tweed, Madoc, Stirling, Marmora and maybe Albert College, are expected to compete.

The advantages of intramural sports within a school as large as the Belleville Collegiate was proven only yesterday when the gals received their annual awards for inter-class sports. Miss M. Allison, in charge of girls' athletics at the B.C.I. & V.S., informs us there were 266 girls participated in the inter-form games of basketball, softball and volleyball in the senior classes only, with an aggregate total of 952 in all. Yesterday over 30 girls received crests and bars, indicating their sports prowess and honours won during the past season of intramural sports at the Collegiate, while Victoria Scott and Joyce Watson received their school letters, the large "B." Intramural sports and athletics do not cater to the more proficient stars, but rather give all desirous an opportunity to participate in clean, healthful and recreational endeavours in an effort to build more healthy Canadian youths.

Do you remember when Floyd Roberts, 38-year-old aviation engineer of Van Nuys, Calif. streaked around the 1-2-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway three years ago today to win the annual 500-mile race by five miles in the 26th running of the famous classic. His average speed of 117 miles an hour was a new record. It eclipsed the previous record of 113 established by Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis in 1937.

Before Manager Jimmie Dykes of the White Sox could retire as a player, he had to get waivers on himself. He obtained them, of course and is having the request framed. Said Dykes: "After I had sent out the call, I got a telegram from Jimmy Gallagher of the Cubs asking me for information about some busher by the name of Dykes. Gallagher asked if this Dykes could help the Cubs. I wired back, "Dykes is still a couple of years too young for your ball club."

Although slow to respond to the initial call, entries are beginning to be received for the fourth annual Ontario Intelligencer "Soap Box Derby," under the auspices of the local Kinsmen Club on June 30th this year. Orliff "Boiler" Lloyd is in charge of entries, but forms can be procured at Lattimer's Drug Store or the United Cigar Store, latterally page Don Roe. The Kinsmen derby here is always recognized as the Canadian "Soap Box Derby" championship and the winner represents Belleville and Canada at the World's championship derby held in Akron, Ohio. This trip alone should prove sufficient incentive to boys of this district to enter the 1941 derby, but as the local race is exactly one month from tonight, no time should be lost in filing applications for entry. The race is open to boys between 11 and 15 years of age on the day of the local race. In conjunction with this year's derby, the Kinsmen are holding a street carnival as well.

Verbal bouquets were handed out and the conventional kibitzing featured the Major "A" Bowling League annual banquet and distribution of prizes last night. The Belleville Golf were crowned titlists for the third consecutive year. Joe Legault won the high average with a 238; Walt Jackson the high three-string with an 850 and Reg Arnott the high single with a 361. The league champions rolled a 3687 for a team high score and Jack Fitzpatrick and his able executive were returned to office for another term. Many fine words of praise were heard in favour of Secretary Walt Jackson for the concise and composite tabulation of the scoring averages of the teams and individual players, the blueprint production being a perfect reproduction of all league averages and scores.

It makes little difference whether Max Schmeling was killed in the battle of Crete or not, the fact is now established the former Black Uhlan is definitely in the German parachute corps, despite rumours of his having two serious mistakes in his life—one was getting into the ring with Joe Louis when Joey was champion and the other was when he joined the invasion of Crete and was wounded. Maxie had better keep a sharp eye out for that third mistake, it might be fatal, that is if he isn't a dead pigeon already.

SPORT HASH — Thirty-three drivers faced the starter's gun at the 29th Memorial Day auto racing classic at Indianapolis today. . . . Of course Wilbur Shaw, four times winner, will be seeking his third consecutive crown. . . . Kelly Petillo is the only other previous winner in the field of 33. . . . Bill Dietrich, Chicago White Sox pitcher who already has a no-hitter to his credit, hurled a one-hitter against the Browns yesterday. . . . Chet Laabs' fourth inning single spoiled Dietrich's chance of a second no-hitter. . . . Looks as though the Cleveland Indians will have to pin their hopes on the good right arm of Bob Feller. . . . Feller blanked the Tigers yesterday to snap the Indians' losing streak and chalk up his tenth win of the season and we're not into June yet. . . . Last year it was the Cincinnati Reds who were winning games by the odd one run. . . . Yesterday the Cardinals beat the Reds 10 to 9, it being their 10th consecutive win, the fifth of which was by a one run margin. . . . In Secretary Walt Jackson's composite box score of the Major "A" Bowling League, we were surprised to find that the Deacon Shirt trundlers had five players with an average of over 200, while the champion Belleville Golf only had four. . . It's nice work if you can get it.

32 SPEEDSTERS TO TAKE PART IN FAMOUS CAR RACE

Field Will be Sent Away With Mauri Rose in Pole Position

SHAW TO START

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer

Indianapolis, May 30 (AP)—Thirty-two super-powered speedsters rolled onto the Indianapolis motor speedway's 2½ mile track today and thousands of spectators waited impatiently for the bomb starting the 29th annual 500-mile race.

The field, reduced from the original 33 by an accident to Sam Hanks of Alhambra, Calif., yesterday in a practice run, was ready to start the 200-lap grind at noon E.D.T.

The Weather Bureau said occasional showers or thunderstorms might come but it was hoped there would be no repetition of last year's rain which forced the racers to hold their positions the last 125 miles.

A part of the crowd waited all night for the gates to open. Early attendance indicated a crowd of more than 150,000.

Crashes Through Fence

Hanks' car crashed through an infield fence at the southwest turn after the connecting rod and rear wheels locked. The 26-year-old Californian was thrown clear but his head and back were injured.

At the front of the 11 rows of racers were Mauri Rose of Indianapolis in the pole position he won with a qualifying speed of 128.691 miles an hour; Rex Mays, Glendale, Calif., and Wilbur Shaw, hometown boy who sought to become the only four-time winner.

Approximately $100,000 in prize money was posted for the first 10 drivers to finish, the victor getting $20,000, plus about $10,000 from accessory and lap prizes.

Shaw, the crowd's favorite, bucked superstition by starting for the 13th time.

NEWARK BEARS STILL REELING

Team Out of First Place and Only 2½ Games Ahead of Fifth Placers

(By The Associated Press)

Still reeling from five beatings they took from Baltimore Orioles in their last six International Baseball League starts, Newark's Bears get no chance for a breathing spell during the holiday week-end.

The Bruins will play five games in three days, starting with a doubleheader today against Jersey City Giants. The losses to seventh-place Baltimore dumped the Bears from the league lead and left them only 2½ games ahead of fifth-place Jersey City.

The Giants made it six in a row over Syracuse last night, with the veteran Roy Henshaw shutting out the Chiefs 2-0 for their ninth victory in their last 11 games.

Baltimore beat Newark 9-7 with a ninth-inning spurt in the only other game, as threatening weather forced postponement of the Rochester-Buffalo contest. The scheduled Montreal-Toronto game was played as part of a doubleheader Thursday night.

Manager Announces Series of Six Bouts

New York, May 30 (AP)—Manager Jimmy Johnston announced today a series of six bouts for his heavyweights, Abe Simon and Bob Pastor, topped off by ample Abe's return match with Joe Louis, which Johnston said will be held July 23 in one of the New York ball parks.

Before that match Simon is to meet Pete Thomasula of Buffalo, N.Y., June 9; Dewey Kimrey of San Antonio, Tex., June 17 and Leroy Haynes of Philadelphia, June 30, all in New York.

Pastor is booked for a bout with Buddy Scott in Washington, D.C., June 16 and for a return go with Turkey Thompson in Los Angeles July 14. Pastor whipped Thompson last March in a spectacular battle in which 10 knockdowns were scored.

HORSE-RACING DISPUTE ENDED BY NEW PLAN

Attorney-General Conant to Become Director Until August 1st

WILL RESUME RACING

Toronto, May 29 —(CP)— The horse-racing dispute which caused cancellation of one spring meeting in Toronto and forced reduced fields in another was ended today and racing will re-open at Long Branch track next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Attorney-General Gordon Conant will take a seat on the board of directors of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association and prepare a plan to end the difficulties between the I.C.R.A. and the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association.

Mr. Conant made known his decision to serve as a temporary I.C.R.A. director last night shortly after the announcement of settlement of the dispute and the reopening of the tracks.

The trouble broke last week when the horsemen protested that their representative, Ryland New of Oakville, Ont., was not recognized by the I.C.R.A. to whose board they claimed they elected him. They refused to race their horses on the last two days of the spring meeting at Woodbine Park and shortly afterwards Thorncliffe Park officials announced cancellation of their meeting which was to be held this week.

Race Two Consecutive Weeks

Under present plans Thorncliffe will have two consecutive weeks of racing next fall to make up for the week it missed.

Mr. Conant disclosed that the two factions in the dispute had suggested the plan by which he would act as I.C.R.A. director until the annual meeting next November. In the meantime he would prepare a plan, to be submitted by Aug. 1, to end te difficulties.

He announced his acceptance by releasing copies of correspondence between himself and the two organizations. He made it clear that either party is free to adopt or reject any plan he might submit.

He made it clear that it is not the government's intention to "interfere with or exercise control over racing." The government merely desired that racing be conducted and controlled by the interested parties themselves "by such means and in such manner as they may devise."

CHAPTER XXXVI

The Search in Vain

Dale's anxiety grew hourly. And with it, Devona's selfrecrimination. Why hadn't she used her head? Why had she let happen the very think they had both decided must never happen! Three lives ruined now. And all because she'd so selfishly—so thoughtlessly——

"Please, Dale, can't I do something," she begged frantically. Can't I hunt—somewhere. He must be——"

Dale nodded. "I'll go with you."

"But you can't! Your shoulder."

"Is all right. Come on."

The nurses looked skeptical and the doctor shook his head, but Dale paid no attention. He merely thrust the car keys into her hand, said curtly:

"You drive. We'll start with the bars."

They went to every bar in Los Angeles. Achingly tired, she was sure they couldn't have missed one. To movie theatres, where they flashed Tal's name on the screen. Back to the police station. Everywhere. Still—no Tal.

It was as if he had simply vanished into thin air.

The warm Spring afternoon had cooled off into evening before Dale and Devona finally turned back, exhausted to the old Brasher home. Dale, his face white with fatigue, strain, walked up the front steps like an old man. Devona, her heart aching with remorse, went ahead, opening doors.

Old Abbot, worried and anxious now, served their dinner in front of the library fire. A delicious dinner that Devona could scarcely touch. And Dale, too, picked at the savory dishes listlessly.

"If anything's happened to that kid—" he said once, with deadly quiet that sent a sword-point of remorse deep into Devona's ear, "I'll never forgive myself."

But it was my fault, Dale, not yours," she insisted.

"No, it wasn't. I'm just as much to blame. More so. I know Talbot better than you do. I've watched him grow up from a shy, little boy into a sensitive artist. I should have known enough to get out of the way just as soon as I knew how he felt about you."

A Telephone Call

Pulling himself out of his chair, Dale paced the room nervously. "Trouble was, I didn't ever think he'd be deeply in love with a girl. He's so wrapped up in his art, his theatre and his play-writing. Before, that had always been his first, his only love."

Dale turned, smiled down at Devona huddled small in her chair. "Not that I'm really surprised he fell for you." Tenderly he ran his fingers through the soft curls at the nape of her neck. "How could he help loving you so much it could—drive him crazy!"

Devona's head went down into her hands again. "Please, don't Dale. I—I can't bear it."

Dale crossed to the window then, stood staring out into the soft Spring evening. For a minute, only the sound of Devona's sobbing broke the silence. Then, crashingly, the phone rang in the outer hall.

Devona jumped to her feet, but Dale was already racing down the hall, snatching up the phone.

"Yes. Hello. Yes. Yes."

At his elbow, Devona tried to read the news in his expression. Police reporting a body found? Tal himself alive and well? Could——

"Thanks. Yes, I have it."

Slowly, Dale replaced the receiver, looked down at her.

"That was Western Union. A wire from Tal saying for us to meet him at 34 Seaside Drive, Santa Monica. He has a surprise and it's important. We must be there by 8:30 sharp."

"Eight-thirty!" Devona glanced at her watch. "It's nearly 9 now."

What Could Happen?

Grimly, Dale snatched up his hat, flung open the door. "It would be just like him to stage something crazy — some dramatic scene of——"

Dale didn't finish that thought as, racing down the steps, they flung themselves into the long blue coupe again. But Devona's imagination finished it for her—and the picture left her trembling with anxiety. If only they weren't too late. They mustn't be too late.

It was nearly an hour before they found Seaside Drive. And another few minutes before they turned into the curving drive at No. 34.

"But this is—a private estate," Devona murmured as Dale stopped the car under a handsome porte-cochere.

"Come on."

The drive was clogged with cars and the front door stood wide open as Dale and Devona ran up the steps. It looked for all the world like a huge party. There must be some mistake—the wrong address.

"Maybe he was trying to—mislead us—deliberately," Devona suggester as they stood, glancing uncertainly toward the gay crowd swarming through the big drawing room just beyond.

Setting the Stage

Then they saw Tal.

Devona's heart was swept with relief. Tal was—laughing! His face alive and gay and teasing, he was dancing with a pretty blonde girl—with Gay Dorset.

"Look! It's Tal!" she whispered, pulled at Dale's arm.

As if Tal had heard that breathless little remark, he turned toward the front door, saw them, waved impudently.

"Hi, there. Come in!"

And a moment later he was bounding toward them like an excited puppy, Gay Dorset still clinging to his arm.

"It's a party, folks. A real celebration. How do you feel, old man?"

Dale looked at him anxiously a moment. Then a grin broke across his tired, white face. "Okay now. What's up?"

Introduction

Tal didn't answer. Instead, he turned toward the crowd of merrymakers and shouted: "Hey, there, everybody! The guests of honor have arrived! Give them a big hand, everybody."

Guests of honor! Devona stared at him. Had he lost his mind? She and Dale exchanged puzzled glances.

"May I present my brother, the honorable Dale Brasher and——" grinning, he pulled Devona forward, too, tucked her hand under his arm, "and his fiancee, the lovely Devona Raebourne."

Stunned Devona couldn't believe her ears weren't playing tricks. "Tal—what are you saying?"

The orchestra had broken immediately into the opening bars of the Lohengrin and Tal, grinning happily, waved to a servant carrying a huge silver tray of brimming glasses. "Here! A toast to the happy bride and groom. Tomorrow's their wedding day!"

Almost angrily, Dale jerked at Tal's sleeve. "What's the matter with you, Tal? Have you gone crazy?"

"I'll say I haven't." He turned again toward the pretty girl beside him. "Gay and I decided you had given us two perfectly good reasons for celebrating. Your victory, Dale, and——" he grinned again mischievous as a small boy, —thanks to Gay's hospitality here—it's a surprise party."

Dale stared at his brother a minute before answering and, though still puzzled, a grin broke across his face in response. "I'll say it's a surprise."

"And now come let me introduce you to all these silly people," Gay smiled, drawing them down the three broad steps from the handsome reception hall into the crowded drawing room.

So baffled by the strange turn of events she couldn't get her bearings, Devona acknowledged introductions, danced with charming strangers sipped a cocktail and wondered when she would wake up. Finally, Tal cut in for a dance.

"Please, Tal," she begged under cover of the confusion, "What is it all about—why——"

Tal's Advice

"Don't you know?" His eyes smiled at her, and then, beckoning to Dale who stood alone for the moment, he led them both to an opened French window. Out onto a cool, deserted balcony. "Come here, you two. I'll have words with you."

Then, taking Devona's hand, he laid it in Dale's held them together a moment. "If you two simpletons don't know you are in love with each other, it's time you found it out."

Devona's eyes scanned Dale's for an anxious moment.

"But, Tal, you—we—that is——" Dale stammered uneasily.

"And if you think I'm not artist enough to have sensed what was up," Tal went on calmly, "then you haven't much faith in my genius. I guess I know real emotions under safe control."

"But Tal — you don't understand," she protested, still not sure that this calm was real, this —"I mean—you——"

"Honey. Don't try to explain." Tal wrapped an affectionate arm around her shoulder. "I understand perfectly. You thought you loved me as a husband when in reality it's Dale you love that way. Me—I'll always be your favorite brother-in-law, won't I?"

Suddenly tear-blinded, she nodded.

She Remembers

"And you'll be a favorite of mine too," he went on. "You turned up at the right moment with that sweetness of yours and I'm eternally grateful. But I don't want to marry you, angel."

"You—don't—"

"Sorry." His grin broke out again infectiously. "I'd much rather be best man for old Dale, here."

Dale's hand gripped his. "You're sure you—"

"Sure. Me—I'm married to the theatre. Didn't you know?" Then, with a little shove. "Now, you two—I'll give you a few minutes alone out here to find out what a terrible mistake you were about to make. And —if it isn't love—"

Devona's arms crept around his drawing her close against him

Tal nodded, mocking gravity. "I knew it was. Well—God bless you my children. I'm going to hunt up Gay now and we'll compose some brand new toasts to your future happiness."

With that he disappeared into the drawing room.

For a moment, Dale and Devona both stared after him. Then, slowly, their eyes met.

"Do you think he — really—doesn't care?" Devona asked softly.

The Fakir Was Right

"I don't know, honey. I'm afraid we never will. But at least," Dale smiled happily, "he's grown up some. Enough to take this — like a gentleman and a scholar. Good old Tal."

Inside, someone began a hilarious "For he's a jolly good fellow—for he's—"

Dale's arms tightened. "Tal's more than that, isn't he darling, to have given us back to each other."

Devona's arms crept around his neck and she laid her forehead against his cheek as she wispered, "Oh, yes, Dale. Life's — funny, isn't it?"

"Not funny darling." His lips hovered close to her own. Pretty wonderful—now."

"Daughter of a strange destiny, a great love will enter your soul" that wrinkled old Indian fakir had said once—half-way around the world, half a lifetime ago. And he'd been so right, she thought happily as Dale folded her close to his heart. So wonderfully right!

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

MAN IS ARRESTED FOR KINGSTON POLICE

Wanted in Kingston for escaping custody, Lon B. Seagris, of that city, was apprehended in Belleville, last evening. Seagris escaped from the Kingston police patrol wagon en route from the city jail to the county lockup recently and evaded apprehension until he was arrested at the Cricket Field by Constables Ellis and Arnott last evening, where he was employed as an attendant at one of the rides at a carnival. Seagris had only been employed at the carnival a short time before his arrest.

The accused man had previously been apprehended in Windsor for the Kingston authorities, where he was wanted for the theft of a truck and a cheque amounting to $500.00. He escaped custody in Kingston a few days ago.

Judgment Given In Favor of Insurance Companies

At the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court held at Belleville, this week, Mr. Justice Urquhart gave judgment in favor of North West Casualty Company and North Western Mutual Fire Association against W. T. Fritz of Brighton Township, Farmer for $1628.79, being the amount the insurance companies paid to Messrs. Beckstead and Ward of Adams, New York, in settlement of claims asserted by them against Mr. Fritz for personal injuries and property damage as a result of the truck of Mr. Fritz forcing the automobile of Mr. Beckstead off the travelled portion of Highway Number 2 near Napanee on the 27th day of August, 1940. The insurance companies contended that they were entitled to be reimbursed by Fritz as it was contended he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor to such an extent as to be incapable of the proper control of his vehicle in breach of one of the statutory conditions in his insurance policy. The Judge upheld the right of the insurance companies to be indemnified by the assured for the sums paid in settlement of the claims of Mr. Beckstead and Mr. Ward. Mr. Payne of this city acted for the insurance companies and Mr. J. M. Simpson appeared for the defendant.

5-Month Term Given Motorist From Sulphide

Pleading guilty to charges of drunk while driving; driving a car while his permit was suspended; failing to report an accident, and reckless driving, William Deline, Sulphide, was fined $127.50 including costs, or the option of five months in jail in default of payment, by Magistrate J. Lloyd of Northbrook in Tweed police court on Thursday afternoon. Deline was unable to pay the fine at the time and was lodged in the county jail by Chief of Police Clare Hayes.

On the drunk while driving charge Deline was given thirty days and costs with no option, and an additional 15 days in default of payment. The charge of failing to report an accident brought a fine of $10 and costs, or fifteen days; that of reckless driving, $25 and costs or two months, and the charge of driving while his permit was suspended,$25 dollars and costs or one month in jail. All sentences are to run consecutively.

The charges arose from a motor car accident, which occurred last Saturday night, when the car Deline was driving suddenly went out of control on the Sulphide road four miles east of Tweed. Three passengers in the car were seriously injured while Deline was unhurt. The car hurtled over a rock pile and plunged into an eight-foot ditch where it turned over. Later that night charges were laid by Chief Hayes and Deline was placed in custody.

DR. KURT RIETH ARRESTED IN N.Y. HELD IN CUSTODY

Taken to Ellis Island to be Deported for Illegal Entry

BORN IN BELGIUM

New York, May 30—(AP)—The German diplomat who lost his job for meddling in the Austrian crisis which followed the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss in 1934 was a prisoner today—held on Ellis Island for deportation because federal authorities said, he did not state the true reason for his visit when he entered the United States.

Dr. Kurt Heinrich Rieth, the meddling minister to Austria, was arrested yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and taken to Ellis Island, where he is held without bond. Officials of the Department of Justice asserted he was the "No. 1 Nazi in the United States" whose claim to be here on private business was false.

Rieth, a Belgian of German parentage who fled to Germany in 1914, entered the German diplomatic service in 1918 and became minister to Austria in 1931.

Removed by Hitler

On the day on which Dollfuss was slain by Insurrectionists, Rieth went to the besieged chancellory and, by implication or otherwise, made guarantee that the Austrian Nazi slayers of the Chancellor would receive safe conduct to Germany.

This led to his removal by Chancellor Adolf Hitler who was quoted as saying the assassination "was not our fault" and was "regretted and condemned by the government".

After his removal Rieth was little noted in the German scene until March 8, 1941, when he arrived in Rio de Janeira where it was reported he had a special mission in South America.

On March 22, he entered the United States at Brownsville, Tex. Last Saturday the New York Herald-Tribune disclosed his presence here and declared he was seeking to buy up American-owned oil properties in Eastern Europe.

Asked For Report

Berlin, May 30 (AP)—The German Embassy in Washington has been asked for a report on the case of Kurt Heinrich Rieth, former German Minister to Austria now held at Ellis Island, Nazi sources said today, adding that no official word of his arrest had yet been received.

It was claimed Rieth has had no official business with the German Government for seven years and is in the United States as a private individual on private business.

MAY RECONSIDER POLICY

Tokyo, May 30—(AP)—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, reaffirming Japan's adherence to the three-power-pact, declared at a press conference today that she might have to reconsider her "peaceful policy" toward the South Seas.

Informed quarters interpreted this part of Matsuoka's statement as a direct threat to The Netherlands East Indies, in view of the current deadlock in economic talks.

U.S. Takes Extraordinary Precautions Against Sabotage Efforts on Holiday

Washington, May 30 (AP)—Military and civil guards stood watch today—Memorial Day—at United States defence plants from coast to coast, summoned overnight by civilian authorities who spoke of sabotage and military officers who talked only of tactical manoeuvres.

In highlighting the sudden activity from New England to California was cancellation of leaves of 14,000 Fort Dix, N.J., soldiers and a "practice alert" at Fort Custer, Mich., which was so realistic officers confessed "it even fooled us."

Anti-aircraft guns were planted at California plane factories, Los Angeles harbor ships were floodlighted, police guards were augmented in several cities and west coast "patriotic bodies" were asked to stand by.

Most spectacular of the military measures were the clamping on Fort Custer of a "practice alert" which was so much like the real thing that Battle Creek police took to the streets to warn civilians against armed sentries.

14,000 Leaves Cancelled

Meanwhile, at Fort Dix, N.J., Memorial Day leaves of 14,000 men were cancelled without explanation. Some of the men, who had already left camp, were ordered to be back by reveille tomorrow. Police patrolled terminals to notify soldiers of the cancellation. Leaves were not reported cancelled at other army posts.

In San Francisco extra guards patrolled the water front and city officials spoke of possible sabotage efforts during the week-end. Extra police were mobilized there because, said Joseph F. Marias, President of the State Board of Harbor Commissioners, "we can't take any chances."

Extra Police Ordered Out

At Buffalo, N.Y., Police Commissioner Austin Roche ordered extra police to guard defence industries and instructed the officers to "visit frequently all plants engaged in defence work and contact the plant police or guards on each visit until further orders."

In New York City, the Herald-Tribune said orders had been given to augment the police sabotage patrol on the Brooklyn water front and that extra guards had been posted at the Republic Aircraft Corp., plant at Farmingdale, Long Island.

At scattered points in New England, guards were posted and a Fitchburg, Mass., manufacturer reported he had been advised by the War Department to expect sabotage efforts.

Indomitable Courage Of British People Eulogized By "Y" Officer

Relating with graphic realism his experiences with the Canadian troops overseas and conditions as they exist in Britain today, Capt. T. W. Jones, of the Auxiliary Service and Senior Y.M.C.A. officer of the 1st Canadian Division, told an audience at the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium on Thursday evening that the indomitable courage and wonderful morale of the British people, even in the face of all-out bombing raids which have wrecked their homes and cities, would carry them on to ultimate victory.

Captain Jones was born in England but came to Canada and graduated from McGill University with M.A. and D.D. degrees. During the last Great War he served four years as Y.M.C.A. officer in charge of transport service and in the present war as senior Y.M.C.A. officer of the 1st Division. Returning from England two months ago, Captain Jones has travelled across Canada and delivered 149 addresses to as many audiences, relating to the way the people of Great Britain are "carrying on" and of the work of the Canadian War Service organization in the Motherland. On Friday morning he delivered an address to the pupils of the Belleville Collegiate.

No Weakening

"All across Canada, people have been asking whether the stories that we read in the newspapers concerning the courage and morale of the people of Great Britain are to the fact or whether it is part of a program of propaganda to encourage the folks here," said Capt. Jones. "In answer to this I can only say that the story concerning the courage of the people of Britain has never yet been fully told. Indeed, it would be impossible to pay adequate tribute to their spirit, their endurance and their spirited morale. In spite of the sufferings they have endured, they are determined never to weaken their effort."

Captain Jones paid special tribute to the boys of the Eastern Ontario unit with which he has been associated and stated that "in their devotion to their duty and in their physical ability and courage to stand up against the terrific bombings which England is being subjected to, without fear of contradiction, there is no finer lot of men anywhere."

Completely Organized

Life is completely organized on the basis of service for the good of the community in England, according to Captain Jones, who said that on a placard on the city hall at Windsor are the words, "National Service is the Duty of Every Citizen." That slogan has been put into effect throughout the land and men, women and children alike have their duties assigned to them, all working for the defence of the country.

The spirit of good humour, despite the terrific ordeal through which the people are going is finding expressions in the slogans that appear everywhere, especially after the blitzing by the German bombers. During a recent bombardment of London when an adjoining building to a barber shop was destroyed and the barber shop partially wrecked, the enterprising proprietor put up a notice card: "We had a close shave—how about you?" The security feature of life in England which means that all members of the community, including both the armed forces and civilians alike, are pledged to "secrecy" regarding troop movements or other information that might be of value to the enemy, is illustrated by the slogan: "Don't give information to a stranger, be like Dad 'Keep Mum'."

Owes Life to Lucky Chances

The speaker related personal experiences during the height of bombing raids on the city of Liverpool, stating that he owed his life in at least two instances on mere chance. Coming to Liverpool to embark for Canada he was refused permission to go aboard the ship which was to have taken him to this country and during the night "Jerry" came over and the ship in the harbor, with its entire complement of crew was blasted to bits. When refused permission to board his boat, Captain Jones took a room in a hotel but by chance changed rooms with another party and later found that his life had been saved by so doing as his former room was wrecked by a bomb explosion.

Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth have set a wonderful example to their people by their courage in the face of danger and by their unfaltering devotion to duty. Wherever cities have suffered in an unusual way by bombing, there the Queen or the King or both of them together, have gone, bringing messages of comfort and good cheer to their stricken people. Thus they have endeared themselves to all classes throughout the realm, resulting in deeper devotion to the Sovereign and his Queen.

Praises Services Organizations

Captain Jones was loud in his praise of the services rendered Canadian troops through the work of the Canadian Services organizations, the Y.M.C.A., Canadian Legion, the Salvation Army and the Knights of Columbus. "These organizations are helping in no little way to keep our soldiers fit in body, mind and spirit," he said.

This is accomplished in many interesting ways. Through the organizing of sports, the men are assisted to keep in good trim physically. By arrangement of concerts, dances, moving pictures, illustrated lectures and by educational classes, the morale of the troops is kept at high level; while in co-operation with the chaplain services, the spiritual needs of the men are administered. By the supply of writing materials the men are enabled to keep in touch with their homes and families and hospitality committees are introducing Canadians to home life in England.

Tea Cars Popular

Through the tea car service, supplying the men with hot tea and biscuits while they are out on route marches, the service organizations endeavour to be of practical assistance to the men at the point of greatest need. Thus in these and many other ways representatives of National Service organizations are doing their bit in the service of King and Country.

In conclusion Captain Jones stated that Prime Minister Churchill recently gave to the people of Britain and the Empire a new slogan, which contains a stirring challenge. The words of Mr. Churchill were: "Deserve Victory." Canadians can respond to that challenge by living their lives on the highest possible level, by rendering the fullest possible service for the common cause and by making the greatest possible sacrifices in support of the government and the armed forces, until final victory is achieved.

Flags And Bunting Give Stores And Homes Colorful Appearance

Pre-campaign enthusiasm is gradually mounting, according to campaign officials. The city itself is gradually assuming a colorful patriotic appearance as householders, business men and industrialists are beginning to decorate their premises with flags and bunting. Centre spot of the city the City Hall and its facades are a mass of red, white and blue. A warlike touch of atmosphere made its appearance Wednesday night when workmen under the direction of Chairman of Features, James Fraser erected a "dugout" with actual sandbags. The dugout, or shelter, was the cynosure of hundreds of eyes last night and today. Atop the structure is a sign, "Are we going to allow the British people to live in huts like this? BUY VICTORY BONDS NOW."

Downtown offices, shops and other places of business are bunting-bedecked. Many private residents in other parts of the city are likewise decorating their houses. By the time the campaign officially opens, it is expected the entire city will be in keeping with other centres of the Dominion and demonstrate by its patriotic appearance that it is behind the Dominion and Empire in the fight for freedom.

Officials are leaving no stones unturned to give the city as colorful a decorative setting as is possible.

Headquarters Finely Decorated

Yesterday in front of the bunting-covered headquarters at 278 Front Street, members of a city Boy Scout troop erected a sand-bagged machine-gun emplacement, from which protudes the sinister muzzle of a machine-gun of the vintage of the last war.

The front of the headquarters is a riot of red, white and blue. In the windows John Bull's famous bulldog glares defiance at the common enemy from a background of battleships of the line and the Union Jack. More machine-guns occupy prominent places in the window decorative motif. Brass shell cases are reminiscent of the last war. Steel helmets, and the spiked head-dress of the former Prussian Guards and Bavarians add a touch of wartime atmosphere. Festoons of bunting decorate the facades of the building while a large sign in patriotic colors identifies the premises.

Distribute Colorful Posters

Colorful posters which bring home the message of the need of the Victory in startling clarity were distributed all over the city yesterday by Jamie Clark aided by the Boy Scouts. Service clubs of the city have volunteered their services and will be given the opportunity to assist in various ways. Inside the offices a battery of stenographers are preparing the hundred-and-one necessities, vital to the campaign. Various chairmen come and go intermittently, intent on their respective jobs. The entire scene is one of bustling activity.

Organization of the county is now complete, officials said today, and everyone awaits the opening gun of the campaign with a feeling that bespeaks optimism and faith in the residents of the district to "help supply the tools" so the job can be finished.

PHILIP A. VAN DE WATER

(Picton)

Picton, May 30 (Special) — The death of Philip Andrew Van de Water occurred suddenly on Wedneday afternoon at his home Main Street East. He was formerly prominent in the business life of the town as a garage operator and motor car dealer.

Mr. Van de Water was born at West Lake in 1863, the son of Philip Clapp Van de Water and his wife, Annie Saylor. Two years later he moved with his father's family to Thurlow township, but after ten years across the bay, Mr. Van de Water decided to return to the native county and purchased the Trumpour farm in Gilead. He made his home with the family there until he was 24 when he married Emma J. Purtelle. In February 1937 they marked their golden wedding anniversary. After their marriage, they settled on the Third Concession of Hillier. Shortly afterwards Mr. Van de Water traded farms and secured "The Maples," Mrs. Van de Water's old home at Mount Pleasant. It was here that their three children were born.

Mr. Van de Water owned "The Maples" for 22 years, two of which the family spent in Belleville. Having sold the farm to W. B. Leavens, he purchased the Bert Davidson farm in Hillier and two years later disposed of it to Canadian Canners. This was in 1911 when the prairies were booming and the family moved to Lethbridge Alberta, where for two years Mr. Van de Water entered extensively into real estate. In the fall of 1913 he returned to Winnipeg and, after six months in that city, came to Toronto, where he remained a short time before returning to Picton in the fall of 1914.

In Picton, he purchased a half interest in the Picton Garage from Mr. George Johnston, and during the next fifteen years operated that business. After a few years he purchased the entire business from Mr. Johnston. During these fifteen years he was local representative of the Ford and later General Motors cars. In 1929, Mr. Van de Water disposed of his business to Mr. Kimsley and later this building was demolished and replaced by the present Grindrod Service Station. Since selling his business, Mr. Van de Water had lived a retired life.

Beside his wife, Mr. Van de Water is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Geo. K. Mitford (Helen) of Toronto, James Van de Water of Kitchener and Edward B. (Ted) of Belleville, also three brothers and three sisters, William of Belleville; Elmer of Vancouver; Arnold of Wellington; Mrs. J. P. Gillespie of Picton; Mrs. Ed Benson, Windsor; Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wellington.

The funeral service was held at his late residence, East Main Street, at 3.30 Friday afternoon with interment in Glenwood cemetery.

POLICE COURT

Practically all of the cases presented in City Police Court before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., on Friday were traffic violations.

G. L. Howard, E. M. Lucas and J. M. Hamilton all paid five dollars and $2.25 costs for speeding, the latter being aboard a motorcycle, when apprehended travelling at a greater rate of speed than 30 miles per hour within the city limits. W. J. Sopha was fined a similar amount when convicted of careless driving and Herbert Lovelace, R.R. No. 1, Belleville, was assessed $25.00 and costs for operating a motor car while his driver's permit was under suspension. The motor vehicle he was driving was ordered impounded for three months also.

Impound Car

Joseph LaBelle, Toronto, was sentenced to serve seven days in jail after pleading guilty to a charge of drunken driving. Costs amounting to $17.75 were also imposed in this case and his car ordered impounded for three months.

"This man had been drinking wine and was in a terrible state of intoxication when he was found sitting in his car with the motor running on George St.," revealed Chief Kidd. Three inebriates, none of whom were able to pay the conventional fine of "ten and costs" were sent to jail for 14 days in default.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., conducted all prosecutions, while Mr. E. O. Butler, local barrister, represented the defence in the Lovelace case.

TAKE LOVE SERIOUSLY

Mexico City, May 30 (AP)—They had to send troops to the little village of Santa Ana, Jalisco, to restore order today after a love affair resulted in a shooting affray in which five were killed and two injured. The whole village took sides in the case, which brought death to a young lover, two of his brothers and two brothers of the girl.

Plans Completed For Grand Rally At Fair Grounds To Inaugurate National Victory Loan Campaign

Residents of this city and district will get a first-hand opportunity to watch the guns that combat enemy mechanized equipment, in action, here on Sunday afternoon when the Fourth Anti-Tank Battery, commanded by Lieut.-Colonel T. Y. Wills, formerly of this city, will go through tactical manoeuvres as part of the ceremonies which will inaugurate the National Victory Loan Campaign in this district.

According to information received here yesterday by campaign officials, upwards of twenty-five pieces of mechanized equipment will be brought here by the battery, which will go through part of its advanced training, as a feature of the ceremonies being held in the Fair Grounds here.

The manoeuvres will climax a parade of military units comprised of the battery, reserve force units of the district, the Army and Navy Veterans and the Belleville Collegiate Institute Cadet Corps.

Following the arrival of the parade at the Fair Grounds, the troops will march past a base where Lieut.-Colonel A. B. Gribble, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) R.F., will take the salute. With Col. Gribble will be associated Colonel G. E. Reynolds, M.C., D.C.M., president of the Canadian Corps who will deliver the principal address of the afternoon, and prominent campaign, civil, political and municipal dignitaries.

The parading units will fall in at the Armouries at 1.45 p.m. daylight saving time, and led by the Band of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band, the Belleville Municipal Band and other musical units, will march to the Fair Grounds, arriving there at sharp three o'clock.

Immediately after the military manoeuvres and march-past, Judge Charles A. Cameron, General Chairman of the Hastings County Victory Loan Committee, will address the assembly briefly and the gathered crowd will sing "O Canada." Major the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, will offer prayer and the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers" will be sung.

Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater, well-known war veteran of this district, will introduce the guest speaker, and following the address, appreciation of this city and district to the distinguished guest will be voiced by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

The Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College, will offer prayer and Judge Cameron will again address the assemblage. The National Anthem will conclude the afternoon's ceremonies ,and the Hastings County Victory Loan Campaign will be off to an auspicious start.

Trenton and District

T. H. S. Air Cadets Undergo Inspection

Trenton, May 30—Smartly dressed air cadets and cadettes of the Trenton High School were inspected yesterday by officers from Military District No. 3 Headquarters and from the Royal Canadian Air Force, while large numbers of parents, friends and citizens witnessed the inspection.

The inspecting officers were Squadron Leader W. G. Chapman, D.C.M., D.F.M., Flying Officer A. H. O'Neill both of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, Captain S. R. Widdis, of the Second Battalion of the Midland Regiment, who is the cadet inspecting officer and Major W. G. Grothier Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment.

The girls, wearing a uniform of tunic and white blouse, stole the show as they displayed their ability in marching and military manoeuvres. Trained by non-commissioned officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the girls went through their manouevres with precision that is noted in highly trained units.

The cadets were the first unit to be inspected yesterday afternoon. Sqn. Ldr. Chapman accompanied by Capt. S. R. Widdis made a thorough inspection of each cadet often stopping to speak to one of them. Following this inspection the cadets marched past the saluting base, where Sqn. Ldr. Chapman took the salute.

When the cadets had completed their march past, the corps put on a drill of athletics and squad drill, which was watched with interest by the spectators. Sqn. Ldr. D. J. Sutherland, officer commanding the cadets and Flight Lieutenant William Spencer, second-in-command of the cadets, were praised by the inspecting officers for their fine work.

Following the cadet inspection, the inspecting officers reviewed the cadettes. Squadron Leader Becky Gitelman officer commanding the cadettes, put the girls through their paces with surprising ability. The girls who were trained by airforcemen swung their arms and marched like veterans, during the reviewing exercises.

Both inspecting officers praised the girls for their excellent showing.

Both units took part in a parade through the business section of the town following the inspection. The cadets took the lead followed by the band and then the cadettes.

Only 28 Ships Loaded in U.S. Sunk During War

Washington, May 30 (AP)—Apparently authentic reports reached Congress today, that only 28 ships loaded with war supplies in United States ports have been sunk en route to Britain since the war began in September of 1939.

While no tabulation was available on the total number of such vessels to clear U.S. ports interested legislators said it was safe to asume that the lot ratio thus far had been relatively small.

Sinkings listed were said to have involved some food products from South America which were transhipped at ports here. It was pointed out, however, that the sinkings do not include sea losses of equipment produced in the United States and sent to Canada for shipment from Dominion ports.

The figure of 28 sinkings in the 21 months the conflict has been under way, some legislators said, tended to bear out a report Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission gave the Senate Commerce committee recently.

Land said that of 205 vessels which cleared United States ports for the United Kingdom between Dec. 30, 1940 and last March 31, only eight were sunk.

Land emphasised his figures were based on unofficial reports and might not be complete. He said, too, that they were no index of over-all British losses which he estimated might run as high as 5,000,000 tons annually.

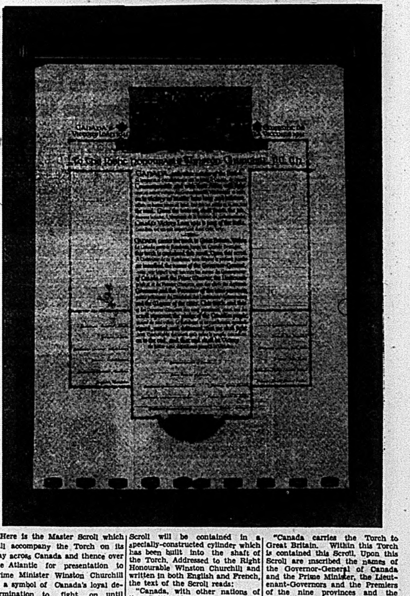
MASTER SCROLL FOR VICTORY LOAN TORCH



Here is the Master Scroll which will accompany the Torch on its way across Canada and thence over the Atlantic for presentation to Prime Minister Winston Churchill as a symbol of Canada's loyal determination to fight on until victory has been won. Besides containing a message to the British leader, the Scroll will also contain the signatures of Federal, Provincial and Municipal officials. The Scroll will be contained in a specially-constructed cylinder which has been built into the shaft of the Torch. Addressed to the Right Honourable Winston Churchill and written in both English and French, the text of the Scroll reads:

"Canada, with other nations of the British Commonwealth and their Allies, will fight on to victory no matter how long and toilsome the road. Given the tools we shall finish the job. Canada's Victory Loan, 1941, is part of the tools.

"Canada carries the Torch to Great Britain. Within this Torch is contained this Scroll. Upon this Scroll are inscribed the names of the Governor-General of Canada and the Prime Minister, the Lieutenant-Governors and the Premiers of the nine provinces and the Mayors of the cities. This Scroll and this Torch represent the pledge of the Canadian people, signed, sealed and delivered, that we shall fight on to the end and that the end shall be victory."

WOMAN DEVELOPS INVISIBLE GLASS -LIKES TO DARN

Little Spinster Scientist Worked Hard Till She Became Famous With Her Discovery

By ADELAIDE KERR
Associated Press Staff Writer

Schenectady, N.Y. (AP) — Some day your eyeglasses may be invisible on your face. Some day you may see showcases whose glass walls seem to have disappeared. Some day your doctor may discover cause and cure of a baffling ailment by measuring your corpuscle thickness with a color scale.

If those twentieth century "miracles" do come true, their roots will reach back to a Schenectady science laboratory and a crisp little spinster—Dr. Katharine Blodgett—one of the world's few big-shot women scientists.

Two years ago Katharine Blodgett burst into print as the discoverer of "invisible glass." She had learned that a certain coating, applied to both sides of glass, extinguished the reflection of light and thus made the glass so transparent that it virtually disappeared from view.

She stumbled onto the knowledge after years of exacting work in the General Electric Laboratory, where she is Dr. Irving Langmuir's assistant. Science already had learned that an oily film, only one molecule thick, could be spread evenly on water. Dr. Blodgett went further. She found that if she spread a film of cadmium arachidate on water and dipped a glass slide into it, the film could be transferred to the glass in a layer only one ten-millionth of an inch thick. Then she learned that she could build up those layers and that 44 made the glass "invisible."

It's Non-Reflecting

Dr. Blodgett frowns on the phrase "invisible glass." She always says "non-reflecting." She also is quick to point out that nearly 50 years ago, other scientists found solutions which increased the transparency of optical glass plates. "But is was knowledge which lay by the side of the road. The non-reflecting glass we have can be used for lenses sealed inside instruments, such as microscopes and cameras."

In the laboratory, Dr. Blodgett works with intense silent concentration, her brown eyes snapping.

"It won't take long to tell about me," she said. "I was born right here in Schenectady, went to school in New York, was graduated from Bryn Mawr and got my MS at the University of Chicago. I have been here since, except for two years when I went to Cambridge University in England for my doctor's degree."

Summers, Dr. Blodgett spends her weekends at her cottage on Lake George. She loves swimming and boating, but hates to ski or skate. "I just don't like to have my feet slide out from under me."

One of her favorite pastimes is darning. "That's a nice peaceful occupation. You always know how you're going to come out. In science you don't."

Axis Libyan Forces Occupy Halfaya Pass

London, May 30 — (CP) — Axis forces driving across the Libyan-Egyptian frontier on a 30-mile front have been halted by British troops after occupying half a pass south of the border post of Salum, Reuters News Agency said today.

The only movements reported today around Salum were those of patrols.

In Ethiopia, British forces were clearing the roads from Dessie to Gondar and from Dessie to Assab. In the south patriotic forces were said to have surrounded Bako, in the lakes region.

ARMORED UNITS IN ACTION AGAINST IRAQUI

These carts are part of the armored car unit which dashed over the ground at Habbaniya airdrome, kicking up enough dust to obscure the vision of Iraqui insurgent gunners on the surrounding hills and thereby enable a repaired R.A.F. bomber to take off and escape. The bomber had been hit through the port wing by anti-aircraft fire while attacking the rebels. To have landed in the desert would have meant certain capture.

Nazi Parachutists on Crete Dropped Only a Few Feet From the Ground

London, May 30 (CP). — There were few moments in the battle for Crete "when we weren't being bombed, machine-gunned or being descended on by German parachutists," Royal Air Force officers just returned to Egypt from Crete said today in interviews with Edward Ward, British Broadcasting Corporation observer with the Imperial forces in the Middle East.

Ward's account was broadcast by the BBC.

One officer told Ward that on the first day of the attack German bombers and fighter planes "gave us a terrific strafing".

"Next day came the parachutists," he said. "The planes carrying them were only about 200 feet up and as soon as they got over land the parachutists started to jump. But they didn't allow for the height of a hill and lots of the poor devils were dropped only a few feet from the ground."

He said some of the parachute troops had stained their hands and faces green, and told of the use of white and red signal lights for communication between them. One parachutist captured by the British "was a big, strapping fellow whose nerves seemed just shot to pieces".

"After the first troop carrying planes arrived at the island they carried out a complete taxi service," the officer continued.

Didn't Care How They Landed.

"They didn't seem to care how they landed—some crash-landed on the field and some landed in the water. They must have landed 5,000 troops that day."

He described how he and some of his fellow air force men made their way to the Cretan capital.

"Some of our fellows joined up with a bunch of Maoris (native New Zealand troops) and went into a bayonet attack with them. Some of our boys had hardly handled a rifle before but they put up a marvellous show.

"But you should have seen the Maoris. They were terrific. They just seemed to laugh at wounds."

A Royal Air Force observer told Ward how Germans in gliders landed in an R.A.F. camp.

"They captured 40 of our men and officers," he said, "and then drove them ahead of them with their hands up towards some Australians.

"The Germans shouted to the Australians to surrender but the Australians just held their ground. Then, suddenly, at a signal from an R.A.F. officer, all the prisoners ducked and rolled down the hill. The Australians fired over their heads and got all the Germans."

The observer said parachutes were used to drop extra equipment for the parachute troops, such as guns, ammunition, bombs, trench mortars, hand grenades, food and wireless sets.

SELF-DISCIPLINE IS BRITISH NEED

Lord Kindersley, Boosting War Savings, Says Nation Hasn't Enough of It

London (CP)—Lord Kindersley, president of the National Savings Committee, said in a broadcast that Britons "must start at once to plan a sterner self-discipline."

"Today no one of us who is proud to call himself British may say 'thus far will I go and no further'," he said. "There is no room for halfway patriotism. At all times, on all occasions the country's needs must come first."

The savings movement would have to play an even greater part in helping the country to reach the goal, production of war weapons in ever-increasing numbers.

"There is not a moment to lose. Every ounce of labor and material that can possibly be made available must be concentrated on this task now."

Maximum saving and maximum war production went hand in hand. It was by the individual abstaining from all unnecessary expenditure that labor, material and shipping space were freed for war purposes, and that increased saving and lending to the government were made possible.

Taking the nation as a whole, he said, facts did not justify "misgivings on the part of some" as to the country's capacity to meet the Chancellor's demand for extra taxation and extra savings.

It had to be remembered that the Government's additional expenditure ultimately found its way into the pockets of the great mass of private individuals throughout the country. As each week passed and war production increased individuals would find less and less upon which to spend their money.

REVOLT IN IRAQ AGAINST BRITAIN COLLAPSES

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

LONDON STEELS SELF FOR BAD NEWS FROM CRETE

Rebel Army Left By Its Dictator Sues for Armistice

Advance Units Of British Army Already May Be in City of Baghdad

REVOLT IS CLOSED

London, May 31 (CP)—Iraq's 29-day, Nazi-supported revolt against Britain collapsed today, and the rebel army, deserted by its dictator, sued for an armistice.

British troops advancing from the west through the legendary site of the Garden of Eden are in control of Baghdad's suburbs and advance units already may have gone into the ancient city itself.

Authorized British spokesmen said the request for an armistice presumably had been granted, and that, "as between ourselves and the rebels, the whole thing is over."

The pro-Nazi Iraq premier, Rashid Ali Al Gailani, who seized power April 4 and later sought with German help to expel British military forces from the country, has fled the capital. Reuters News Agency reported he crossed the border into Iran (Persia) yesterday, accompanied by his chief of staff and a group of officers.

Situation Cleared Up

"The request for an armistice," it was said, "means as far as Arab participation is concerned the situation has been cleared up."

German support and promises of support, this source said, proved "inadequate."

One source said the German and Italian ministers in Baghdad had fled to Iran along with Rashid Ali's party.

There was no confirmation here of a report that Rashid Ali and his regent had carried the boy King Feisal across the border with them. The story was regarded as "most unlikely."

The armistice request was said to have been made within the past 48 hours, apparently by a committee of four in control of Baghdad.

German airplanes and ground personnel still may be in Iraq, one source said, but he declared the flight of Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani to Iran (Persia) and not to the Germans in Mosul "shows the faith he places in the protection the Germans can give him."

"It is now clear to the entire world," he said, "that any dispute in Iraq is not between the Arab world and Great Britain but between us and the Germans."

This source attributed what he called Nazi failure "to fan this Iraq rebellion into something very much bigger" largely to "the splendid fight our troops have put up in Crete".

A Reuters News Agency dispatch earlier said Arab irregulars, looting and firing their rifles in the streets, had caused wild disorders in Baghdad as British troops approached the city.

Ordained as a deacon in 1887, Canon Smith served as missionary at Madoc, Ont., from 1887 to 1889. He became rector at Cataraqui in 1917 after holding positions in various other Ontario centres. He retired in 1930.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, Maj. Stanley of Winnipeg and Capt. the Rev. Arthur of Trenton, Ont., a chaplain with the forces overseas; and two sisters in England.

GERMAN RAIDERS BLAST LIVERPOOL

Gov't. Says Raids Not Heavy and Damage and Casualties Light

London, May 31 (CP)—Nazi air raiders blasted last night at oft-bombed Liverpool, South Wales and other scattered targets on the British Isles but the government said the raids were not heavy and that damage and casualties were light.

Bad weather over the continent apparently kept the Royal Air Force at home.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire greeted Nazi planes which visited Liverpool and most of the planes remained at a great height. A communique said some houses were damaged in the Merseyside region and in South Wales and that there had been a few fatalities.

German raiders swept over a Welsh town this morning and dropped a number of bombs which did extensive damage in a residential section.

Observer Gives Graphic Description Of Battle Between Hood and Bismarck

(By J. R. N. NIXON)
(Reuters Special Correspondent with the Royal Navy)

London, May 31 (CP)—I watched the "Battle of Giants," which culminated in the sinking of the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck.

Standing on the bridge of one of His Majesty's ships I saw the 42,100-ton H.M.S. Hood, long the world's largest warship, go down only 200 or 300 yards away, with her guns still firing.

The end of the mighty Hood was an almost unbelievable nightmare. Shortly after the engagement began shells hit the 21-year-old battle cruiser.

There was a bright sheet of flame and she blew up.

Parts of her great hull were thrown hundreds of feet into the air and in a few minutes all that remained was a patch of smoke on the water and some small bits of wreckage.

The battleship Prince of Wales was hit soon afterward by a 15-inch shell, but the damage was slight.

The "Battle of the Giants" was the climax of a chase by the Hood and Prince of Wales and their accompanying destroyers at top speed to prevent the Bismarck from breaking out into the Atlantic to attack convoys.

Pursuit began off Iceland and continued hour after hour in the eerie half-light of an Arctic night.

The cruisers Suffolk and Norfolk, which had been shadowing the Bismarck since the big vessel left Bergen, Norway, kept the Hood and Prince of Wales informed of her movements and thus helped find

FIFTY-TWO KILLED 200 INJURED BY BOMBS IN DUBLIN

Three Bombs Dropped By Unidentified Plane In Eire's Capital

FIRES CONTROLLED

Dublin, May 31 (CP). — Premier Eamon de Valera walked grimly through bombed districts of Dublin today, inspecting ruins in which 20 to 30 persons died and perhaps 200 were injured in last night's raid by unidentified planes.

The premier viewed the wreckage of bombed houses and quietly asked questions of his police escort. Relief workers still were probing the wreckage for survivors.

In placing the total dead at 52, an official statement said 22 bodies had been recovered, and that 30 persons were unaccounted for and presumed to be dead.

(At Belfast, the Ministry of Security announced that German warplanes flew over northern Ireland during the night but failed to drop any bombs.)

Loss of life was the greatest Eire had suffered in an air raid since the war began. Unidentified planes bombed Dublin Jan. 2 and 3, causing three deaths and injuring 12 persons, and bombs fell again May 5 but there were no casualties.

One of the three bombs dropped this morning blasted windows from the official residence of Eire's President, Dr. Douglas Hyde.

Seen After Midnight

Anti-aircraft batteries began firing just after midnight, when the planes first were heard. No bombs fell until about 2 a.m. Since only three fell then, police surmised that an anti-aircraft shell might have struck a plane causing it to lose its bombs.

Two of the bombs fell on north-side residential areas, demolishing homes for a distance of 200 feet and burying their occupants. The third destroyed a number of shops about half a mile from the centre of the city.

A fire which started in the residential area was brought under control shortly before 5 a.m.

Buy Victory Bonds—For Victory Give Canvassers Hearty Welcome

Hastings County's Victory Loan Campaign starts on Monday. Fifty-five canvassers will offer the bonds in denominations of $50, $100 and larger amounts to residents of this city and county. And it is imperative that Hastings County greet them with open arms and open purses. Britain and the Empire is in the war to the finish. Canada's part is an important one, but she cannot play it unless she has the wholehearted co-operation of her people. Money is urgently needed to provide us with protection; everyone through the medium of the Loan has a chance to help with their money before they offer their lives. People buy annuities to protect their old age; insurance to protect their families and Victory Loan Bonds to protect their country and their lives. On the other hand Hitler doesn't issue bonds. He takes money, cattle and property for the Reich. Mussolini cannot issue any bonds; nobody trusts him. France cannot issue bonds any more; it's too late. She just pays eight million dollars every day for the maintenance of the Nazi army of occupation.

These situations cannot and will not exist in Canada, or the Empire. But in order that they do not menace us, Canada and Canadians must go all out with their money to see that we maintain our freedom and democratic way of living.

Belleville and Hastings County have proved that when they take their coats off, they really go to work. Thousands of Canadian cities, hamlets and towns will be doing the same thing on Monday. Dollars are only dollars but when they are converted into tanks, ships and planes they mean Victory. That is what the Victory loan is for. Not to pepper Hitler with bills but with bullets. Your fighting dollars can HURT. Make your dollars talk democracy. Put Belleville and Hastings County on the map as fighting outposts for a democratic victory. BUY BONDS TILL IT HURTS — THEN BUY MORE.

Bismarck 50-000-Ton Super-Dreadnought Says British Officer

A British Port, May 31 (CP)—Statements that the Nazi battleship Bismarck was a 50,000-ton super-dreadnought—largest fighting ship in the world—with 2,400 officers and men, threw into new perspective today last week's mighty naval duel in which she destroyed the battle cruiser Hood and then was sunk in vengeance.

A Royal Navy officer who participated in the sea fight which cut short the Bismarck's challenge to British naval supremacy gave the first indication the Nazi capital ship was bigger than the 35,000-ton rating generally accorded her.

She was a 50,000-ton battleship, the officer declared—"undoubtedly far above anything we had thought of."

That statement shed new light on an assertion by a survivor of the Bismarck that she was crowded with 2,400 officers and men, 400 of them naval cadets. Approximately 100 were reported rescued.

Previously, supposing the Bismarck a 35,000-ton ship, it had been estimated she carried no more than 1,500 officers and men.

Bismarck's First Action

(The ship's fight with the Hood and Britain's new 35,000-ton Prince of Wales last Saturday was the Bismarck's first reported naval action since her completion during the war.

(Indications she was far bigger than the 35,000-ton listing raised the question of the size of Germany's other new battleship, the Tirpitz, believed completed but not officially reported in action. She had been listed as a sister ship of the Bismarck.)

MIGHT OF FLEET SAFELY LANDS FIGHTING MEN

Believed Bismarck After Convoy Carrying Military Naval and Air Force Personnel

LAND IN CANADA

Ottawa, May 31 — (CP) — The might of the British fleet has seen another group of military, naval and air force personnel safely to this continent through the dangerous North Atlantic.

Their exact destinations in most cases undisclosed, this latest contingent of men and women of the fighting forces made the Atlantic crossing while units of the Royal Navy battled German ships in those waters in the greatest naval engagement of the war.

One member of the fleet air arm said the guns of the Nazi battleship Bismarck apparently were primed for an attack on a passenger vessel carrying him and other hundreds of British service personnel when the Royal Navy stepped in.

The liner was near the spot where H.M.S. Hood clashed fatally with the Bismarck. He said one of his ship's escorting vessels, H.M.S. Rodney, disappeared.

BRITISH PLANES ATTACK SFAX FOR SECOND TIME

Attack Takes Place 24 Hours After Vichy Protests Previous Bombing

VICHY WARNED

Vichy, May 31 (AP). — Vichy spokesmen said today that British planes attacked Sfax, French Tunisia, for a second time Friday, less than 24 hours after Vichy formally protested British bombing of the port Wednesday.

Three British planes bombed an Italian merchantman moored in the bay at 8 a.m. yesterday, the spokesman said, adding that the attackers were met with fire from French land batteries and pursuit planes. They claimed the Italian vessel Isarco was not hit, although eight bombs fell around her as she lay moored about two miles from the town.

In its protest on the Wednesday bombing, Vichy claimed there was no justification in international law for the attack, since the two Italian merchantmen said to have been hit that day had been there less than 72 hours.

(London retorted Vichy had been warned previously that Britain could not regard Vichy as entitled to the rights of neutral states and added that Vichy had been warned particularly about axis use of Tunisian waters.

BAGHDAD CAPTURE MATTER OF HOURS, GOVERNOR RESIGNS

British Motorized Units Reach Suburbs of Iraq Capital Says Report

CROSS EUPHRATES

Beirut, Lebanon, May 31 (AP)—British motorized units were reported to have reached the suburbs of Baghdad, capital of Iraq, today. The military governor of the city was reported to have resigned and Iraq auxiliary troops were said to have surrendered.

These reports said a provisional committee had been formed in Baghdad to take over administration of the capital as its capture by the British forces appeared to be but a matter of hours.

(British reports yesterday said Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani had flown to Iran, taking six-year-old King Feisal with him as British forces reached a point only five miles from Baghdad.)

Palestinian motorized troops were said to have appeared suddenly at the city's outskirts after crossing the Euphrates River at Ramadi, 60 miles to the west.

Resistance Abandoned.

All organized Iraq resistance appeared to have been abandoned, these reports said, following the resignation and possible flight of Economy Minister Sebhaoui, appointed only 24 hours before to take charge of the capital's defences.

It seemed probably that the provision committee already had reached an egreement with British authorities to avoid bloodshed.

Furthermore, the position of Iraq troops in the Baghdad and Basra sectors was described as "precarious" in dispatches to Beirut.

It was believed that the deposed regent, Emir Abdul Ilah, would enter Baghdad at once to form a new government with Jemil Matfai as premier.

Military Parade Will Arrive at Fair Grounds at 3 P. M.

Residents of the city are reminded that the Military Parade which will precede the Victory Loan Rally being held in the Fair Grounds tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon will arrive at the Grounds at sharp three o'clock.

The 4th Anti-Tank Battery and reserve force regiments of the district, the Army and Navy Veterans and the Cadet Corps of the Belleville Collegiate Institute headed by district and regimental bands will fall in at the Armouries at 1.45.

LARGE AIR BATTLE

Cairo, Egypt, May 31.—(AP)—Large forces of British and Axis aircraft have clashed over the eastern Mediterranean, the Royal Air Force announced today.

82 Survivors Torn From Ecstacy Of Victory to Bitterness Of Defeat

An English port, May 31 —(AP)—This is the story of men torn from the ecstacy of victory to the bitterness of defeat—82 haggard survivors of the sunken German battleship Bismarck.

Their grim faces illuminated by flickering lights at the water's edge they shuffled slowly down a gang-plank onto British soil early today, speechless, walking like men dazed.

"That's just it," commented a British officer. "That's the way most of them have acted ever since we dragged them from the water."

They were not talking, not even muttering to one another. With the shock of their experiences in their hollow eyes, they stared ahead or at their own stumbling feet as they stepped onto British soil.

"It's easy to realize their feelings," a British officer said. "They sank the Hood, one of the war's greatest prizes, and then lived to be sunk in turn. You know, they went almost all the way toward whole hero, only to have every hope dissipated."

"That's no ordinary group of seamen, either," another British officer remarked. "They kept it struck their ensign. Kept it flying flying until the Bismarck went right over on her belly."

The Germans were clad as if headed for a masque-ball to vie for prizes for the most oddly-assorted costume.

"It's the strangest thing about their clothes," an officer said. "When we took them out of that icy sea many of them had on nothing, and some just burned rags. They told us—the ones that could speak English—that in the blasts that shook the Bismarck their clothes seemed to be just ripped off them."

The prisoners had been fitted out in spare and cast-off clothes of their captors.

Sometimes when Nazi prisoners are marched off to prison camps they raise their arms in the Nazi salute. These men didn't. Their shuffling gait unquickened, they filed past a line of British seamen into the darkness.

Little Information As to Fate of British, Greek Defenders

British Claim to Hold Candia Despite Nazi Claims—Heavy Fighting Reported

PRESS TAKES DARK VIEW

London, May 31.—(CP)—Britons steeled themselves today for news of disaster —the loss of Crete—but there was little definite information in London as to the fate of the British-Greek defenders of that vital little Greek Island.

Fierce fighting still was said to be going on around Heraclean (Candia), the island's largest city, which British sources say they still hold despite Nazi claims it is in German hands.

All sources here brushed aside questions of possible British withdrawal from Crete, which Prime Minister Churchill said May 7 would be defended "to the death".

(The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a broadcast picked up in New York last night by the Columbia Broadcasting system, mentioned "British soldiers and airmen who have returned to Egypt from Crete".)

The morning papers in London printed reports of heavy fighting in Crete beside Nazi claims that British resistance had collapsed.

Two Royal Air Force Middle East communiques issued yesterday and last night omitted references to Crete, except to mention patrols over the Mediterranean between North Africa and the embattled island. The communiques stirred speculation as to whether all air attacks on the Nazis on Crete had ceased.

There also was fear in London that Axis forces finally had succeeded in breaking through with sea-borne troops, since there was no word of any recent naval operations around Crete.

The London Press took a dark view of the situation but paid tribute to the resistance offered by British forces. The Times said:—

"The outlook in Crete has become unpromising . . . . This terrific struggle has not raged 12 days. It is greatly to be doubted whether the enemy expected it to last so long and he must be eager to see it decided . . . .

"The Imperial forces and their Greek Allies have put up one of the most astonishing and inspiring fights yet witnessed in this war. . It cannot be doubted that many lessons have been learned in this small campaign".

Summing up these lessons, the London Evening Standard commented last night:—

"Airborne troops reveal that they have the capacity to translate themselves from an advance guard into an occupying force. The glider, the troop-carrying air-plane and the parachutist now permit the ranging choice of strategy once thought to be the perquisite of naval power.

Maj.-Gen. Freyberg Alive With Troops Despite Nazi Claims

London, May 31 (CP).—The War Office announced today that Maj.-Gen. Bernard Freyberg, V.C., British commander in Crete, "is alive and with his troops". The Germans had claimed he was killed in an air-plane accident while en route to Egypt.

"With reference to the German statements alleging the death of Gen. Freyberg," the announcement said, "we are glad to announce that he is alive and with his troops."

The German radio claimed yesterday that Gen. Freyberg was killed in an air crash while flying from Crete to Egypt and accused him of deserting his command at a moment of peril.

R. C. A. F. Personnel Praised for Work in Search for Bismarck

London, May 31—(CP)—Participation of Royal Canadian Air Force planes in search for the German battleship Bismarck was praised Friday in a message from Air Commodore L. F. Stevenson, Officer Commanding the R.C.A.F. in Britain, broadcast to Canada by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The message will be broadcast over a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation national network in a program next Monday night at 10.30 p.m. EDT.

"It was a great satisfaction for naval and air staffs here to know that the ocean area for which Canada is responsible is being so well guarded." Air Commodore Stevenson said.

Sinking of H. M. S. Hood off Greenland last Saturday by the Bismarck and the latter's subsequent destruction by British naval units and planes brought the war closer to Canada, he added.

R.C.A.F. personnel in Britain has been increasing steadily, he said and its squadrons were "in fine fettle."

(The Air Ministry in Ottawa announced this week that Royal Canadian Air Force bombers and planes of the Atlantic ferry organization took part in the search for the Bismarck after the Hood went down.)

AVERAGE RAINFALL FOR MAY DOWN

Considerably less than the average amount of rainfall was received in this district during the month of May, 1941, it was disclosed by officials of the Belleville Purification Plant this morning. During the present month a total of 1.37 inches of rain fell as compared to a total of 5.02 inches during May, 1940. Resident Nabs Night Prowler

After having been annoyed by mysterious knockings upon window panes and doors of his home for the past few nights, William King, 10 Wills St., decided to do some thorough investigating of the matter himself and last night was rewarded for his efforts when he apprehended the cause of the trouble, a man, who later gave his name as James Dempsey, age 26, and who is believed to reside at 337 1-2 Front St. Mr. and Mrs. King picked up the man outside their home late Friday night and held him until police arrived.

Mr. King and his family have been annoyed by these knockings upon doors and windows of his home at nights until the trouble became serious. Late last night Mr. and Mrs. King extinguished the lights in their home and sat waiting for the possible re-occurrence of the mysterious noises. Although they waited nearly an hour they were finally rewarded for their patience when a knock was heard first on a window and later at a side door. Mr. King leaped through the unlatched door and grabbed a man. With the assistance of his wife the marauder was held until city police were notified and arrived.

Today the man, who gave his name as James Dempsey, was remanded to the custody of the county jail on a charge of intoxication. The case will be heard in detail in Monday's court.

TAX CRITICISM REPLIED TO BY HON. J. L. ILSLEY

Taxes That Hurt No One Cannot Produce Much Money Says Finance Minister

MANY ACTS PASSED

By FRANK FLAHERTY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 31 (CP)—Taxes that hurt no one cannot produce much money, Finance Minister Ilsley reminded the House of Commons last night after listening to criticisms of the 20-per-cent amusement tax and suggestions for exemptions from it.

He was replying to several Conservative members who had expressed concern about the effect of the tax on amateur sport, and particularly to Harry Jackman (Con. Toronto-Rosedale) who said the tax was too heavy on small motion picture theatres and would drive some out of business.

"We cannot run this country having in mind only the prosperity and material well-being of everybody in the country," said Mr. Ilsley. "That is not the first consideration. It is away down on the list of considerations. Therefore this heavy tax was put on."

Mr. Jackman said people in business should not be allowed to go out of business and the Minister should not take "such a sadistic attitude."

"That adjective was used in a newspaper reference to me one time and I was very much amused by it," said Mr. Ilsley. "There is nothing sadistic about my attitude."

"You came close to it a moment ago," said Mr. Jackman.

"Not at all," retorted the Minister. "I wish my honorable friend would give me suggestions as to how to raise money instead of continually pleading the case of special taxpayers against the general taxpayers of the country."

Amend Conservation Act.

During its day and night sittings the House passed the bill amending the War Exchange Conservation Act to give special tariff concessions to the United Kingdom, and in committee of the whole approved a number of clauses in the bill amending the Special War Revenue Act, including the amusement tax and the increase from one to two cents in the excise tax on sugar.

(The price of sugar was not changed by the sugar tax increase proposed in the April 29 budget, to take effect immediately. Several weeks before Finance Minister Ilsley had arranged a one-cent increase in the refinery price of sugar to curb any tendency toward speculative buying in anticipation of the budget.

(The one-cent increase in the sugar tax, now before parliament for ratification, merely replaces this previously-ordered one-cent boost.)

During debate on the amusement tax Mr. Ilsley said one of the things which led to the budget proposal of a tax on motion picture receipts was a movie-going boom in Canada. More than 60 applications for permits for new theatres were submitted and plans for a theatre chain across the country were under way. The government took steps to prevent the building of these theatres.

Proper To Impose Tax.

This threw more revenue to existing theatres who had protested against the building of new houses. Theatres were crowded in many parts of Canada. He thought it proper to impose a tax even though it did place "some brake on the expansion of the theatre industry".

Mr. Ilsley said members were deluged with telegrams from theatre operators saying they took no exception to the tax but wanted it applied to other amusements. Now, he said, members were protesting its application to other amusements although a short time before the sentiment of the House had been that it should be so applied.

Neither Mr. Ilsley nor Revenue Minister Gibson who will administer the tax would commit himself on the extent to which amateur sports would be exempted under the provision which gives Mr. Gibson power to exempt entertainments conducted for charitable purposes where there is no gain to the promoters.

Judged On Merits

Mr. Gibson said each case would have to be judged on its merits but a tolerant view would be taken of sports organizations where there was no actual profit but a share capital set-up which might be construed as entitling shareholders to some benefit. Mr. Ilsley said a "Liberal interpretation" would be given the exemptions.

Conservative House Leader Hanson said as long as the tax applied to other commercial amusements he was sure motion picture operators would accept the principle of the tax. He said he was concerned about the effect on amateur sport.

C.C.F. members came to the support of the Government in the race of Conservative attempts to secure various exemptions from the tax.

M. J. Coldwell, Acting C.C.F. House Leader, commented that the House spent more time on the amusement tax than on the increase in the National Defence Tax.

He was interested in amateur sport and wished a movement would start to restore pure amateurism.

In answer to a question about the position of amateur sport Mr. Ilsley said he would give no commitment as he was advised no line of demarcation could be drawn between amateur and professional.

Belleville Motor Club Discusses Safety Measures for Pedestrians And Motorists at Annual Meeting

Discussion of safety measures for pedestrians and motorists took up most of the members' time at the annual meeting of the Belleville Motor Club, held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Friday evening. Election of officers for the ensuing year and discussion of other business concluded the agenda.

Owing to the very noticeable and dangerous habit of pedestrians persisting in crossing streets in the city, where traffic is controlled by signal lights, when the red light is against them, thus having their lives endangered by dodging oncoming traffic, it was suggested that a "safety day", be held in Belleville some time during the summer. The program to be followed would be much the same as in other cities where safety days are observed and would entail equipping a motorcar with an amplifier system, parking the vehicle near a busy corner with an announcer watching traffic closely and reminding motorists or pedestrians of all traffic laws which they failed to observe. The permission of police authorities would necessarily have to be secured to carry out this program, but members felt that it would have far-reaching results and would be good publicity for the Motor Club.

Club to Purchase Bonds

The question of having older school pupils act as guards for the younger children, when crossing busy streets after school hours and when going home from school was again brought up for discussion, it being stated that this system has been in operation in many of the larger centres for some time. The matter had been suggested to local police circles but no action had been taken. One member suggested that greater co-operation might be received should the matter be taken up with the various school principals. The secretary was instructed to write the Ontario Motor League to get their opinion as to what procedure should be taken.

Among the items of business discussed during the meeting was the matter of purchasing Victory Bonds with Club funds, it being decided to purchase $200 worth of bonds. Mr. J. O. Herity, after reading the minutes of the preceding annual meeting, read the financial statement for the past year and disclosed a favourable bank balance of $399.99.

During the past year there had been a fifty per cent increase in the number of paid up members of the club, it was announced by the membership committee. At the present time there were 58 paid up members, of which 36 were new members within the year. Also four new service stations had been enlisted with the O.M.L. to provide free towing service, etc.

H. O. Trusdale, president of the club, reported on recent directorate meetings of the O.M.L., stating that movement had been suggested to replace present wig-wag warning signals at railway crossing with a system of gates and flashing warning lights. Several local members were unfavorable to such a change however.

To Run Weekly Ad

Both the Provincial and Federal Governments were expending larger sums of money this year to advertise Canada and Ontario to Americans as a tourist resort, according to Mr. Trusdale. The County of Essex had brought in measures asking for a change in border regulations which were resented by Americans. The O.M.L. felt that it was largely due to their efforts that the recent tax of three cents imposed on gasoline was not greater. It had been the intention of the government to make the tax five cents, it was stated.

The matter of advertising the Belleville Motor Club through newspaper channels and thereby possibly attain a larger membership was discussed, it being decided to run a weekly ad in the local paper for a specified time.

All of last year's officers were reelected to another term, the officials being—H. O. Trusdale president; F. A. Pinkston, 1st vice-president; T. D. Ruston, 2nd vice-president; J. O. Herity, secretary-treas. Directors are —J. G. Szelcher, J. B. Boyce, W. H. Middleton, A. E. May, T. J. Herity and Geo. B. Smith.

Britons Greet Bismarck Survivors Silently

London, May 31 (CP)—Bluejackets who tok part in th sinking of the German battleship Bismarck received a rousing welcome when they landed today at a British port, but survivors from the sunken German vessel were greeted with silence, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

"The bluejackets' ship slipped quietly into her anchorage but the news of her arrival soon spread and a large crowd awaited the tenders when they landed," the BBC said.

Two of the German prisoners were brought ashore in stretchers, and one casualty from among the British ratings was landed.

"When the German prisoners came to land the dockside was cleared and they came ashoer under a strong guard," the BBC said. "A number were in oilskins but most wroe only blue trousers and white singlets.

"Many were wtihout shoes, while others wore sandals."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barten, M.D

Epilepsy, Hysteria, Fainting

I have spoken before of a patient who "threw a fit" at our military base hospital. Fortunately, our consulting mental specialist came in the door as I was on my way up to investigate the trouble. Sure enough, about a half-dozen of the orderlies were holding the patient from damaging himself or the institution. One look at the patient convinced the specialist that it was not a "real" fit but simply hysteria—the patient was conscious and was enjoying the commotion being made in which he was the chief actor. The specialist ordered the orderlies to release the patient and go on with their duties elsewhere.

It was because the patient was conscious and was really not hurting himself by biting his tongue or in any other way, that showed that the attack was hysteria, not epilepsy.

Dr. F. Lemere, in Northwestern Medicine, points out the difference between ordinary fainting spells, hysterical attacks, and epilepsy.

In fainting spells the patient falls unconscious and his face is pale. He has a feeling of weakness, everything turns black and if he does not get his head low immediately, he faints away into unconsciousness. Treatment is simple; head is kept down and feet raised on a cushion or a chair.

In hysterical attacks, as noted above, there is no biting of the tongue and the patient does not lose control of himself—bowel or bladder. Treatment is to leave him alone in quietness. His "fit" is usually used to gain the sympathy of the family or others round about him. It is really a form of inferiority complex, the patient taking this method of attracting attention to himself.

In heart attacks, there is usually some change in the heart sounds and in the pulse. Dr. Lemere points out that "confusion, loss of memory, dream-like spells of sleep walking, more or less activity of the body doing "purposeless" acts night attacks (waking with a bitter tongue, soiled or disturbed bed sheets), irritability, slow thinking, emotionalism and monotonous or senseless remarks are "equivalents" of epileptic attacks.

The point then is that while hysterical attacks can usually be recognized and also true epileptic attacks where patient is unconscious and injuries himself it is well to remember that the symptoms outlined by Dr. Lemere—confusion, loss of memory, sleep walking, walking and talking without any real purpose—can be considered as epilepsy and should receive usual treatment of epilepsy—more fat foods, less starch and liquid foods

CHINA RECEIVES MORE U.S. AID

Bases Her War Plans in Main on Expectation of U.S. Supplies

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 31 (CP) — The republic of China is receiving an increasing share of United States war supplies under the Lend-Lease Act, to fortify the administration of Chiang Kai-Shek in the four-year war with Japan.

In his "fireside chat" Tuesday night, President Roosevelt made two direct references to American aid for China.

The Lend-Lease supplies going to China range from aircraft to army blankets and include trucks, guns, shells, power plants, steel and other industrial equipment.

Reports from Chungking indicate the arrangements have been made for the transfer of $100,000,000 worth of war supplies. Included in this total will be $15,000,000 worth of rails and other equipment to complete the railway from Kunming to Burma.

China, it has been reported here, bases most of her war plans on the expectation of United States supplies, not only of arms and ammunition but of metals, raw materials and plant equipment.

Picton and District

Picton, May 30—Following a request from Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and a visit from a delegation appointed by County Council, the Ontario Department of Highways is taking steps to improve Highway No. 14, from Picton to Belleville, which is in a very bad condition, and also to repair highway No. 33, Kingston to Trenton, via Glenora, Picton and Wellington.

Writing to James deC. Hepburn, M.P.P., R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister, under date of May 26, states, "I have your letter of May 21, with reference to the condition of highways in the County of Prince Edward. As a matter of fact our Department was able to get a contract covering the surfacing of a section between Belleville and Picton into effect the last day or so. The work will go ahead with the least possible delay. As to Highway No. 33, I had occasion to pass over the road myself recently and noted its condition. I am advising our engineer to hurry up the necessary improvements.—R. M Smith".

Honor Bride-To-Be

Cherry Valley hall was the scene of a happy event on Wednesday evening when the community gathered to honor, Miss Millie Dodds, a bride of next week. As she will be making her home in Winnipeg where Sgt. Ernest Potter, R.C.A.F., is stationed, the gifts were a wardrobe trunk, a set of packaways, a pair of silver candlesticks, a rose and white chenille bedspread and an ivory clock. In addition a number of other lovely gifts were received from friends.

The hall was fragrant with the scent from baskets of lilacs and lilies of the valley. The platform was decorated in airforce blue and white streamers. The bride's chair was decorated in a similar color scheme with streamers leading to the wall where appeared the letters R.C.A.F., in red, white and blue, and R.C.A.F. emblems. A basket of white lilacs and blue iris formed part of the background. The bride-elect was called to the platform by the chairman, Mr. Manly Flake, while Mrs. Albert Beckwith read an address and Miss Evelyn Brummell and Mrs. Arthur Fennell carried in the gifts. Miss Dodds suitably expressed her thanks and was greeted with "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow". She was smartly gowned in a rose and white jacket dress.

The program included community singing musical selections by Douglas Moore, Arthur Fennell, Norbert Kayanaugh and Mr. Stelmack; vocal solo "I Love You Truly" by Mrs. Gordon Bell; a balloon blowing contest conducted by Mrs. Beckwith; vocal solos, "Dark Eyes" and "Wish Me Luck", by Mrs. Stelmack; vocal duet, "Let Me Call you Sweetheart" by Carol and Mary Beckwith, and a timely address by Rev. L. B. Smith of Addison, a former minister on the circuit.

Dodd, W. E. Ambassador Dodd's Diary

Further interesting light is shed on the diplomatic scene of the first years of the Hitler regime, in this diary of a Chicago professor who was American ambassador to Berlin during the critical years, 1933-38. Prophecy as well as history are mingled in this eye-witness interpretation of Germany behind the scenes. Personal comments on prominent persons as well as outspoken warning to his countrymen of the fate which threatened them in a world given over to violence, make this book an outstanding one of the season.

HITLERISM CANNOT ENDURE

The vast and sinister fabric of Germany, ruled by one man either directly or through his creatures, be they Nazis or Quislings, will not endure, said Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden the other day.

"We cannot now foresee when the end will come. But it is the nature of a machine so rigid as the German to break suddenly and with little warning."

In the nature of things this artificial "empire" of Hitler's which is founded on the opposite of everything which means progress, cannot last. Captive races of Europe whom Hitler is trying to mould into an empire will never further the purposes of the tyrant of Berlin, the man who provoked war to make them slaves. Hitler's strength is like the strength of all tyrants based on nothing more than absolutism, violence and enmity. In the days of the old Roman empire emperors petted and fostered the army—their only hope but even these passed. While Hitler has a greater army than ever one of the Caesars had, he has under his army millions of people thoroughly alert, cultured, and with a sense of morality and culture the barbarous Nazi Germans entirely lack. The old Caesars had only the discontent in Rome and in their colonies and the people they called "barbarians" inside and outside of the empire against them. Yet the Caesars went down. They were against the instinct of humanity for development.

Subject peoples wait only the time and the opportunity to turn on their oppressors, the Huns. Hitler's only defence is brutality and force. The underlying motives of Nazism and Hitlerism are destructive with none of the elevating principles which other peoples possess. It is like a colony of germs of foul diseases, which destroy and do not build up.

CRADLE OF CIVILIZATION

The island of Crete, centre of the most titanic struggle it has seen in its long history, is recognized by historians and antiqarians as the birthplace of Greek civilization and the land where modern Europe can be said to have its beginning, says the Hamilton Spectator.

Crete has an ideal situation, midway among three continents, in relation to the development of civilization. It has always been looked upon as within the orbit of Europe. Investigation into the place of Crete in Aegean civilization was begun by Arthur Evans of Oxford University in the nineties. In 1900 he completed negotiations for the purchase of the palace site at Knossos so that he might begin investigations. Knossos, once capital of Crete, is likened in the discoveries to an earthly paradise. The people lived a life of natural and picturesque simplicity in a climate that was well nigh perfect. From Knossos Cretan civilization passed to the Greek mainland and from Greece gradually spread over Europe.

Today Crete and Britain stand out as the last really free citadels of freedom outside of Portugal, Switzerland and Sweden in Europe.

"In between Britain on the west and Crete in the east lies the wreck of Europe which had struggled for long before the Christian era to reach the plane of life achieved by Knossos—the right to fashion their own way of life, to win tolerance, liberty, full granaries and peace rather than the sword and slavery. Britain and Crete are therefore milestones in the long ascent of man towards a better world. They represent much in human progress. Alone they stand in the path of the monster, who thirsts for conquest over all mankind, alone they hold aloft the torch of the sacred flame."

Hess, Nazi No. 3, is now "otherwise engaged" than the Nazis at Berlin. That was the happy remark of Captain Anthony Eden on Thursday in the British Commons. It was a reminder to the Fuehrer and his satellites that Hess is a prisoner of war in Britain.

Two United States officers have been sent by the War Department at Washington to study the French language at Laval University for one year. French Canada is in this way able to make a valuable contribution to the great democracy to the South.

ARK ROYAL AGAIN

Many times has Honest Joe
  Had the Ark Royal on the bottom;
But British ships, he now should know,
Must be more than lied below
  Before you can claim you've got 'em.

No doubt the Bismarck's crew had heard
  Joe Goebbels' lying credo;
So they must have thought it quite absurd
To be hit by a ghost-ship's well-drowned bird
  With its water-logged torpedo.

No matter what the size of lie—
  Be it little fib or whopper—
The moral is: You should not try
To fool your friends as well thereby,
  For THEY may come a cropper.

THE district's finest will be out on parade tomorrow when the laddies of the 4th Anti-Tank Battery from Petawawa; the Hastings and Prince Edwards; the Argylls; the gunners of the old 34th Battery and the peppy kids of the Collegiate cadets will march to the Fair Grounds to assist in the inaugural ceremonies of the Victory Loan Campaign. It behooves every resident of this city to turn out and not only give the boys a fine reception, but to show by their presence that they are behind the country's war effort.

TRIUMPH

These are conquests of the soul,
  Not the small day's loss and gain,
But the duty, large and whole;
  To have stood the pull and strain,
To have done with every hour,
All for which we had the power.

To have said the cheering word,
  To have given the useful mite,
And through all that has occurred
  To have tried to do the right;
To look back on all we've met,
Seeing little to regret.

These are triumphs best of all,
  When the day's employments end
To wish no word to recall,
  Leave no hurt we cannot mend;
And to know, when day is o'er,
That we could have done no more.

LINEMEN IN KHAKI

Playing an unsung but vital role in the network of defences being built along Canada's eastern coast are the men of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, who string the wires that are the nerve-lines of the whole system. It is these men who join the coastal batteries and the air stations and the naval yards into one wall of defence, each unit having the ability to communicate with the other at a moment's notice. In the upper photo a lineman strings new wires along the Atlantic seabord. In lower left a typical "wire doctor" is shown, and at lower right two members of the R.C.C.S. splice a submarine cable. OHIO BUCKEYE

Ohio buckeye is the popular name of a native American species of the family of trees to which the horse-chestnut belongs.

Because of the unpleasant odor of the bark the Ohio buckeye is sometimes known as the Fetid buckeye.

Many people make the mistake of supposing that the buckeye and the horse-chestnut are the same species of tree.

These two species belong to the same genus and are similar in many respects; but the horse-chestnut is a European tree transplanted in America, while the Ohio buckeye is a native.

The horse-chestnut is larger, sturdier and hardier than the buckeye and its leaves are rougher and its flowers are more profuse, showy and beautiful than its American cousin.

The picturesque name of the buckeye was suggested by the fact that when the shell first cracks the dark-brown nut with its pale brown scar resembles the half-opened eye of a deer.

It is said that even the Indians in the Ohio River valley called this nut "hetuck," meaning buck's eye.

As early as 1810 Francois Andrew Michaux in his work on North American forest trees, named this species Ohio buckeye because of its abundance in that state and adjoining regions.

The buckeye was popularized as the favorite Ohio tree in a speech delivered in 1833 at Cincinnati by Dr. Daniel Drake, pioneer physician, scientist and writer.

Ohio became nationally known as the Buckeye State during the Harrison Presidential campaign of 1840, during which cabins, canes and all sorts of articles were made of buckeye wood as a tribute to Ohio's first citizen to run for President.

The nuts, leaves and twigs of the buckeye are reputed to be poisonous to cattle, horses, sheep and other livestock.

Buckeye roots have been used as a poison to stupefy fish.

Buckeye nuts carried in the pocket are popularly said to prevent rheumatism and they are used as charms, amulets and good-luck pieces. Even Woodrow Wilson carried a buckeye in his pocket for luck.

Buckeye leaves have five fingers, while those of horse-chestnuts have seven. The buckeye is a solitary tree and now rare even in Ohio. It is probable that most Ohioans have seen more horse-chestnuts than they have buckeyes.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Hunchbacks Fewer Now Because of Conquest of Spinal TB.

Have you noticed that there seems to be fewer hunch-backed persons around now than there used to be? There really are fewer of these unfortunate cripples, medical records show. One prime reason is that the commonest cause of the condition is tuberculsis of the spine suffered in childhood. Pasteurization of milk has helped reduce the number of cases of spinal Tb.

Most persons probably think Tb. as a disease affecting only the lungs. Yet it attacks other parts of the body freely. It may settle in the bones and joints, the lymphatic glands in the back (causing them to break out into open sores); the vocal cords (inducing loss of voice), and the meninges at the base of the brain.

Tb. has been getting rather less attention lately than it used to and laymen may think it has been conquered, but doctors know this is not the fact. Much progress has been made in the conquest, but there still is no serum, vaccine or medicine that will prevent or cure it, though extravagant claims have been made for various patent medicines. There is only one treatment we can trust. It is rest accompanied by good nursing.

Tb. can be cured or made dormant if it is discovered early and if the patient does what his doctor tells him to. What the doctor will do is to put the patient to bed and keep him there for months. Long after the patient's temperature has dropped to normal and feels good enough to want to get up and resume his normal life, the doctor will keep him in bed, making him rest.

Rest will be helped in affecting the cure by proper diet. Fortunately the foods best for tubercular patients are easy to get and comparatively cheap. They are milk, eggs, fruit, vegetables, fresh fish and meat, and the more simply they are prepared the better.

Fresh air and sunshine are vital in the treatment of Tb., of course, but they are in most diseases. The patient doesn't need to go to a warm climate or any special climate. Cold fresh air does no harm if the patientis warmly covered.

Tb. can be treated at home, if the patient and his family are sensible people capable of taking a lot of precautions and no chances, but a sanitarium is usually the proper place for the Tb. sufferer. There, he doesn't expose other members of his family to the disease daily. There he will be forced to rest, and he will get proper nursing care. He will get mental encouragement, and maintenance of good morale is very important in treatment of Tb.

Everybody is attacked by Tb. at some time or another. Nine out of ten have Tb. infection that the body fights off. In others the bacillus gets the best of things because the body hasn't the forces to overwhelm it. The earliest symptom of its inroads will be an intolerable fatigue, with every muscle fibre crying out its weariness. The cough may come much later. Expectoration much later still. Meanwhile there will probably be a steady loss in weight. When there are these warning signs, the child or adult should be subjected immediately to a thorough examination by a competent doctor.

A NEW TWIST to the shirtwaist frock is the finely pleated tiered skirt. A new model of this type is done in gray chiffon with coral buttons and carved coral belt clasp.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girl Decides to Finish Education Before Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 17 years old and have been going with a young man of 20 for three years. Recently he gave me a ring. My mother has always disapproved of him, feeling that he inherited an uncontrollable temper from his father, and she thinks he will not provide for me in the manner to which I'm accustomed. Yet, she allowed me to accept the ring.

I think a great deal of this boy, and although I'm too young to marry now, I hope to do so after I finish my education. I'm a high school graduate, but am furthering my education.

Do you think I should give this boy up, or keep on going with him, knowing how my mother feels toward him? I realize that I'm too young to marry, but I've always kept friends with boys and girls much older than myself.

Perturbed.

It's a little difficult to understand your mother's attitude. She disapproves of the boy and yet she allowed you to accept his ring. Seventeen is pretty young to take a ring from a boy when one has no immediate thoughts of marrying. You're very sensible to decide to further your education before taking this highly important step.

Let me warn you that sometimes, with the most steadfast of resolutions, Cupid has a way of sneaking up and entangling young creatures with his wiles.

Mother Says He Sees Girl Friend Too Often

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 years old, still in school, and my girl is in the same building. Mother thinks we see each other too often, but I don't think twice a week is too much. Mother also says we should not take our love so seriously, but isn't it possible that we two are really meant for each other?

We don't intend to marry for ages, at least not until we're in the middle twenties. And surely not until I have a good job that will bring in enough money to take care of both of us. Can you help us please?

Teen Age

There is no denying that young love is a most blissful state, and something to look back on in the disillusioned years of middle age. But when young love takes itself too seriously and rushes off to the clergyman or the magistrate and marries on nothing a year that is a mistake.

As you tell me you don't intend to marry until you're in the middle twenties, there is no reason why you should not see this young lady two or three times a week.

She's Interested in Spite of His Reputation

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 20 years old and have been going with a young man two years my senior.

Recently I met a man, eight years older than I, whose reputation isn't very flattering. I've been out with him several times, and he has always shown me the utmost courtesy. I would like to see more of him and think the feeling is mutual. However, do you think his age and so-called wild life should prevent this?

Please think this over, as it means a great deal to me. I shall look for your advice in your column.

L. K.

Some times these "wild fowl" behave in the most exemplary fashion when they meet a "nice" girl. If his conduct continues to be circumspect as you state, you have every reason to believe he's turned over a new leaf. However these wild young men can stand a bit of watching. If he shows any symptoms of becoming forward I think you would do well to drop him.

Better To Invite Him Into House

Dear Miss Fairfax:

You've helped so many people with their problems that I'm sure you can help me too.

When my boy friend and I go to the movies, it doesn't take up the entire evening, so we sit in his car and talk for an hour or more. I'm wondering if it is right to do that, or would it be better to invite him into the house for a while?

Jill.

Sitting in your boy friend's car for a visit usually gives the neighborhood gossips something to wag their tongues over. If you're superior to this line of chatter, it's all right to visit in his car. But if you're an observer of the conventions, better invite the young man into the house.

Must Choose Between Son and Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband died when we were married only three years, and left me with a baby boy. I put the child in a good home and went to work. I became a nurse and, while on a case, met a man whom I later married. As my work kept me away a good deal, I left my son in the home but paid extra so he could have special privileges. I had hoped that my husband would learn to love my son, but just the opposite happened.

Then my husband became ill and lost his job and now I have to support him. Don't you think his attitude in insisting that I keep my son away from me is both wrong and selfish? I am the one who maintains our home, and think my son is entitled to a place in it. But every time I talk about it, he gets angry and sulks for several days. What would you do in my place?

Unhappy.

If I were in your place, my dear, I should never have allowed this situation, to get out of hand, as you have done. I should have taken my son from the home the moment it was financially possible for me to do so. If the boy's stepfather had acted like the stepfathers of the old-fashioned fairy tales, I should have insisted upon a different course of conduct or his taking a vacation until he changed his mind.

Boys should know their mothers, and I'd lose no time in taking the youngster from the home, whether the stepfather liked it or not.

He Wants To Do the Courting

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Why is it that most all girls want to be hugged and kissed the first time a man takes them out? I don't think I'm slow or abnormal, but I really object to kissing strange women the first time I see them.

And another thing, when a girl is too eager to make a date with me and tries to put her "tag" on me, I lose all interest in her. I want to do my own courting.

David.

A great many girls are without romance or reticence, and it looks as if you haven't met any but that kind. I also get letters from girls who object as strenuously as you do to what they call being subjected to "grizzly-bear tactics" on the part of young men they meet for the first time. Girls like these prefer to remain at home.

Just keep on trying until you meet the right type of girl.

Good Recipes For Whitewash

For the finishing touch there is nothing more effective or inexpensive than whitewash on basements and boundaries, fences, borders, garages and other outbuildings in the line of vision. Persons are often deterred from using whitewash on buildings out of doors through fear of spoilage by rain, and there are many who do not care to use whitewash indoors because they consider it messy, one reason being that they do not really know how to mix the ingredients properly.

For several years, the Dominion Experimental Farms have recommended two recipes, one for a rainproof, the other for a disinfectant whitewash, both originated by the Experimental Station at Scott, Sask. The waterproof whitewash for outdoor buildings is made up in the following proportions: slake 62 pounds of quick lime in 12 gallons of hot water, and add two pounds of salt and one pound of sulphate of zinc dissolved in two gallons of water. To this add two gallons of skim milk. An ounce of alum improves this wash but it is not essential. If the whitewash is required for metal surfaces subject to rust the salt should be omitted.

The recipe recommended for the disinfectant whitewash is as follows—dissolve 50 pounds of lime in eight gallons of boiling water. To this add six gallons of hot water in which ten pounds of salt and one pound of alum have been dissolved. A can of lye is added to every 25 gallons of the mixture. A pound of cement to every three gallons is gradually added and stirred thoroughly. The alum prevents the lime from rubbing off, the cement makes a creamy mixture easy to apply, and the lye is added as a disinfectant. A quart of creosol disinfectant to every eight gallons would serve the same purpose as the lye, but if a pure white wash is desired, the lye is preferable.

If a real snowy whiteness to whitewash is desired, it can be obtained by adding a very small quantity of washing blue.

THERE'S COLOR aplenty in some of the new evening frocks. Big bold block plaid, in green, pink and gray taffeta are used for a nice model made with apron drapery banded in green satin, and a green belt.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, June 1

SUNDAY'S horoscope favors spiritual, mystical, cultural and emotional affairs, has as well some very disconcerting or difficult situations of a purely private nature to be encountered and wisely dealt with. This is of an unpredictable nature with surprise, suddenness and baffling aspects of devastating force. Discretion, poise and emotional restraints are recommended. Elders may have to be placated or appeased.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which tact, finesse, and shrewd sagacity may produce benefits, while the elements of surprise, subtlety or strange adventure or dubious contacts may beget problems calling for much quick insight, equanimity and self-control to successfully meet peculiar and sudden situations. This perhaps in the emotional nature, with elders featuring as the menacing or opposing force.

A child born on this day may have much artistic ability, with social tendencies, yet may have a stubborn, erratic and unfathomable nature, needing much insight and penetration to cast its lines in fortunate places.

For Monday, June 2

Monday's astrological forecast may be for a rather adverse state of affairs, with the personal proclivities in line for creating all sorts of disturbance, danger, disaster and perhaps stern remorse. Quarrels, strife, indulgence, and intemperance generally mark the day, with reactions on health and well-being as on physical and financial safety. Risks of any kind extravagance and excess incite severe penalties, whereas such stimulated energy might be productive.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a highly stimulated mental, physical and emotional excitement, which if permitted to run riot would spell disaster sorrow, regret and financial as well as social ruin. Excess, indulgence, extravagance, strife and tumult may find disastrous reactions on the health, position and safety. Shun danger and be circumspect in all relations.

A child born on this day may be rash impetuous, wayward and self-indulgent to its undoing, unless given rigid early discipline in its moral character and also with finances.

FACTS ON FACIALS

Reaching the underlying structure and helping it maintain or regain its youthful tone is the objective

HERE'S how to do a professional facial in the privacy of your home!

If your face is young and lovely, help it retain its youthfulness, and if it is older, help it regain its more youthful contours and younger-looking skin. Creams and lotions will do wonders toward keeping or making the skin soft, smooth, fine-textured and supple, but you will have to lend a hand to the facial routine in order to reach the underlying structure and help it maintain or regain its firm, youthful buoyancy.

All of the aids used in this professional-facial-at-home routine have stood the test of time. With a well-trained beauty eye, the manufacturer has suited these creams and lotions to meet the needs of all skins. And although the steps of a professional-facial-at-home are the same, the cleansing varies according to the individual skin.

Let me remind you of some "musts" which are very important to the success of this and every facial at home.

1—Be sure that your skin is as clean as can be before beginning the massage movements. Use any one of the suggested creams suited to your particular type of skin.

2—Be sure that your hands are washed before touching them to your clean skin.

3—Use pads of cotton saturated with fragrant skin freshener until you are certain that every trace of soil, stale make-up and cleansing agent has been wiped away.

4—Employ upward and outward massage movements throughout this facial, whether putting on or taking off an aid, or whether massaging face or throat.

5—Keep the skin covered with a sufficient coating of cream to enable the fingers to move along freely.

6—Use very gentle movements and a light touch except on the underchin and along the jawline where all pressure should be firm and even.

Now, before applying any of the basic steps, it is necessary to cleanse the skin. There is one cleansing cream for skin of average texture; another, a gloriously light, double-whipped cream, which is especially prepared for skins of fine texture, dry or sensitive, and a third, a liquefying cream, created for skins coarse in texture with a tendency toward oiliness and enlarged pores. So, choose your weapon, so to speak, depending upon your type of skin, and give your face and throat a thorough cleansing. Apply a generous coating of cream, work it over the skin to loosen or dissolve soil and stale make-up, then remove all cleansing agent. Make another application of cream, smooth it over your skin, then remove all of it. If you want to be certain that all soil, as well as cream, has been removed, saturate a pad of cotton with skin freshener and rub it upward and outward over your face and throat. Take two or three pads, making sure that the final one shows snowy white without a trace of soil.

Then prepare the special blend of lubricants. This is done by mixing a little special formula cream with a few drops of toning oil in the palm of your hand. Regardless of your type of skin, this blend of lubricants acts as a normalizing agent and aids in keeping or making the skin soft. When you have your face and throat covered with this blend of cream and oil, begin your massage movements. Massage upward over your throat and underchin in long, even strokes. Begin low and work up to just back of the ears. Then, placing your hands in readiness, palms down and one hand just above the other, use both hands alternately in a firm, patting motion over your underchin and upward along your facial contour. Be sure that your skin is liberally coated with cream and oil so that your hands and fingers will slide over it smoothly.

Then massage upward around your chin and cheeks and around your lips. Place your thumb and middle finger together on your chin; then, slowly moving your fingers upward, separate them so that one is on each side of your lips. Continue this upward movement, from point of chin to nose, 10 times. This is an important movement in every facial massage as it helps soften the skin and aids in doing away with fine lines from lip-top to chin and from nose to the corners of the lips.

The real fingerprint massage, and any variation of it, is an old standby and is included in every facial. Place the fingertips of one hand firmly against the temple. Then, using the cushions of the fingers of the other hand, and beginning at the nose, fingerprint lightly as you move your action under the eye to the temple. Repeat this fingerprint movement under each eye 10 times. Then close your eyes and gently, very gently, fingerprint and massage each eyelid. Finally use a light stroking movement, then a light rotary movement from nose to temple, over your eyelid.

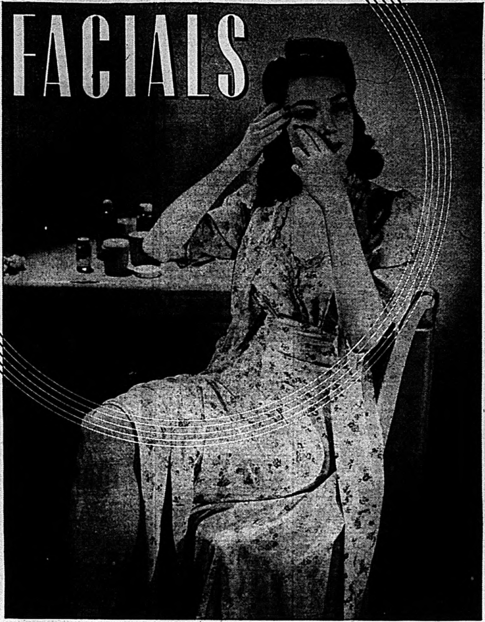
Next, massage upward and outward over the lid just under the brow, then work over the forehead. The brow massage should vary according to individual needs. If you have horizontal frown lines, use a light rotary movement first, then a straight upward movement working across the frown lines. If you have vertical frown lines, from brow to hairline, use the rotary movement, then an outward massage stroke from the center of the forehead to the temple. If lines over the nose between the eyes are especially noticeable, concentrate the forehead massage on them. Use a light and then a firm rotary movement. You can do a lot to discourage these lines and go far toward preventing them from becoming deeper by daily applications of the special formula cream and toning oil, blended together, and followed by correct massage movements.

When you have completed this entire professional-facial-at-home, use tissues for wiping away excess cream. Then moisten a pad of cotton with an effective herbal tincture and rub it upward and outward over face and throat. This is a daintily-perfumed liquid which leaves the skin feeling refreshed and invigorated. Because of the combination of corrective ingredients, this final application gives the skin a feeling of youthful tautness and firmness.

Give yourself a professional facial at home. You'll find the aids used in this home application of a professional routine delightfully pleasant to use and suited to the most modest budget.

Use a freshening lotion or herbal tincture on a cotton pad to remove the last trace of cleansing cream.

Photos posed exclusively for The Beauty Bazaar by Miss Judy Ford, John Powers' lovely professional model.



An important feature of the home facial is the correct massage movements around the eyes and over the forehead. They help make eye lines less noticeable and soften the skin. Employ forehead massage to combat ugly frown lines.

The basic step of every facial, professional or at-home, is the thorough cleansing of the skin. Use a cleansing agent suited to your type of skin for thorough results.

A special formula cream blended with a few drops of a toning oil makes an ideal lubricant for all skin types.

The underchin, throat and facial contour massage, as described in the accompanying article, has a part in providing firmer contours and discouraging fine lines.

Delight Dixon Says . . .

FOR throats and underchins which are has-beens when it comes to firm, youthful contours, there is a new liquid that is designed to take the place of a chin strap. Its application is invisible. A light coating of this lightly-scented chin beauty aid is smoothed on and may remain under your regular coating of powder or any other throat, neck and underchin make-up. Now you can give indefinite chin and jowl contours the appearance of firmness 24 hours each day.

A soap which cleanses thoroughly but is caressingly gentle on all types of skin leaves a lasting fragrance of white roses. This soap contains a large percentage of glycerine which aids in eliminating soil and natural oil as it soothes even the tenderest skins.

Constant daubing at make-up in public is a sure sign that you are not sure of yourself or the job you did with your basic application of cosmetics. Employ fastidious methods when using your cosmetics, putting each on most carefully, and your nose won't become shiny or your liprouge rub off so quickly. Don't turn the tables and make a dressing table of your dinner or bridge table. It's a frightful bore to those with and around you.

Wild rose is a fragrance to remember. Its soft, wistful perfume is well suited to every girl, young or old. It's a perfect fragrance for the girl young in years, as well as the older girl or woman young in heart. Cologne, soap, sachet and dusting powder in a shaker-top box are scented with this fragrance to remember.

Use skin protective measures early in the season if you want to preserve the fairness of your complexion. Whether you use a cream or a lotion sunburn preventive, the important thing is to use it often enough to assure complete protection. If you're on the beach, it's wise to make an application of lotion or cream after every dip in the water, and don't forget to use it on every area of exposed skin if you really hope to keep it fair.

Give your face a rest once in a while. Plan to go without makeup every so often. Cleanse your skin well and put on a little liprouge, if you want to feel spanking clean and as fresh as the proverbial daisy. Let soft winds and a not-too-bright sun put roses on your cheeks and a starry sparkle in your eyes. Let Nature have her way occasionally. It's a good beauty and health plan.

BEAUTY BAZAAR PROBLEMS

By Delight Dixon

MY 13-year-old daughter is between 15 and 20 pounds overweight. She isn't fat in spots, but is the roly-poly type and fat all over. Of course, this worries her and she never likes to go out in crowds or with any of her girl friends her own age. Please send me your diet and exercise suggestions, and any other ideas you think will help her lose weight. Mrs. HARRY K.

Your daughter's overweight may be due to some internal or glandular disturbance, in which case only a physician can help her. I'll be happy to send you my leaflets, but advise you to show them to your family doctor before permitting your daughter to follow my suggestions. Won't you please send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope so that I may forward my suggestions to you?

I've been using pure olive oil as a facial skin cleanser for years, but my skin never looks clean and its pores are getting large and seem to exude oil. Please let me know of a better skin cleansing method, one especially suited to oily skin. I'm 22 years old.

ROSE T.

Soap and water cleansings should be used on oily skin. Use a complexion brush, moistened with warm water, and a good soap for scrubbing all over your facial skin. Rinse off all soap, then dash lots of cold water over your skin. This will thoroughly cleanse your skin and aid in correcting oiliness and enlarged pores. Follow this cleansing method once each day and use soap and water with a washcloth once each day. Two cleansings daily will go far toward correcting excessively oily skin with enlarged pores.

My hair, which has always been a lovely blonde shade, is getting darker by the week. I should like to keep it light and am wondering whether this is possible without using a bleach. You have solved so many difficult problems for me, I'm counting on you to help me this time. Many thanks.

CONNIE HARPER.

Send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll forward my suggestions for making and using a splendid shampoo which will prevent your hair from darkening. This special blonde hair shampoo has proved thoroughly dependable and I'm sure you will like it. It is not a bleach, and may be used on any shade of light hair.

I have lived in a hard-water territory for seven years and have a skin problem that needs solving. The water is so hard it is almost impossible to use it for bathing, washing hands and face and shampooing the hair, let alone for the many household jobs such as dishwashing, laundry and all other soap and water cleaning. I've been wondering if you know of anything in the way of a water-softener that could be used for all purposes stated above.

MARIE C. P.

There is a splendid soap powder which may be used either in the bath water, face and hand washing water and as a household cleaning agent and water softener. It is made by a large and reputable manufacturer of fine soap and shampoo. I'll be delighted to send you further information on this product if you will forward me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. Please repeat your question when writing again.

Please let me know what to do to correct a bald spot that has appeared on my head. This bald spot appeared very suddenly about two weeks ago and was about the size of a dime, but is gradually getting larger. I've used tonics and ointments but without beneficial results. JESSIE.

Have a scalp specialist, or a doctor who is interested in diseases of the scalp, examine the affected region. Such scalp disorders are not unknown, but should be cared for immediately.

My 19-year-old daughter is having a lot of trouble with oily, blemished skin. She scrubs her face every day and has not used a bit of makeup, with the exception of lipstick, for the past seven weeks. Mrs. JACKSON.

Send me a three-cent stamped and self-addressed envelope for the name of a preparation which has proved most satisfactory in correcting oily, blemished skin. I'm sure your daughter will be greatly benefited from my suggestions.

MISS DIXON will be happy to answer questions on beauty upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, sent to her in care of this newspaper.

AT THE CAPITOL

"LADY FROM CHEYENNE"

Loretta Young stars in the first "Western" role of her career in Producer-Director Frank Lloyd's new frontier comedy, "The Lady From Cheyenne", opening Sunday midnight after 12:05 a.m. at the Capitol Theatre.

First of the veteran film maker's productions for Universal, "The Lady From Cheyenne" brings together Miss Young and a distinguished supporting cast that includes Robert Preston, Edward Arnold, Gladys George, Frank Craven, Jessie Ralph, Stanley Fields, Samuel S. Hinds, Willie Best and others. Young, as a naive but determined

Based in part on historical incident, Lloyd's comedy takes place on the Wyoming frontier of 1870. Miss Young ,as a naive but determined young school teacher comes out from Philadelphia to make her fortune and runs afoul a gang of crooked politicians led by Arnold and Preston.

A conflicting romance grows between Miss Young and Preston, and meanwhile she is goaded by mounting anger to break the power of the gang. How she accomplishes this supplies the plot for one of the season's most novel and entertaining screen vehicles.

Lloyd produced and directed "The Lady From Cheyenne" from an original story by Jonathan Finn and Theresa Oaks, with the screen-play by Kathryn Scola and Warren Duff.

Big Films Recalled.

The production values associated with Lloyd's name in such pictures as "Mutiny On the Bounty", "Cavalcade", and "If I Were King" are present in "The Lady From Cheyenne", but this new picture is in striking contrast to Lloyd's earlier efforts, particularly in his use of comedy.

Jack Skirball served as associate producer on the picture, and the photography is by Milton Krasner. Charles Previn, general musical supervisor, served double duty by joining with Sam Lerner in composing a new song, "The Ladies From Paree", which is presented in the film.

The added select short subjects include "Alice In Movieland", a musical novelty, "Goofy Groceries", a colored cartoon and a sportlight "Motorcycle Stunting".

"Topper Returns"

Hal Roach's third picture in his famous Topper series is the brilliantly produced and directed mystery-comedy, called "Topper Returns" which is now on the Belle Theatre screen, under the auspices of United Artists. This latest Roach offering, which is based on an original story by Jonathan Latimer, carries the famous characters created by the late Thorne Smith into further laugh-packed channels of fun and hilarity.

"Topper Returns" is an excellent blend of mystery and comedy, with crackling dialogue, eerie situations and spell-binding action. It was smartly directed by Roy Del Ruth and keeps the audience nailed to its seats with suspense that gallops and is interspersed with punchy humor. Roland Young and Billie Burke are back as Cosmo Topper and his not-so-bright wife, the roles in which they scored in the two preceding Roach hits, "Topper Takes a Trip."

Top-Notch Portrayals

Other top-notch portrayals are contributed by lovely Joan Blondell who is seen as the lovely and shapely spirit which haunts Cosmo Topper and gets him into many hilarious situations. Carole Landis, the luscious blonde, turns in an excellent performance as the romantic lead, while opposite her is flip and easy-going Dennis O'Keefe, the hero of the piece. Eddie Anderson, Jack Benny's famous Rochester, is at his humorous best and appears as the chauffeur who can't learn to like ghosts. Rafaela Ottaino, the screen's feminine "menace," does an excellent bit of first-class frightening of the rest of the cast. H. B. Warner is the suave villain of the piece and comedienne Patsy Kelly contributes a large share of the laughs.

Slick Mystery Plot

Briefly the story of "Topper Returns" concerns the mysterious death of Gail Richards, played by Joan Blondell. Joan has the power to materialize and dematerialize at will, so she turns up to find her own murderer and to haunt the scene of the crime. This she does by visiting the Carrington mansion, a lugubrious looking place where many strange things go on. Joan, however, is no mournful spirit—she is a host, addicted to practical jokes and a liking for champagne. She manages to get plenty of laughs out of being a ghost and to get her host into a series of hard-to-explain situations. "Topper Returns" adds up to a sure-fire hit because it has everything—a swell story, a good sense of humor, a fine cast and production and a suspenseful mystery.

Louis-Buddy Baer Fight

Nearly 230,000 Spectators Jam Way into Major League Parks To Witness Holiday Fixtures

Cards' Winning Streak Halted at Eleven by the Cincinnati Reds

TIGERS WIN TWO

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Memorial Day proved once again that plenty of fans like their baseball in double doses, 229,830 spectators jamming the parks in eight major league cities for the traditional holiday doubleheaders.

It also uncovered the almost forgotten fact that St. Louis Cardinals can be beaten.

The Cardinals captured their first game 4-1 from Cincinnati Reds to extend their winning streak to 11, but finally were nosed out 3-2 in a 13-inning nightcap.

Harry Gumbert won his fourth straight contest as a Cardinal in the opener, pitching four-hit ball and clouting a two-run homer.

This caused the Reds to call on their expert streak-buster Bucky Walters in the second encounter. He held the Cards helpless for eight innings while his mates manufactured a 2-0 lead. Then in the ninth the Cardinals broke out with one of their famous rallies and tied the score. In the overtime Elmer Riddle outpitched Ira Hutchinson till Frank McCormick knocked home the winning run with a double in the 13th.

The second-place Brooklyn Dodgers, who previously had winning streaks of nine and seven games, ran another string to seven by crushing New York Giants 8-0 and 6-2 before the day's biggest crowd, 59,487, at the grounds.

Whitlow Wyatt pitched five-hit ball for his eighth victory in the opener and the Dodgers exploded a five-run rally in the ninth to bag the second game.

Cliff Melton of the Giants allowed no hits between the first and ninth innings of the nightcap, and Luke Hamlin of the Dodgers pitched hitless ball until the sixth. Dolph Camilli hit his 11th homer as part of the Brooklyn uprising in the ninth, although the big blow was Joe Vosmik's single with the bases loaded.

Boston Braves and Philadelphia Phillies broke losing strings at the expense of each other. After losing six straight, the Phils took the first game 6-5 and increased Boston's chain of losses to eight. The Braves took the second game 4-1 with Lefty Art Johnson pitching five-hit ball and fanning eight in his first major league start.

Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates also divided. Triples by Phil Cavarretta and Bob Sturgeon, each with two on, helped the Cubs win the first game 7-6. Then Rip Sewell, who had been belted out of the box in the opener, came back in relief to win the nightcap 5-4, hitting a double and scoring the deciding run himself in the ninth.

Chicago's miraculous White Sox cut down the American League leading Cleveland Indians twice, 7-1 and 5-2, to reduce the margin between them to two games. Old Ted Lyons pitched five-hit ball for his fifth victory against one defeat in the first game and Lefty Thornton Lee produced a six-hitter in the second.

A's Wallop Senators

Philadelphia Athletics walloped Washington Senators twice, 7-4 and 14-4, to extend the Senators' losing streak to a dozen games. Lester McCrabb pitched and batted the A.'s to their first triumph, scattering 12 hits and making three himself to drive in three runs. Johnny Babich hurled six-hit ball for his first decision of the year in the second contest.

Detroit Tigers swept two from St. Louis Browns, 6-5 and 10-6, with a free-hitting attack topped by Rudy York's 11th and 12th homers of the year. Pinky Higgins made four hits in the first affair, a single in the ninth knocking in the deciding run.

Two young pitchers dazzled a sellout crowd of 34,500 at Fenway Park in Boston with fine performances, but the Red Sox came out with nothing better than an even break against New York Yankees. Earl Johnson allowed only five hits in the first game, but one was a homer by Red Rolfe in the fourth and another a single by Frank Crosetti with the bases loaded in the ninth. The Yanks won 4-3.

In the second game Mickey Harris shut out the Bronx Bombers 13-0 on two hits while his mates mauled three Yankee throwers and took advantage of six errors.

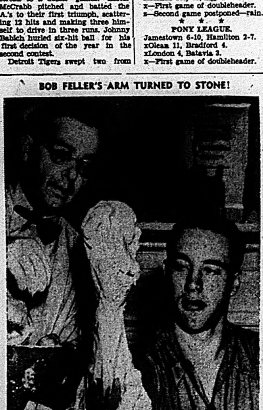
BOB FELLER'S ARM TURNED TO STONE!



Bob Feller's right hand has been turned into "stone," but it won't stop the fireballer's baseball activities. Sculptors poured plaster of paris over it to make a cast. When the cast is finished it will be displayed at the Cleveland Health Museum along with models of Roy Chapman Andrews, Bobby Jones, the Mayo brothers and Rachmaninoff, the pianist. This photo shows Fellers, (R), as a sculptor pours the plaster over his pitching hand.

Trying to stifle the power of Newark Bears, is like trying to seal up a kettle of boiling water, it works for a while but then—boom.

After losing five or six games to Baltimore, the Bears reached the blow-off stage yesterday and exploded against Jersey City Giants to take both ends of the holiday double-header.

The main force of the blast went into the opener, which they won 19-2, cracking out 21 hits in the process. But there was enough energy left to muster a 5-4 triumph in the nightcap, after spotting the J's all their runs in the second inning.

It was the only twin victory of the day and moved the Bears to within a half game of the first-place Montreal Royals, who divided with Buffalo, winning 11-2 after a 5-1 setback.

Rochester Red Wings remained tied for third place with Buffalo when they stopped Toronto Leafs 6-3, after being shut out 3-0 in the opener.

By far the largest crowd of the day, 14,104, attended Ruppert Stadium to watch the traditional Newark-Jersey City slugfest. Every man in the Bears' lineup hit safely at least once in the opener and five of them banged out three hits each. Frank Kelleher's 13th homer and round-tripper by Fred Collins and Don Lang featured the clouting show. Harold Feldman was the victim in the second frame when the Bruins tied the score 4-4 with three runs in the sixth and won out in the ninth on Ziggy Sears' single.

Hutchison Scores Eighth Win

Freddy Hutchinson, Buffalo's ace twirler, doled out four safeties and fanned seven to nail down his eighth conquest against the Royals. His mates backed him up with eight hits, including four home runs, off Tex Carleton and Al Sherer. The shoe was on the other foot in the second frame, however, with Ed Head turning in a five-hitter for his seventh straight victory, while the Royals slammed out 16 hits off Hal White. Jack Graham led the Montreal offensive with a double and two singles to drive in five runs.

John Berly, veteran relief hurler, won his 99th International League victory when the Red Wings pushed across three runs in the sixth to beat Toronto. He relieved Max Surkont with the bases loaded in the top of the sixth with the Wings ahead 3-0 and gave up two hits to tie the score. Porter Vaughan blanked the Wings in first game, striking out nine.

Syracuse Chiefs snapped a nine-game losing streak by capturing the twilight half of a night double-header with Baltimore's Orioles, 2-1, but lost the second game, 7-3.

Ted Kleinhans, making his first relief appearance, hurled only the seventh inning but got credit for his first victory when the Chiefs broke a tie on Lin Storti's single in the home half of the seventh. Rookie Mike Schultz was the victim of poor support in te afterpiece.

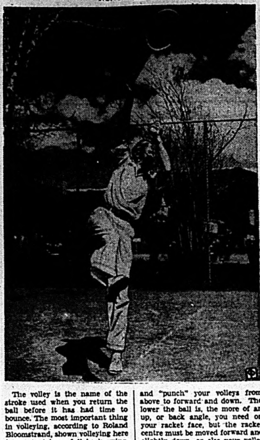
NO. 3—THE SERVICE



The volley is the name of the stroke used when you return the ball before it has had time to bounce. The most important thing in volleying, according to Roland Bloomstrand, shown volleying here is not to take a full back swing. Use the underarm and the wrist and "punch" your volleys from above to forward and down. The lower the ball is, the more of an up, or back angle, you need on your racket face, but the racket centre must be moved forward and slightly down, or else your volley will become a job.

There are several standard services—the flat, the slice, the twist and the reverse. Of these, I'll describe the slice and the flat service because they are reliable and much easier to execute than the others. Start with the racquet and the balls held together. Swing the arm down like a pendulum, the racquet will follow, open up both arms, bend back, throw up the ball slightly to the right and ahead of yourself on the count of one and hit the upper right hand part of the ball with an upward, outward, forward and down motion, in that order — not only down like most beginners seem to think.

The flat serve is quite similar. However, throw the ball more above you and about a foot ahead of yourself on the count of one, hit the upper centre of the ball with a forward and slightly downward motion on the count of two. Use a lot of wrist motion and hit the ball when the arm is normally extended, that is at comfortable reach. Don't throw the ball so low that you have to hit the bottom of it in order to get it over the net. If you do, the ball takes a nice bounce and your opponent will have time to get in position and probably will knock the cover off the ball before you get set for the return. You can hold the racquet handle with the eastern forehand grip or, better still, more towards the backhand grip, letting the wrist take care of the angle of the racquet head if you want more or less spin on the ball.

TWO-MAN VICTORY IN 500-MILE RACE CAUSES TROUBLE

Official Designation of Winner Will Not be Made Until All Protests Are in

SHAW INJURED

Indianapolis, May 31 (AP).—There was some question today as to how formal credit would be distributed for the two-man victory of Mauri Rose and Floyd Davis in the 29th annual 500-mile Memorial Day automobile race.

Rose, a trouble-shooter in an Indianapolis airplane motor plant drove the winning car the last 322½ miles after Davis, a Springfield, Ill., contractor, had qualified and started the car. The winning machine averaged 115.117 miles an hour, the second fastest time in the race's history.

It was the second time since the race first was run in 1911 that the question of dividing credit between drivers of the winning automobile had arisen. In 1924 the problem was solved by designating L. L. Corum and Joe Boyer co-winners after Boyer completed the grind which Corum started.

Ted Doescher, chief steward of the track, said the official designation would be made late today at the expiration of the 24-hour period for filing protests.

Rose's original car, with which he captured the pole position, was forced out by carburetor trouble at 152 miles. Then he shifted to the four-cylinder speedster driven by Davis. Both cars were owned by Lou Moore, Indianapolis, three-time winner and now retired.

Rex Mays, Glendale, Calif., repeated as runner-up with an average of 114.813 and Ted Horn, Paterson, N.J., was third with a speed of 113.864.

Nineteen starters fell by the track side, victims of mechanical trouble or accidents. Everett Saylor of Dayton, O., only first-time starter, was the most severely hurt. He was reported in "fair" condition early today at Methodist Hospital.

Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis, the only three-time winner besides Moore, went out of the contest at 380 miles when his car skidded into an inside retaining wall. He suffered severe back injuries.

The start of the race, witnessed by an estimated 150,000 persons, was delayed an hour by a $150,000 fire which destroyed thirty garages and three racing cars.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 31 (AP) — Mike Jacobs (and he's the boss, boys) has ruled there'll be no Billy Soose-Tony Zale fight to clear up the middleweight muddle—for the simple reason that Soose is pledged to give Ken Overlin a return shot first.

Art Cohn, Oakland Tribune: "Seems to me that a bout in which the Messrs. Louis and Baer heard a bell that did not ring in the first round and Mr. Donovan did not hear a bell that did ring in the sixth, should be called Nobell prize fight."

Caught on the fly.

The Messrs. Rene Cortes, Willward Marshall, Connie Ryan of the Atlanta Crackers don't know it yet, but they'll be Yankee farm hands next summer—probably at Newark —Bob Pastor returns to the fistic wars at Griffith Stadium, Washington, June 16 against Buddy Knox although why the guy should be a drawing card, we don't know.... We ran into Horace Stoneham in a night spot and he swears he's ready to take the rubber off his bankroll any time the other clubs will talk business with Terry .... Truth is, Terry was so high and mighty when he was winning, none of the other clubs want to give him a break.

JOHNNIE BAWDEN SCATTERS 8 HITS TO BEAT RELIANCE

Teams Observe Minute's Silence in Memory of Alex Simpson, Former Player of City

SCORE IS 6-1

With Johnnie Bawden scattering eight hits in a most masterful manner the Corby A. C. hung up their fourth consecutive win in the City Softball League last night by beating the Reliance A. C. 6 to 1. Scoring their lone counter in the initial frame, the Reliance were blanked for the remaining eight innings as the Corby's scored three in the initial frame and coasted in behind Bawden's timely mound efforts.

Halfway through the game both clubs lined the base lines of the diamond and stood at attention as the patrons of the game stood bareheaded to observe a moment's silence in memory of Alex Simpson, a former player in the Belleville Softball League, who lost his life in a motor accident on Thursday. Harry Rollins, Vice-President of the League, requested the observation in memory of a player and friend of all who had known the late Alex Simpson. The ceremony was most impressive.

The Reliance showed little respect for Bawden and the Corby outfit as St. Denis opened the game with a single and raced home on Rowbotham's following double. Gow then walked, but Bawden struck out the next three batters in succession. Grey hit a triple in the second and except for the seventh, when Bawden walked two, the Reliance were never in a position to score. A walk, two errors, hits by Henn and Ronsky gave the Corby's frame. While they added two more in the third on Henn's single, Ronsky's sacrifice and error and Kiser's timely double. The other Corby run was the result of Kiser's second double and Lunberg's hard single to left.

The fielding sensations were provided by the opposing shortstops, Shurleff and Chuck Barriage kicking in with some fine defensive play, while Jimmie Barriage's catch for the last out of the game was also in the feature class. Bawden struck out ten Reliance batters.

VIKINGS SUFFER SECOND LOSS AS SWACO WIN

A three-way tie for first place in the Belleville Girls' Softball League was created last night when the SWACO gals pounded out a 22 to 16 win over the Viking lassies at the Armouries.

The game was a ding-dong affair with the Vikings taking a decided lead in the fifth when they batted around the ring and scored nine runs. Ken Watt's crowd rallied later and finally were forced to score six runs in the eighth to win. It was the Vikings second loss in as many starts.

The "east end" gals opened the game with an avalanche of base hits that gave them runs, but Mike Powers' Vikings came back strong to knot the score, but the Vikings could not stand up under the heavy barrage of subsequent base hits, as Rita Rabbie was given extremely poor support in the field. The SWACO nine carried potent bats into the game as they scored in every inning.

The Line-ups:

Vikings—Adams, Cook, G. Adams, Fletcher, Maker, V. Cook, M. Adams, P. Zebedee, Rabbie and M. Zebedee.

SWACO—Calden, Stead, D. Rowbotham, Corneal, Langman, Kelleher, Fralick, P. Rowbotham and Richardson.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Commenting "it was a gay life while it lasted," J. Roy Stockton of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch recalls the great days with the Cardinals when Dizzy Dean was the main attraction, and declares baseball might well mourn Jay Hanna's passing from active duty.

"Baseball is mourning the passing of Dizzy Dean from the major league picture as an active player and it does well to mourn," declares Stockton. "There will never be another Dizzy. They broke the mold when he was born. There will be other great pitchers, but no Dizzy Dean. There will be other great sluggers, but never another Babe Ruth.

"Dizzy probably feels a bit sad about it all, but we can see the twinkle in his eye when he was informed that from now on, instead of pitching, he would coach young pitchers, hit fungoes, throw in batting practice, work in the bullpen and represent the Cubs at banquets and speaking engagements. Dizzy will love that. He has had a lot of fun out of baseball and he'll have a lot more. And his earnings, it seems, will go right along. And if there ever should be anything to worry about, somebody else will have to do the worrying."

Sports scribes throughout Eastern Ontario are lamenting the sudden decline and practical disappearance of baseball from our midst, which is more pronounced this year than ever. Actually Kingston has the only senior ball club between Hamilton and the Quebec border, Smith's Falls excepted. For instance Bunny Morganson, of the Toronto Telegram, says the abdication of certain lightweights in the mental departments of baseball would do much towards solving the trouble. George "Soup" Campbell, Oshawa, blames the hard-hearted manner of O.B.A. officials in the seats of the mighty, who ruled too sternly when clubs tried to import in an effort to save the game. Down in Kingston they actually saw the light some three years ago and are reaping a bountiful harvest with some good senior ball in the Interprovincial League today. However, in Belleville there are many angles, the ballsters of old literally milked the baseball cow dry and coupled with failure to encourage the youngsters, helped to bring about the local conditions—no baseball whatsoever.

It was with profound regret we learned of the unfortunate motor accident that took the life of Alex Simpson, well known Belleville and district ball player, yesterday. Alex Simpson made a host of friends wherever he happened to hang his hat, Belleville and Tweed being no exception to this rule. To his surviving widow and two saml children will go the sincere regret and sympathy of a host of friends in this district.

Although the Washington Boxing Commission disposed of the Buddy Baer protest in the summary fashion expected, there are fight fans who would appreciate seeing just when and how Louis socked Baer after this alleged gong-ringing incident. For those really interested, the exclusive Baer-Louis fight pictures will be shown at the Belle theatre over the week end, in 18-minutes of thrill—packed action, including Louis being knocked through the ropes.

Corbys have played every club in the Senior City Softball loop and have yet to be defeated. Last night they beat the Reliance 6-1 to ring up their fourth consecutive win and in beating the "planemakers," pushed that club down into a tie with Point Anne for second place. The Reliance welcomed Johnnie Bawden and company in quite a prolific manner collecting two hits a walk, but unfortunately the only run of the game, as Bawden struck out three in succession that frame and duplicated this feat in the eighth, as he scattered eight hits well. Ray Smith hurled good ball, but could not expect to win on one run, as the earned run count was exactly four to one against him. Perhaps if the Reliance nine would drive as much fight against their opposition as they direct towards the umpires, their efforts would be more prolific.

Do you remember when Carl Hubbell's brilliant 24-game winning streak over a two-season stretch was snapped by Brooklyn Dodgers at New York four years ago today. The New York southpaw was blasted off the mound in the fourth inning and the Dodgers went on to win 10-3.

Although the torrid St. Louis Cardinals had only lost nine of their first 39 games played this season, fans should not become too optimistic over the Red Birds. For instance in 1925 the New York Giants made a somewhat similar start, winning 21 and losing six, then going to 23-7? at which time the Pittsburgh Pirates were struggling along with 13 won and 15 lost. But the Pirates won the pennant by eight and a half games. In 1921, the Pirates made an even faster start, winning 25 while losing six, at which time the Giants were in second place with 21 won and 11 lost. New York won the pennant in a close race.

Some real lusty hitting was seen at the Armouries last evening when the SWACO gals pounded out a 22 to 16 win over Mike Powers' Vikings to create a triple-tie for the leadership of the girls' league. However, two of the leaders clash the next time out when the Big-Z lassies meet the Deacon gals.

SPORT SPICE—It took two men to win the 29th Memorial Day automobile race at Indianapolis yesterday, Floyd Davis of Springfield, Ill. and the hometown driver Mauri Rose collaborated. . . . Rose drove Davis' car over the finishing line like a winner with an average speed of 115 MPH. . . . Wilbur Shaw, who is the idol of all "Soap Box Derby" kiddies, crashed at the 380-mile mark while attempting to become the only three-time winner. . . . Shaw was well on his way to that goal when his crack-up came. . . . The local softball clubs observed a moment's silence in respect for Alex. Simpson last night, which was indeed timely. . . . After the Cardinals had won their 11th consecutive game yesterday, the Reds snapped their winning streak. . . . The race in the American League is really tightening, the White Sox gained two full games on the Indians yesterday and the other clubs in the junior loop are going behind Jimmie Dykes' outfit to find out what is holding 'em up. . . . It could be good pitching. . . . That's something really worth while, if you don't believe us ask any of the local softball teams that have to face Ha[illegible] and Bawden. . . . See what [illegible] boys will have.

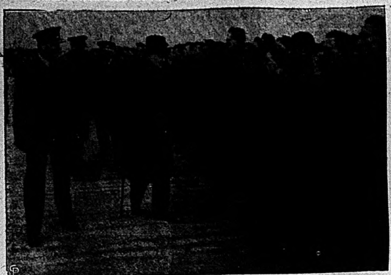
MR. CHURCHILL INSPECTS BRITISH ARMY'S PARACHUTISTS



England too has parachute troops. Drilling in England are an unknown number of soldiers to whom goes the assignment of landing by parachute on enemy territory or in areas out of reach of the land or sea forces. Except for a brief foray against important sites in Italy, there have been no reports of use of parachute troops by the British army as yet. However, they are being trained and equipped for service when needed. Here Prime Minister Churchill inspects a number of the paratroops just after they made a practice landing.

Home-Grown Strawberries Featured On City Market

The first of the current season's fresh home-grown strawberries were featured on the Saturday produce market, further enhancing the appearance of many lovely displays of seasonal buds and flowers, as well as banks of green transplanting stocks.

Strawberries, the first to be offered on the local market in May in the memory of some of the oldest vendors, were offered at 35c per quart box or at 20c per pint. Vendors claimed that the season had opened too early for farmers as planting in many cases had not yet been completed.

Prices for other lines of produce held at practically the same level as the previous week's quotations with eggs retailing at 25c for top grade, and down to 20c per dozen for mediums. Butter sold at 35c per pound with chicken offerings being somewhat larger than usual, it being possible to purchase lovely well-finished birds at $1.25 each, or at approximately 25c per pound. Broilers were also offered in greater quantities and of better quality than hitherto, top prices being $1.50 per pair and ranging downward to 75c per pair.

Spinach was offered at 25c per peck, asparagus at 15c, 20c and 25c per pound, according to quality. Radishes, rhubarb, onions were 5c per bunch and lettuce 5c per head. Potatoes sold at the usual $1 per bag, honey at 45c for four pound cans and $1 per ten pound pail. A few vendors offered last year's carrots at 25c per basket.

Lovely first grade Delicious apples retailed readily at 50c per peck, Spys at the same figure, and cooking apples at $1 per bushel.

The fish offering was rather slim, only lake trout and whitefish being displayed and at 25c and 22c per pound respectively.

Possibly the greatest offering of young pigs to be seen on the local market this season was in evidence, it being possible to purchase almost unlimited numbers of porkers ranging in age from six to seven weeks' old up to sizeable shoats. Prices ranged from $5 each and upwards. One vendor who had a truck load of young porkers was asking $225 for the lot.

Ickes Gets Job Of Keeping Oil And Gas Flowing

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hyde Park, N.Y., May 31—(AP)—The appointment of Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes to the job of keeping gasoline and oil flowing in adequate supply for United States civilian and defence needs was announced today by the temporary White House.

Ickes, Federal oil administrator for years, received the new title of "petroleum co-ordinator for national defence." President Roosevelt, in a letter dated Wednesday and announced today, instructed Ickes to make "specific recommendations" for "action which is necessary or desirable."

As problems for immediate action the President listed:

1. Development, production and utilization of reserves of crude oils and natural gas that are of "strategic importance both in quality and location."

2. Elimination or reduction of cross hauling of oil products, expansion of transportation facilities, and more efficient use of existing transportation and storage facilities.

3. Balancing of refining operations to obtain maximum yields of specific products, most economical use of raw materials and efficient production and distribution.

4. Elimination of the drilling of unnecessary wells in proven fields and of "other unnecessary activities and equipment."

Ickes' recommendations are to be submitted to federal agencies—particularly the office of production management and the office of price administration and civilian supply, to state officials, and to "any appropriate industry or part thereof."

SHEEP KILLINGS ALARM FARMERS

Five Lambs and One Sheep Killed Presumably by Wolves

Farmers residing on the seventh concession of Tyendinaga Township are alarmed regarding the killing of a number of sheep in that district of late. Six sheep were found dead on the farm of Thomas Shannon this week and three others are reported to be missing. Farmers throughout the area are convinced that wolves are responsible.

Provincial Police investigated the killings on Friday and held a night vigil at Mr. Shannon's farm last night, but no appearance of wolves rewarded them. Mr. Shannon reported that five lambs and one sheep had been killed and three other young lambs disappeared from his corral this week.

Provincial Constables Hendren and McKenzie investigated the killings on Friday while Sergeant Bush and Constable Hendren of the O.P.P. took up positions surrounding the Shannon farm and kept an all-night watch on Friday night, but no attacks were made upon Mr. Shannon's flocks. Farmers throughout that district claim they have seen what looks to be a small pack of wolves at a distance, but the animals disappear before the farmers can arm themselves with rifles and shot guns.

DAIRYMEN FINED

Failure to pay attention to repeated warnings of Department of Agriculture, Dairy Branch inspectors, has resulted in the conviction and imposition of heavy fines on four dairy owners of the province within the last month. Dairy Inspector Charles Kennedy stated today.

The men pleaded guilty to wrapping second grade butter in "first grade" wrappers, and in one case paid a fine of $50 and costs.

Inspector Kennedy stated that rigid enforcement of government regulations regarding the wrapping of butter will be maintained, and added that in future, warnings will not be given.

MIGHT OF FLEET

(The admiralty has announced the Rodney was detached from a convoy to engage in the successful hunt for the Bismarck.)

To Train in U.S.

The varied contingent of air, sea and land fighters included the first group of Royal Air Force men to arrive for training in the United States under the plan announced at Washington on Thursday for the training of 8,000 Britons in the next year. These men, most of them destined for service in air crews, did not know their destination in the United States but some thought they would be going south. They said the whole project had been shrouded in secrecy.

With them came another group of R.A.F. men who will be trained in Canada under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and a number of instructors.

"Waifs" Arrive

Among the arrivals were members of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, some bound for the United States and some for Bermuda. Their mission was secret. They are believed to be the first group of "Waifs" to come to North America.

There was a batch of trans-Atlantic ferry pilots, members of the fleet air arm coming to Canada for training, British soldiers to man defensive guns on merchant ships and some merchant seamen.

Aside from their nearness to the Hood-Bismarck clash, the passengers said their trip was uneventful.

BISMARCK

The 2,400-total would be approximately 1,000 more than a 35,000-ton British battleship would carry for normal operations, and speculation was stirred that extra forces might have been aboard for one of the following reasons:

1. To man prize ships the Bismarck and her accompanying cruiser Prinz Eugen were expected to capture and send back to Germany;

2. To provide garrisons at Dakar or other French West African ports and perhaps lead Frenchmen there against Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French strongholds;

3. To furnish the personnel for a secret submarine base somewhere in the Atlantic.

Any Bismarck Plan Now Smashed

If there were such a plan, British sources declared, the sinking of the Bismarck smashed it. They said the 10,000-ton Prinz Eugen would be unable to carry it out alone, even if she continued to elude capture or sinking.

(By EDDY GILMORE)

A British Port, May 31 (AP). — The battleship Bismarck, pride of the German Navy, was crowded with 2,400 officers and men, 400 of them cadets under 20 years of age, when she sank under the blows of the British Navy, a German survivor of the Bismarck was quoted as saying to his rescuers.

"That seems like an awful lot," said one of the officers aboard a British ship which has just returned from helping sink the Nazi conqueror of the battle cruiser Hood.

Approximately 100 officers and men were rescued from the Bismarck whose normal complement was estimated at about 1,500 in previous accounts.

It was a case of "Remember the Hood," the British officers said, and a German survivor gave a brief but dramatic story of how well they avenged the biggest ship in the world.

"It was hell," this prisoner was quoted as saying. "Great holes burst out in us and flames spread around in every direction. We'd run this way and then something else would hit.

"It was hideous."

"He Didn't Miss."

The officer who "pulled the trigger" that spelled the final doom to the 35,000-ton German battleship lounged against a table balanced a teacup delicately and said calmly that the event had been the greatest thrill in his life.

"When we came up the Bismarck seemed to be having the time of her life with some of our other ships," he said on his arrival in port.

"I pressed my finger on the trigger," he said, when the captain told him to fire.

"What was your feeling?" I asked him.

"Well," he laughed, "I kept thinking what a bloody fool the fellows back at school would say I was if I missed."

"From where I was standing," another officer said, "it looked as if clouds of dust were rising from the Bismarck. Oh, he didn't miss."

"We got around to the side of her and let her have a third shot," the gunnery officer continued.

The Bismarck then turned slowly over on her side, he said adding: "It was the most amazing sight of my life. She was really lovely.

"We could see her mainmast hanging like a mass of vines and her turrets were spinning around. Her guns lay about in a mess."

Another officer took up the description.

"We were below playing tit-tat-too when the guns went off," he said, "but you can bet we got up fast."

The sea was a mess of Nazi sailors, he said.

"Every available man was throwing ropes over to them and we must have lost thousands of fathoms of rope as we dragged them up."

"One German," the officer said, "had his arm almost blown off. I saw another between two of our men being dragged along the deck, and then they dropped him. I came up and asked them why."

He said that the men had replied that the German sailor was dead.

"Two of us got to work on him," the officer continued, "and, giving him first aid, brought him around. He was told to speak English, and he told plenty about what happened on the Bismarck"

Here another officer broke in with: "You got to say this for her, though. She never struck her ensign. She kept it up for the whole time and stuck to her guns the best she was able."

"Yes," said the first officer. "Another prisoner told me he was amazed at how accurate our fire was.

"You know I'm no gunner, so I can talk about it. The sea that day was blowing up in a furious gale, and it was very cold. It is a great tribute to our marksmanship."

"Just because it was what we wanted," said another officer, "we kept remembering the Hood."

Heard Nazi Sub Near

Another officer took up the tale of the German whose arm had nearly been blown off and explained that "when he died we gave him a full naval funeral."

He said that British seamen lined up on one side of the vessel's deck with a line of German prisoners facing them from the other side.

"Overhead the wind shrieked," the officer recalled. "It was a moving occasion. A few of the Germans gave the Nazi salute."

"While we were pulling in men, we learned of the possible presence of a German submarine," he added, "so we had to stop and get going. We did."

He said that there must have been 200 or more Germans in the water at that time and that "one of our ships got some of them, and I imagine others might have got some."

OBSERVER GIVES

the quarry.

It did not get completely dark at any time that night.

We sighted the enemy at 6 a.m. when a curtain of snow suddenly lifted.

For some minutes our ships sped on toward the Germans to shorten the range.

They, too, turned in toward their pursuers and the world's biggest warships were thundering toward each other at a combined speed of probably more than sixty miles an hour.

The tension of waiting for the battle to begin became acute.

The "open fire" order was given by signal.

Almost simultaneously, orange-gold flame burst with a roar from the Hood's forward guns. Within three seconds puffs of black smoke shot out from the Bismarck as she opened fire.

The Prince of Wales' guns then began firing. Dense clouds of yellow cordite smoke enveloped her bridge. She was to the left of the Hood two or three hundred yards away, and still surging forward on a parallel course.

Fountains of water shot up in her wake—first about 100 yards behind her and then only 50 yards astern.

The Hood thundered on and then suddenly she was hit.

A shell, or shells, appeared to fall just forward of one of her after 15-inch gun turrets, and great flames and heavy black smoke burst from her.

The Hood continued to fire and still raced forward.

"Sickening Sight."

What happened next was a strangling, sickening sight. There was a terific explosion and the whole of a vast ship was enveloped in a flash of flame and smoke, which rose high into the air in the shape of a giant mushroom.

Sections of funnels masts and other parts of the ship hurtled hundreds of feet into the air and some of them fell on our ship.

The Hood's bow tilted vertically into the air and within three or four minutes she was gone entirely.

A destroyer was diverted to rescue work and managed to pick up three of the ship's company—two seamen and a midshipman.

All this time the Prince of Wales continued pouring shells, at the Bismarck. More than once spurts of water showed she was straddled.

Again shells from the Bismarck crashed near the Prince of Wales, but she came out of the battle with little damage.

Then the Bismarck turned away to be pursued all that day and night and the next day over the Atlantic at top speed.

Twice during the night the Prince of Wales fired salvoes and aircraft made attacks.

Finally there came the dramatic message that the cruiser Dorsetshire had torpedoed the Bismarck.
